Row Over Place to Play Threatens Georgia-Tech Game

ULTIMATUM SENT BY JACKETS

Georgia Informed Contest Must Be Played on Grant Field or Not at All, Report.

Athletic circles were stirred Wednesday by reports that the football game between Tech and Georgia was about to be called off on account of the controversy over the scene of the battle.

The reports set forth that Tech athletic authorities had sent to the Georgia representatives a message saying the game should be played at Grant Field or not at all.

No reply, it was said, had been received from Georgia up to a late