Several Cars on Georgia Road Almost Totally Destroyed in Crash Sunday Morning Near Decatur.

MRS. GEORGE MATHIESON INJURED IN COLLISION

Mrs. R. T. Cresse, of Charlotte, Also Reported Badly Hurt -, Freight Engineer Says Watch Was Fast.

One negro was killed, fourteen passengers were injured, two seriously, and several freight and passen ger cars were almost totally destroyed Sunday morning about 6 o'clock when northbound freight train No. 19, of the Georgia railroad, crashed into the rear end of passenger train No. 3 as the latter train was pulling out of Alta Loma, not far from Decatur.

The dead negro is Max Smith, of Lithonia.
The seriously injured are:

Mrs. George Mathieson, residence Peachtree road, Atlanta, severely bruised and cut about the head, with internal injuries, the extent of which cannot be determined for twenty-four

Mrs. R. T. Cresse, of Charlotte, N C., daughter-in-law of Coleman E. Creese, 1036 Piedmont avenue, badly cut on head and body, and internal Injuries are feared.

Freight Strikes Passenger. The accident occurred just as the passenger train was getting under after the regular stop. cars had gone scarcely one hundred yards when the freight train swept around the curve a short distance south of the station, and before the engineer could throw on the brakes the heavy freight engine, followed by twenty heavily loaded cars, crashed into the rear end of the slowlymoving passenger train at the rate of 20 miles an hour. The great freight engine pierced through the end of the Pullman car as though tissue paper, boring into the car until the pilot and smokestack were entirely covered by the Pull-man's roof. Mrs. Mathieson and Mrs. Cresse were the only passengers in the rear of the last car, and all others escaped with a few scratches and bruises. It will probably remain a mystery as to how the negro met his death, as he was in the first coach of the passenger train, which carried five cars, and was the only person in the car who was injured. It is pre-sumed that he was walking down the aisle of the car, and when the train was struck was thrown forward against the arm of a seat, crushing

By 11 o'clock this morning-and perhaps earlier-Solicitor Hugh Dorsey will have finished his address in the case of Leo M. These are the principles on which President Wilson has based his attitude of non-recognition of the Huerta government, set up through the overthrow by arms of Francisco Madero, the legally elected ruler of the country. It is to secure a return to constitutional government that the efforts are predicated and the resignation of Huerta therefore has been made the chief point in the American roposals for a peaceful settlement of not been captured.

Secretary Bryan had a brief conerence with President Wilson durng the day, discussing the Mexican ituation. Mr. Bryan announced that the situation remained unchanged. It is expected in many quarters here, owever, that the Huerta government ay withdraw its rejection of the American proposals and submit a new basis of negotiations. This action admittedly would defer the reading of the president's message.

That President Huerta will make public tomorow the correspondence between the two countries is now a mat-ter of doubt, and in official quarters is thought possible that President Wilson will advance the data for the presentation of his message, notwithstanding the announcement of a 48hour limit. No news of such determin-ation on the part of the president of the United States to force General Huerta's hand in this way has reached the embassy, however. Rumors continue that Huerta is still considering resigning, possibly in fa-vor of General Trevino, but there is no sound basis for this assertion. Those close to the executive insist he will not alter the stand he has taken, and will await Washington's next move. The opinion is expressed here that there will be a swift severance of all peaceable relations if congress is giv-

Senor Gamboa, minister of foreign af-fairs, denies the reports that Mexico will make any proposal to the United States, but expresses the hope that Washington might reply to Mexico's note, rejecting the American demands.

He Declares Powerful Influvences Are Being Brought to Bear to Quash Impeachment Proceedings.

Macon, Ga., August 24.—(Special.) Declaring that powerful influences are being brought to bear to quash the impeachment proceedings against Judge Emory Speer, of the United States district court for the southern district of Georgia, Colonel W. A. Huff, whose charges against Judge Speer in connection with his long pending bankruptcy case were largely responsible for the action of the department of justice in investigating Judge Speer, today sent a 275-word telegram to Congressman C. L. Bart-lett demanding that he be given an opportunity to be heard and to filadditional charges if those already before the house judiciary committee are not sufficient.

"From what I see by the latest newspaper reports it looks to me as though the whole matter is about to be hushed up," said Colonel Huff to-day. "I think I am entitled to be heard, and since Judge Speer has requested a postponement until fall, there is plenty of time for me to file the additional charges I refer to. I have been told that men with power-ful influence have been deluging the Georgia delegation in the house with telegrams in Judge Speer's behalf, characterizing the investigation as muckraking. If the attorney general has not been able to find enough charges to impeach Judge Speer I can supply him with what is lacking." addition to the telegram sent to Judge Bartlett yesterday Colonel Huff wrote Congressman Hughes a letter Saturday explaining his position and

The Last Week of "Blue Tag" Furniture Prices

When the doors of the furniture store are closed next Saturday at 1 o'clock, "Blue Tag" furniture prices will be a thing of the past.

So this must be Opportunity Week.

We have no desire to cry "wolf," but the fact remains, and it is a very important fact to those who have a sense of economy, that within the space of this week the furniture that will make your home the cozy, comfortable place vou would have it may be bought to better advantage than will be possible in many months.

The "Blue Tag" savings are real and genuine, as real and genuine as the furniture itself. Such prices could not be maintained throughout the year. No store could afford them. And so, what housekeeper can afford to miss them now, while they do exist?

Whether it be the bedroom, the dining room, the living room, the library or all of these that need furniture, make selections right now and profit.

LOOKING FORWARD.

As strange as it may seem, few people live in the present. Those under a certain age-which differs with individuals-live in the future. Those who have passed that certain age-whatever it may be-live in the past.

"Let's live while we are livin'," exclaimed the gaunt hunter, to his lean wife and ten hungry children, the day he brought home one small gray squirrel. And they did. They cooked that squirrel, and ate every bite of it. It is all right to live while we are living, provided we live within our means. The present is for use, not ab-use.

"Let's talk over old times," suggests one comrade to another. And they do. In winter, in some sunny nook out of the path of the wind, or in summer, in some shady spot away from the noise and the dust, they chuckle over the pangs of hunger that were so real back in the sixties.

The present flying, and the past gone, forever, what is left for us? The future is left-the big, boundless future. And what does the future hold in store for us? Hamlet tried to guess. We do not know it all. Then, what can we do? We can look for-

Look forward for what? Now, that depends, pretty largely, upon what we are now doing. If, at present, we are squandering money, health and character, we may look forward to poverty, disease, and disgrace. If, on the other hand, we are careful of money, health and character, we may reasonably look forward to better times.

An uninteresting past is bad enough, an unprofitable present worse, but a blank future, a hopeless future, a future that contains nothing pleasant to which we can look forward, is the worse thing a mortal

One of the greatest blessings of this mysterious and sometimes drab-colored and philosophy-shredded thing that we call life, is that each individual can pretty well determine today what to expect tomorrow.

TO ENGLAND'S SHAME.

The love of money is, today, the root of at least two great evils in England. The first and greatest of these evils is the forcing of oplum from India upon China; the second is the utterly inconsistent attitude of England toward the United States in regard to the Boxer Indemnity.

The situation is just this: England, possibly in good faith, made a misleading promise to China in regard to the opium traffic from India. Then, when the antiopium deputation called upon England's secretary of state for foreign affairs, citing the generous act of the United States in regard to the indemnity, and suggesting a similar course for England with respect to the opium traffic, they received an acid note to the effect that the United States had played a sharp Yankee trick in remitting a part of the American claims, and then curried favor with China.

If we had declined our share of the indemnity it would have reflected upon the integrity of the six nations receiving more than we did and the five receiving less. In accepting it, we felt that we were imposing upon a poor, feeble nation. We had to make the best of a delicate situation. This we did by surrendering a part of our share to China, to be used for the benefit of Chinese students in the United States.

If Sir Edward Grey, England's foreign secretary, cares to know of the moderation and even the indulgence of the United States toward China, at the close of the he has a house to put her in

Boxer insurrection, and of Great Britain's insisting, with the other members of the triple alliance and with Germany, upon signal punishment of certain Chinese officials, he can find the story full and faithfully told in the "Encyclopedia Brittanica," by Sir Valentine Chirol, an English authority on modern Chinese history. But what has all this to do with England's opium traffic? Not a thing! It is simply the straw at which the national conscience of Great Britain is grasping.

The shameful opium situation is this: Under a revised treaty, 1916 was to see the end of India's traffic with China in opium. The consignment of chests was to be gradually reduced from year to year. This, notwithstanding the declaration of Mr. Montagu that the opium traffic was already dead and would remain so if China would rid herself of her indigenous poppy.

Yuan Shi Kai hates opium. Years ago he made opium smoking in the army a capital offense. Recently he has employed large bodies of troops in rooting the plants out of the fields in opium growing sections. Great provinces have been swept clean of the poppy. China has much to do yet in suppressing the cultivation and use of opium, but she has steadfastly shown her sincerity and England should keep the promise made.

While claiming that she is abiding by her agreement, England, the enlightened nation, dealing with a poor, struggling people, is evading the agreement by means of silly subterfuge. While opium is not being shipped from India into China, England is demanding that $40,000,000 worth of Indian opium that Hindu-Hebrew dealers had accumulated in Shanghai and Hong Kong, before the agreement, be now admitted for retail in China. China has offered to bear the expense of shipping the optum back to India. England refuses the offer Lieutenant General Chang, publicly pleading for his people, says China would buy the opium and burn it if she had the money.

When England is trying to force the sale of poison in China, against the will and the law of China, she is doing so to their sorrow and her shame.

CODDLING CRIMINALS.

Chairman Randall, the new head of the prison commission of Massachusetts, proposes a prison system which is new and somewhat revolutionary:

"Persons convicted of crime," declares Mr. Randall, "should be dealt with by the courts no further than the point where a court finds that a particular individual committed a specified criminal act

The object of imprisoning such convicted persons should be first to change the antisocial temper of those who can be changed, and to send them back into society as soon as it is safe for society, through their changed attitude, for them to be at large.

"The second object should be to remove permanently from the social freedom they have abused, those convicted persons who, through various defects, are incapable of keeping out of crime when they are at large; and, in addition, those who cannot e persuaded to give up, genuinely, their anti-social attitude. "Sentences for particular terms, or to particular institutions should not be imposed by a judge when a person has been onvicted of committing a crime or mis-

"All convicted persons should be turned over to a commission charged with full responsibility for their care and custody under an indeterminate sentence, with authority to release them at such time and on such terms, and after such discipline and moral education as would substantially guarantee their future harmlessness to society.'

In support of his suggestion that the judge should be relieved of fixing the sentence, Chairman Randall argues that, for the judge, it is an unscientific duty. He is forced to do a work, promptly and often with insufficient data, that could better be done by a commission who would place the convicted person under observation and examination, and dispose of him as seemed best. Under the present plan the judge fixes a sentence upon a man whom he does not know, and upon whom he cannot tell in advance what effect the imprisonment will have; sentences him for a fixed number of years, and to an institution with which he (the judge) may not be familiar.

In a further discussion of his plan Chairman Randall says:

"The courts seem to have a higher appre ciation of the maxim that it is better ninety-nine guilty men to escape than for one innocent man to suffer, than they have for the fact that if ninety-nine guilty men do escape more than one innocent man will

Mr. Randall does not propose that his state dispense with her judges and lawyers, whom he regards as experts in their important and necessary work. The determining whether or not an unlawful act, involving serious moral turpitude, has been committed, and if so by whom, he would leave to the machinery of the court. After that he would place the convicted person in the hands of a commission with time and ability to distinguish between badness and madness, weakness and viciousness. Finally, he would have a series of custodial asylums, reformatories, prison camps and hospitals, to which prisoners could be assigned according to age, sex, crime and misdemeanor, allowing the prisoner to be transferred from one place of detention to another as occasion might demand or good conduct warrant. This all sounds very nice, but there is ots of moonshine about it. The sentimentalists are devoting more time to the criminal than to his victim, and at the present rate it will not be long before we reach the period where a chromo will be awarded for every violation of the law.

A Story of the Moment By WALT MASON, The Famous Prose Poet

ODIUS COMPARISONS

"I do wish," exclaimed Mrs. Turnover, "that you could get up energy enough to use the garden hose for an hour every morning. The lawn is burning up and the grass roots will die, and the flower beds are already near ruined. You sit on the porch every morning reading your silly newspapers when you should be sprinkling the lawn. Mr. Casowary, across the street, gives his lawn a good soaking every morning, and see how green and thrifty it is!"

"I deplore your habit of holding up the neighbors as shining examples, my dear, said Turnover, patiently, as he cut the leaves of a new book. "Comparisons are odious, as Shakespeare or Ella Wheeler or somebody said, and they are doubly odious when used by a wife and mother, with the intention of placing her husband in a bad light. No husband is perfect. Go where you will, on land or on sea, and you'll never see a married man who measures up to all the requirements.

"Choosing a husband is about as risky a business as buying a horse. Every horse has something the matter with it. If it isn't blind in one eye, it is deaf in one ear; if it hasn't a spavin on its hind leg, it has a ringbone on the front one; if it doesn't shy at the automobiles it has fits when it encounters a traction engine. The wise man, when he buys a horse, expects some blemish to be thrown in, and is thankful if it isn't too bad a one.

"The wise woman, when she secures a husband, should sustain her soul by a similar brand of philosophy. She can't reasonably expect a perfect husband. If her man hasn't a glass eye, he is pretty sure to wear a celluloid teeth; if he doesn't whittle in the kitchen you may expect him to smoke in the

"I am glad to learn that Mr. Casowary has one redeeming feature. It is encouraging to-know that he lavishes the wealth of his affection upon the lawn, and sees 'hat the grass is kept green. A woman with such a husband should be happy, and I don't wonder that you envy Mrs. Casowary. Yet the truth is, my dear, that her husband doesn't stack up very high in this town. Peo-ple say that he is an idle, trifling individual. and that it would be as waste of good powder to blow him into space. They don't know how diligent he is with the garden hose, or they might render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and admit that Casowary is an ornament to society.

"He is by nature and training a carpenter, and it is the general theory that he is an excellent one, and if he would work at his trade his family might bask in the lap of luxury. But he won't work at his trade, and so his family lack the opportunity to bask in the lap aforesaid. In the summer he goes fishing nearly every day, and comes back home in the evening with twenty-three cents' worth of fish. Had he worked at his trade while he was fishing, he'd have earned $3 or $4, and it wouldn't have been necessary for Mrs. Casowary to take in washing.

"In the winter this excellent man, whose achievements with the garden hose have made his name a household word, takes a shotgun and goes hunting rabbits. He travels on foot all over the country, and if he has particularly good luck, he brings home rabbits to the value of eighteen cents. Of course, when we deduct the cost of the ammunition, the profit seems insignificant, but let not ambition mock his useful toil. my beloved. Let us remember that in the use of the garden hose he has few equals and no superiors. "I have my faults. I know, but I sub mit that I don't feed my family on fish all summer and rabbits all winter, and I have never expected the wife of my bosom to take in washing or do custom scrubbing-But Mrs. Turnover had left the room and the door slammed after her.

Bright Business Outlook.

(Geo. E. Kones,in New York Evening Post.) Is it not time for business men to take ourage and proceed with vigor to work out manifest destiny? I think so, and among others, for the following reasons:

The public mind, which periodically has been disturbed by fear of a democratic ministration, has become convinced of the wisdom and quiet strength of the president, Mr. Wilson, and his ability to handle his party and secure enactment of laws which for one or two decades have been as inevitable as was some years ago the emancipation of the slaves-inevitable because the country had outgrown the tariff and currency laws. The country has braced itself for the change, and fear has largely given place to confidence. The settlement of the Balkan war without disturbing the concert of action of the powers will cause the hoarded gold to be speedily returned to the channels of trade

The production of gold throughout the world is at its maximum so far. The preparedness of every one for a tight money market will in all probability prevent the expected happening. The desire of the administration is to aid in moving the crops, not after a crisis, but before one. It is altogether probable that a lessened tariff will lead to greater efficiency in ufacturing, and consequently to larger exports, as well as to larger imports. $4,250,000,000 foreign trade of this year is likely to be largely exceeded.

The railroad returns give evidence of an enormous volume of business done while every one has been afraid of his shadow.
If this continues, the demands of labor can be successfully met.

The price of pig iron apparently struck bottom about two months ago. The stock market looks as if it, too, had struck botton at about the same time, and it has an almost invariable way of discounting the future by six or eight months before the change is apparent to the individual observer.

With the elimination of most of the evils that have beset us and the vanishing of hose of the imagination, it is my belief that the restless spirit of the American people will break forth in renewed activity

The large question to what extent the floating capital of the world has become fixed is one most difficult to gauge, as we have but so lately entered the present era of colossal commercialism, as well as that of extravagance-extravagance, not alone of he few who can afford it, but of the masses who cannot. The reserve strength with us has not the subdivision of the soil and the stocking of the French, nor yet their untiring industry, but we are alert, intent and ready of resource.

The World's Mysteries

Was there a "Lady of Malta?" Does the present King George of England have a morganatic wife? Many sensational stories to that effect appeared in print from time to time during the last twenty years, and they were revived with especial force about the time of his accession to the throne three years ago. The story that was circulated was to the effect that the present King George, when he was a young prince serving in the British navy, married the daughter of a distinguished officer of the navy, while his vessel was stationed at Malta, and it was further stated that the woman who was given the name of "The Lady of Malta" was living at the time when he married Princess Mary of Teck in 1893. According to the story there were two children born to this union, who have been handsomely provided for by the reigning house. While some of the stories failed to mention who was "The Lady of Malta," others proclaimed that she was Mary. the eldest daughter of Admiral Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, whose rapid promotion and high favor at court subsequent to George's marriage to Queen Mary are attributed to his pliancy and discretion in connection with his daughter's royal entanglement.

But is there any truth in the story? In June, 1910, a writer who was connected with the English diplomatic service wrote and had printed a long article in which he branded the story as containing not a word of truth. and that the "Lady of Malta" was a creature of the imagination.

To begin with, Admiral Culme Seymour was in command of the British naval force in the Pacafic durig the whole of the time that George spent in the Mediterranean—that is to say from January, 1886, until the late fall of 1888. Besides, neither Lady Seymour nor her daughters, the eldest of whom was only 15 years in 1886, and not 18 when George left the Mediterranean service, were within a thousand miles of Malta during the period in which the prince's romantic marriage is said to have taken place. Moreover, the daughter of Admiral Sir Michael Culme-Seymour whose name was so freely used as having been the morganatic wife of King George and as having borne him children, has been married for thirteen years to Captain Trevelyan D. W. Napler, now at the head of the Royal Naval ollege at Dartmouth.

For several years after his marriage Captain Napier was one of the commanders of the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, where he was constantly in contact with the various members of the reigning house, particularly with the present king, which could scarcely have been agreeable for him or for them had there been the slightest foundation for the story that his wife was the "Lady of Malta." How the former Miss Mary Seymour's name ever came to be connected with this story of King George's secret marriage at Malta it is difficult to say. One thing that assisted in keeping the story alive was the peculiarly stilted language of Archbishop Benson, of Canterbury, who used very little tact when he issued a public statement in 1893 before marrying the present King and Queen to the effect that the royal bridegroom had never previously been married. The archbishop delivered himself of this manifesto with the sole object of clearing himself of the imputation of having officiat-ed at the wedding of Princess Mary to Prince George, knowing that the story was circulated that the Prince had a wife and children living at the time. The archbishop neglected to consult George himself, the late King Edward or Queen Alexandria about the affair beforehand. Indeed, they are known to have been justly angry with him and to have found great difficulty in pardoning his lamentable lack of judgment and of discretion

For several years nothing has been and of the story of the "Lady of Malta." At the time he was supposed to have contracted a marriage he was only twenty-one years old. Like most young men of his age and rank in the service, he indulged in mild flirtations at Malta. He was full of life and of mischief at that age and by no means weighed down with the sense of his dignity as a prince of the blood. Of course, he was more devoted to some pretty girls than to others, and quite naturally the wives of the military and naval officers stationed at Malta gossiped over their tea-cups and criticised him for according so much more attention to mere girls than to their own more mature charms.

Malta has always been considered a hotbed of malevolent tittle-tattle, more so than practically any other station, owing to the circumscribed character of the island and the difficulty of people getting away from one another. It is no doubt at these Malta tea tables that Dame Gossip went to the length of insisting that some minx of a girl had inveigled the royal lad into secretly marrying her. This is undoubtedly how the story originated. It is not impossible that such a marriage could have taken place and the affair been hushed up by the British government, but the story of the "Lady of Malta" is generally disbelieved.

Chinese Rugs.

(From The Indianapolis News.) Chinese rug factories are small, generally only having twelve to twenty workmen. The largest rug factory in Tien-Tsin says a consular report, employs seventy The proprietors do not understand English, and prefer to do business through some foreign firm. The advantage of this practice to both buyer and seller is that the firm stands responsible for the delivery of goods and also for the prompt payment therefor. There are two firms which handle Tien-Tsin rugs in a somewhat larger way neither of which have factories of their own. They simply make contracts with the native manufacturers to furnish rugs of given dimensions, and of stated pattern.

The wool rugs are made from the wool of sheep and camels. The camel's wool is generally used in its natural color, which makes a beautiful grayish-brown background for a pattern. The warp is always cotton, the filling being wool. Where colored patterns are used, they are usually of sheep wool, dyed to the proper tint. The dyes used by the manufacturers are aniline, and are not guaranteed as being fast colors. The price is always by the square foot, and is primarily based on the number of threads of warp to the yard in width. The prices paid to the manufacturer range from 50 cents upward. These rugs are made in all sizes from 2x2 feet to 20x20 feet, or any other size which may be required. These prices are those which must be paid to the manufacturers themselves. In the case of an exporter he must, of course, charge his mission; then the price will include the export duty of 5 per cent, required on all goods sent out of China, the hire of coolles, the packing in bales, etc.

Some Swim.

Two negro roustabouts at New Orleans were continually bragging about their ability as long-distance swimmers, and a steamboa mian got up a match. The man who swam the longest distance was to receive $5. The Alabama Whale immediately stripon the dock, but the Human Steamboat said he had some business and would return a few minutes. The Whale swam river four or five times for exercise, and by that time the Human Steamboat returned. He wore a pair of swimming trunks and had a sheet-iron cook stove strapped on his back. Tied around his neck were a dozen packages containing bread, flour, bacon and other eatables. The Whale gazed at

Ponderous Personages OUEEN ELIZABETH By GEORGE FITCH. Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.) Queen Elizabeth reigned in England in the sixteenth century, and put that country thoroughly on the map that it has sinthen run all over it like the color of a fast black stocking.

Elizabeth, according to her friends, was Elizabeth, according to her friends, was a beautiful queen, but many of her critics, who lost their heads during her reign, left private advices to the effect that she had red hair and a mole, and was not as graceful as a hatrack. She was the daughter of Henry VIII by wife No. 1, Series B., but this did not provide her with much of a pull after her father's death. For some time her halfsister Mary, who was very fatal to her relatives, intended beheading her, but she put the job off too long, and when Mary died

Elizabeth became queen.

Being queen of England at that time was no sinecure, for England was a small coun-try and its powerful rivals, such as Holland. France and Spain, took great pleasure in booting it around. However, Elizabeth paid strict attention to the army and navy, and did not load it down with personal friends of congressmen. As a result England whip ped everything within reach and chased Spain's fleet into hitherto unexplored oceans

Elizabeth naturally became very popular, and received many offers of marriage. But she was fickle and hard to suit. The bestshe could do was to become a sister to s large assortment of gallant English dukes, most of whom died by request when sister got peeved. Those Englishmen who were not busy licking Spain during her reign devoted themselves to literature and Elizabeth got first peep at all of Bill Shakespeare's new plays. Elizabeth reigned until she became very old, and while she never married, she never entirely lost hope. She died greatly beloved, but history would be kinder to her if had not, in a careless moment, signed the death warrant of her cousin, Mary. Mary ran the neighboring kingdom of Scotland until it got too strong for her, and then she came to Elizabeth for protection. Elizabeth was very kind to her, and allowed her to wear a beautiful black velvet gown while being executed. Being relative to a monarch in those days was more unhealthy than the possession of a taste for aviation is today.

When Life Was Young.

(From The Worcester Democrat.)
Some of us. as we grow old, become so oppressed by the cares and sorrows of mature life that we quite forget the days of our youth. The pains and pleasures of childhood seem so trivial that we fail to realize that a child's sorrows are as keen and probably keener than anything we know in adult We forget the exquisite joy that a new toy gave us and the palpitating pleasures of a visit to town, the ecstatic delight of a day in the woods. And we forget, too, the depth of anguish that came with each disappointment.

their standing at the end of the season will be $1 won, 57 lost. If the Crackers win 13 out of the remaining 15 games, they will have exactly the same. So, you see what our chances are at a glance. It may happen. If it does, it will be pretty near a miracle.

Another Angle,

FIGURE the possibilities from another angle, however. The Gulls are here a week from tomorrow. The Crackers have eight games, the Gulls seven in that length of time. If the Crackers can gain two games on the Gulls before the series here starts, then old "cruckal series" will pop right out in our mfdst again. But it would take a clean sweep by the Crackers to even tie the Gulls, granting that we catch up the other two games in the meantime. But harder propositions than this have been overcome in the past. Here's hoping. in the past. Here's hoping.

THE PRESENT week is the all-important one. We have eight games in six days. It behooves us to get our busiest and grab just as many Here's a chance to make hay while the sun shines. If we can slaughter the Turtles and the Pelicans, who, however, may refuse to be slaughtered, then our chances may be more rosy than they look now.

THE BILLIES, our real rivals for second place, also have a hard week ahead of them. They are in the same position as the Barons and the Look-outs. Moley's and Elberfeld's men realize they have a chance to climb by walloping Johnny Dobbs' crew. They will certainly pour it in if they are able. OUR CHANCES really rest with what the Barons and the Lookouts can accomplish playing the Gulls and the Billies. We ought not have any trouble winning a majority of the games this week. THE GULLS can thank Southpaw Campbell that they have not slipped any lately. With Cavet ill, Robertson and Hogg only just about breaking even and Berger an uncertainty every time out, Campbell came to the rescue of the Finnites. The halfback southpaw has won his last seven starts. If he can keep this clip up until Cavet returns to steady form, the Gulls' chances are brightest.

THE PHILADELPHIA Public Ledger shows plainly that a winning ball club and one in good standing is the best advertisement that a city can have. They show that when Baltimore was in the big leagues, that the population increase was 17.2 per cent. In the last decade Baltimore had only an increase of 9.2 per cent. On the other hand, Cleveland has 46 per cent, Detroit 63 per cent and Boston 20 per cent. There is a close relation between good baseball and the growth in population.

Gulls Coming.

On Tuesday of the following week, the league leading Mobile Gulls come for four games, which, on the result of the games this week, may develop into a real crucial series, as it is possible that the Crackers may hit a winning streak, while the Gulls are slumping and these four games might decide the pennant.

The final game of the season on Saturday, September 6, will be with the Chattanooga Lookouts. The men of Elberfeld will probably save Harry Goveleskie for this game. If they do, he may be pitted against Elliott Dent. Here is the probable batting order for today's game.

Nashville 3, Chattanooga 2.

Nashville, Tenn., August 24.—Though exceedingly wild in spots, Beck tight-THE GULLS, on the other hand, have a most strenuous week. They will meet Birmingham and Chattanooga, two clubs that are fighting for as high a ranking as they can possibly get. They know they cannot finish first, but they will try their durndest to grab the second rung. Therefore, the Gulls will find the sailing pretty rough in those two cities.

The BULLS, on the other hand, have up in the pinches in the game today with Chattanooga and the locals annexed the battle 3 to 2. Hofman returned to the game after several days absence and it was his clouting that aided materially in winning the game. Howell pitched a fairly good game, but the locals got to him when the runs were needed.

THE EMPIRE STATE league's second season will come to a close Wednesday. The final series of games will be opened today. And coincident with the closing, the two pennant winners, Valdosta of the first half and Thomasville of the second half, will meet in the final series. This will give the members of both teams a chance to size up their opponents in the post season series and give the fans of the circuit some dope on the probabilities in the new to the league leaders' run.

Memphis, Tenn., August 24.—Kissinger held Mobile to two hits today, while his teammates pounded Campbell freely, and Memphis won the last game of the season here 4 to 1. Kissinger also shared batting honors with Seabough, driving out a single and double out of three times at bat and scored one run. Ward's error with two out in the fourth inning paved the way to the league leaders' run.

Chicago, August 24.—Walter Johnson won his fourteenth consecutive victory today, when Washington defeated Chicago 2 to 1 in the first game of the visitors' farewell series here. The game was a pitchers' duel between Scott and Johnson, and Scott would have carried off the victory if Ping Bodie had not lost the ball in the sun, when Gandil sent out a high fly in the fifth.

Detroit. August 24.—Another major league veteran of many years has been sent to the minors. Today President, Navin of the Detroit American League Baseball club announced that Pitcher Joe Lake had been released to Minneapolis and that Catcher Rondeau, a recruit, would accompany him there. The two players go to Minneapolis in part payment for Pitcher Comstock, purchased last week. Lake's last major league appearance occurred yesterday, when New York knocked him from the mound in two innings.

As the result of playing with an "unloaded" gun Everette Kellogg, an 11-year-old negro, is dead, his companion, Louis Bitting, is in jail. The boys were playing with the gun, it is said, and did not know it was loaded and it is said that the gun accidentally discharged, instantly kifling the Kellogg boy. An inquest was held and the verdict was that the boy met death at the hands of Louis Bitting by a gunshot. There were no eye-witnesses.

Birmingham, Ala., August 24.—An unknown negro was lynched last night near Kilgore, a station on the Louisville and Nashville railroad 25 miles north of Birmingham. The body was found hanging under a tres-tle this morning. The sheriff's forces today were unable to find who did it or to get any facts about any crime in that section which might have led to a lynching. They are still working on the case.

WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITY AFFORDED READERS OF SUNDAY CONSTITUTION

"The Poison Belt," Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Latest and Greatest Story, Will Be Published in Generous Installments in the South's Standard Newspaper, Beginning With Sunday, September 7.

It isn't often that such a literary treat is offered to the readers of a Sunday newspaper as that now planned by the publishers of The Atlanta Constitution.

On Sunday, September 7, the first installment of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's latest story, "The Poison Belt," will be printed in The Constitution, and on each succeeding Sunday other generous installments will appear until this marvelous story is completed.

Stories by this gifted writer of fiction are so costly that only the most enterprising publishers care to make the large investment necessary to buy one of his masterpieces, and the people of the South are to be congratulated that they will have the first opportunity to read this entrancing story of mystery by simply buying The Sunday Constitution.

Sir Conan Doyle's price for "The Poison Belt" was $5,000, which stamps him at once as one of the highest-priced writers of the age—a writer whose words are veritable dollar marks, whose letters are nickels and dimes.

But this titled writer of mysterious romances and weird tragedies, of strange adventures and wonderful detective skill, cares little for the money end of the story business—he accepts it as a tribute to his genius as a word painter, as he accepted knighthood and the accompanying title from his king. His interest is in the strange characters he creates and the wonderful exploits he makes his fancied personages perform—in the weaving of mysterious plots of crime for a wonderful detective to unravel; in the delving into the past for characters to entrance and mystify the people of today.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle first became a great writer in the public mind through his creation of that mythical wonder—Sherlock Holmes—who at once became the model for detectives all over the world. The wonderful deductions of Holmes, which enabled him to solve mysterious crimes that baffled all other detectives, established among real detectives a new school of thought and action wherein a scientific basis was sought for the ferreting out of crimes of a mysterious nature.

Everybody knows about Sherlock Holmes, and almost everybody knows more or less about the man whose wonderful brain evolved the entrancing stories of which the famed sleuth was the central figure.

But Sherlock Holmes, great as he is or was, is only one of the peculiarly gifted mythical characters introduced to the public and made to seem as real persons of flesh and blood by this great English writer.

Sir Conan Doyle's stories of romance, adventure and mystery are numerous, and all have been highly popular, so popular indeed that he is now resting securely on that pinnacle of fame that inspires all writers to strive and strive in the hope that some time they will reach its dizzy heights and reap the reward they prize most—the acclaim of the world.

Most readers of The Constitution will vividly recall Sir Conan Doyle's marvelous story—"The Lost World" which, for mysticism, adventure and romance, eclipsed that other wonderful story, "She," by H. Rider Haggard.

In this story, wherein his imaginary characters discovered a lost world in the hidden recesses of South America, he introduced a new character, at once as quaint and peculiar and as marvelous in his own particular way as Sherlock Holmes—Professor Challenger.

The story he told of the discovery of this lost world and of the adventures of the men who discovered it was so real that it seemed that it was recounting a historical fact, and it was difficult to believe that it was only a story.

And now this word-weaver, this marvelous picturer of things that might be, has written another great story of mystery that simply throbs with interest from the first word to the last.

Before the reader has glimpsed a dozen lines of "The Poison Belt," his interest is aroused; before the first chapter is perused he is absorbed in the mystery that beckons him on and on, and when he comes to the end of the installment he wonders why the entire story wasn't printed, even if it occupied the whole Sunday Constitution.

"The Poison Belt" will undoubtedly go down in history as the greatest of all the stories written by Sir Conan Doyle. Notwithstanding the many other entrancing mysteries he has evolved, and that each one eclipsed all other efforts, this last one seems to have embodied in its mystic interest the culmination of all his wonderful ability as a writer.

Professor Challenger, quaint, peculiar and interesting appears in the first chapter with a proposition that simply sets the mythical world agog. And that's enough to say that the reading public will hang upon the words written by Doyle until they come to "The End."

The publishers of The Constitution urge the public to send in their orders early for The Sunday Constitution. Although many thousand extra copies will be printed in order to accommodate those who will fail to take advantage of beginning with the first chapter on September 7, it is the experience of all that thousands will be disappointed as the extra copies will go quickly.

Remember the date—Sunday, September 7.

"The Poison Belt," Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Greatest Story, begins in The Sunday Constitution September 7th and continues in the Sunday Edition only until completed. Order Now!

OATS, OATS, SOW OATS!

The last words in my last week's article under the caption, "Corn, Oats and Company," were "more anon, which, for the benefit of the unlearned is explained to mean that I would write on the same topic again in a little while. Meantime, that sterling agricultural journal, The Progressive Farmer, of Raleigh, N.C., comes out with an article from the pen of Judge Harry C. Hammond, of Augusta, Ga., under the caption, "Cats! Oats! Sow Oats!" and I have placed the same at the head of that article as a compilment to the judge. He is certainly on the right line, although we differ in some minor points about oats. He says the farmer "must sow oats to help out corn." I would prefer to sow oats on its merits and not as subsidiary to corn or any other crop. I have for many years believed that the oats should be considered one of the principal stock foods grown on the farm: second to none in importance, and I suspect that at the bottom of his mind Judge Hammond is inclined to take the same view of the similar of the principal stock foods grown on the farm: second to none in importance, and I suspect that at the bottom of his mind Judge Hammond is inclined to take the same view of the subject, judging from the unstituted praise he gives to oats. Hear him: "Oats are the standard of excellence for horse feed. Oats can be gathered and handled easier than any other crop on the standard of excellence for horse feed. Oats can be gathered and handled easier than any other crop on the standard of excellence for horse feed. Oats can be gathered and handled easier than any other crop on the farm; again, no worm, weevil or other insect attacks it when gathered. It is free from all these pests when growing, with the rare exception of the Hessian fly. Not only are oats relatable, but the nutriments they insect attacks it when gathered. It is free from all these pests when growing, with the rare exception of the Hessian fly. Not only are oats palatable, but the nutriments they contain are in such proportion that this grain forms almost a balanced ration. crops—row crops. (You have been a good while finding that out, judge.) I will undertake, if not required to plant row crops, that I can take the worst gullied field, stop the washing and bring it into shape in two seasons by sowing oats in the winter, peas in the summer; or I will undertake to plow every terrace, fill up every stormwater ditch on the steepest stope and water ditch on the steepest slope and never have it wash a particle, if al-lowed to plant it in oats and peas." That's putting it pretty strong, but we will not make an issue on it.

I differ from Judge H., however, when he insists "don't thresh oats."
When fed in the sheaf (without cut-When fed in the sheaf (without cutting) I have found it impracticable to adjust the quantity so that there would be no lack of grain for the eater and yet no waste of straw. It is true that oat straw is a good roughage, and one cannot afford to litter the stalls with oat straw so long as there are hungry cattle to eat it. Cutting with a hand-nower machine. there are hungry cattle to eat it. Cutting with a hand-power machine is too laborious and slow. I used to have a block and with a broad-ax decapitate the bundles at one stroke just about the middle so as to secure all the heads for feeding and the butts for "other purposes."

I have thus commented on the article because it agrees with my own views because it agrees with my own views and opinion; because I approve it and it approves me. My reason for again writing on "Oats" is to stir up the writing on "Oats" is to stir up the minds of farmers and not let them forget to make the necessary arrangements in good time to sow oats. Don't just sow a patch or two, or one or two acres to each plow, but sow as

I do not think he sufficiently stresses the importance of sowing in open furrows, a method which this writer, while director of the Georgia Station, discovered and developed. Any grain drill that will sow our bearded oats (rather awned) will secure a stand all right, but the drill made for the purpose of sowing in open furrows is the only one that will secure a stand all right, but the drill made for the purpose of sowing in open furrows is the only one that will secure a stolute protection against winter killing.

Judge Hammond further says:

"I do insist that we can grow as good oats and as many of them as any country in the world." Again, he says: "I have just found out why our lands wash worse than anywhere else in the country. It's because we plant so much of it in cultivated crops—row crops. (You have been a good while finding that out, judge.) I will undertake, if not required to pounds. He eats well and is in good condition, but has a breaking out on his shoulders, front legs end neck. There comes lumps in the skin, the hair comes off and he wants to gnaw and rub oll the time. Te has been that way ever since April. I have given him sulphur, but it doesn't seem to help but a few days.

Answer-If the peas are shelled and are stored in tight boxes or barrels, it should not be necessary to repeat the treatment provided it was effectively done the first time. Examine the peas at once and every two or three weeks, and if any weevils or other insects are found in them, repeat the treatment. Weevils and other flying insects may come from other parts of the building or from adjacent corn cribs and re-infest the peas if the latter be not fully protected. The best way to store shelled peas is to put them in tight barrels or boxes, or in bins constructed for the purpose, with no cracks or other openings through which insects may enter. But they should be inspected occasionally during the entire period of storage. Answer-If the peas are shelled and the entire period of storage.

Answer—Your mule probably has a form of ezzema, one peculiarity of which is the fact that it is recurrent and in this way may last a long time if not remedied. In some cases the skin may crack and in others lead to a thickening. In the early stage it is 1 ounce each of aloes, ginger and common soda. Dissolve the whole in ½ pint of boiling water, add ½ pint of cold water and give at one dose. Follow the purging with a mixture of 4 ounces of copperas and saltpeter, divided into twenty-four powders, one powder to be given night and morning in a small bran mash. Wash the affected portions of the skin with 1 ounce of carbonate of potash dissolved in 1 quart of water. Rub it well in and then use warm water to wash it present stage.

They first begin by chewing and slobbering, and then they will hook anything they come to and rub their hair off on any post or tree. They live from twelve to twenty-four hours after first symptoms.

We have cut open some and the only indications of any trouble is the little may or manyfold seems to be perfectly hard and dry and nothing can penetrate it.

Answer—The description you give indicates the disease known as "dry murrain," which consists of an impaction of the third stomach, or maniplies. I have had more than one case which terminated fatally in a few hours. It often is the result of the animal filling its paunch with the wiry stems of Bermuda grass (during or after a dry spell) or other coarse, indigestible substances, such as straw, over-ripe hay, etc. The brain often becomes affected in sympathy with the stomach and the animal may plunge wildly about, stumbling against or over any object that may be it. reighbor who has no such trouble, and put it into the milk that is to be set to ripen and churn, and thus start the

put into the milk that is to be set to ripen and churn, and thus start the right fermentation. But the trouble may be in the cows themselves, from drinking stagnant or otherwise unclean and unwholesome water. Or there may be a deaq carcass in the pasture, or a cow may drag her teats through stangant, marshy places and thus the teats become undesirable germs. So to make sure I advise frequent milking, say say thre times a day—and the injection into each teat a few tablespoonfuls of a solution of 2 drams of hyposulphate of soda in 1 pint of water, the pint being sufficient for the four teats. Moreover, I would give each cow (give by the way of the mouth) 2 drams of bisulphite of soda for three or four days. Of course, as every cowowner should know, only pure and clean water, such as he provides for his own family, should be given to a milk cow. If watered regularly twice a day from a good well, a cow will soon so appreciate it that she will not a day from a good well, a cow will soon so appreciate it that she will not drink out of a stagnant pool or other suspected water.

SOWING OATS AFTER WEEDS. Mrs. F. L. W., Senola, Ga .- I have vation this year, and I want to sow it in oats in the fall, while the negroes are idle between fodder-pulling and oot ton-picking. I would like to have it plowed—if this plowing under of the weeds will not injure the land. I have always heard the land would be injured if weeds were ployed under. Please write me about this fully. Had I best wait until frost kills the weeds? The land has weeds on it from 1 to 6 feet tall, and I wanted to have it vation this year, and I want to sow it plowed now and then lafer. Thanks for a reply.

Answer—The only way known to me that turning under weeds will injure the land is by causing a degree of sourness and at the same time putting it out of condition for following immediately with a small grain crop, because of the loose, open condition, which causes the moisture to dry out and also prevents the roots of the small grain crop from taking firm hold on the soil. To prevent this the turning under of the weeds or a green crop should be done two months, or walk about, but lays down much of his has caused him to have a weakness of the hind legs. He does not want to walk about, but lays down much of his time. His appetite is good. Will you please give answer by mail, as I want treatment for both as early as I can turning under of the weeds or a green crop should be done two months, or even longer, before the proper time for sowing the small grain, long enough to have two or more good rainfalls on it, serving to compact the soil. This may also be accomplished, when necessary, by running a heavy roller over the land, using a regular harrowing in the grain, or plowing under at once and sow your oats about middle of October. Answer-Your young bull should be placed to himself and given a course of tonic medicine, say 1 dram pulverized nux vomica. 2 drams pulverized genetian boot, ½ ounce linseed meal. Give as one dose morning and night for a month in bran or corn meal.

Farms and Farmers

Address all letters intended for this Department to Col. R. J. Redding. Editor of Farms and Farmers Department, Griffin, Georgia

OATS, OATS, SOW OATS!

The last words in my last week's article under the caption, "Corn, Oats and Company," were "more anon," which, for the benefit of the unlearned is explained to mean that I would write on the same topic again in a little while. Meantime, that sterling agricultural journal, The Progressive Farmer, of Raleigh, N. C., comes out with an article from the pen of Judge Harry C. Hammond, of Augusta, Ga., under the caption, "Oats! Oats! Sow Oats!" and I have placed the same at the head of this article as a compilment to the judge. He is certainly on the right line, although we differ in some minor points about oats. He head of this article as a compilment to the judge. He is certainly on the right line, although we differ in some minor points about oats. He says the farmer "must sow oats to help out corn." I would prefer to sow oats to form or any other crop. I have for many years believed that the oats should be considered one of the principal stock foods grown on the farm: second to none in importance, and I suspect that at the bottom of his mind Judge Hammond is inclined to take the same view of the subject, judging from the unstinted praise the to take the same view of the subject, judging from the unstinted praise he gives to oats. Hear him: "Oats are the standard of excellence for horse feed, Oats can be gathered and handled easier than any other crop on the farm; again, no worm, weevil or other insect attacks it when gathered. It is free from all these pests when growing, with the rare exception of the Hesslan fly. Not only are oats palatable, but the nutriments they contain are in such proportion that this grain forms almost a balanced ration. I speak from many years of experience when I say that I have never known winter-killing to amount to anything where proper preparation and seeding were carried out." I do not think he sufficiently stresses the importance of sowing in open furrows, a method which this writer.

Judge Hammond further says:

"I do insist that we can grow as good oats and as many of them as any country in the world." Again, he says: "I have just found out why our lands wash worse than anywhere else in the country. It's because we plant so much of it in cultivated crops—row crops. (You have been a good while finding that out, judge.) I will undertake, if not required to plant row crops, that I can take the worst gullied field, stop the washing and bring it into shape in two seasons and bring it into shape in two season and bring it into shape in two seasons by sowing oats in the winter, peas in the summer; or I will undertake to plow every terrace, fill up every stormwater ditch on the steepest slope and never have it wash a particle, if allowed to plant it in oats and peas." That's putting it pretty strong, but we will not make an issue on it.

I differ from Judge H., however, when he insists "don't thresh oats." When fed in the sheaf (without cutting) I have found it impracticable.

I have found it impracticable to adjust the quantity so that there would be no lack of grain for the eatwould be no lack of grain for the eat-er and yet no waste of straw. It is true that out straw is a good rough-age, and one cannot afford to litter the stalls with out straw so long as there are hungry cattle to eat it. Cutting with a hand-power machine is too laborious and slow. I used to have a block and with a broad-ax decapitate the bundles at one stroke just about the middle so as to secure all the heads for feeding and the butts all the heads for feeding and the butts for "other purposes."

I have thus commented on the article because it agrees with my own views and opinion; because I approve it and it approves me. My reason for again writing on "Oats" is to stir up the midde of favorers and not let them. writing on "Oats" is to stir up the minds of farmers and not let them forget to make the necessary arrangements in good time to sow oats. Don't just sow a patch or two, or one or two acres to each plow, but sow as izer at the same time.

I do not think he sufficiently stresses the importance of sowing in open furrows, a method which this writer, while director of the Georgia Station, discovered and developed. Any grain drill that will sow our bearded oats (rather awned) will secure a stand all right, but the drill made for the purpose of sowing in open furrows is the only one that will secure absolute protection against winter killing.

Judge Hammond further says:

"I do insist that we can grow as good oats and as many of them as any country in the world." Again, he says: "I have just found out why our lands wash worse than anywhere else in the country. Answer-Your horse doubtless suffered at some time in the past from an acute attack of lymphanigitis, which an acute attack of lymphanigitis, which not having proper treatment (which might have been entirely relieved) has gone into the condition of permanent enlargement and induration. I know of no cure for it at the present stage. If you bought the horse while in that fix you were sold as well as the horse.

If this disease be allowed to go on for a few days medicines will be of no use as the secretions will have been arrested.

WEEVILS IN PEAS.

F. M., Armuchell, Ga .- The dry weather prevented me from sowing peas, and I want to keep them over for another year. I have treated them with bisulphide of carbon once in July. Will I have to repeat it again? If so, when?

when?

Answer—If the peas are shelled and are stored in tight boxes or barrels, it should not be necessary to repeat the treatment provided it was effectively done the first time. Examine the peas at once and every two or three weeks, and if any weevils or other insects are found in them, repeat the treatment. Weevils and other flying insects may come from other parts of at once and every two or three weeks, and If any weevils or other insects are found in them, repeat the treatment. Weevils and other flying insects may come from other parts of the building or from adjacent corn cribs and re-infest the peas if the latter be not fully protected. The best way to store shelled peas is to put them in tight barrels or boxes, or in bins constructed for the purpose, with no cracks or other openings through which insects may enter. But they should be inspected occasionally during the entire period of storage. the entire period of storage.
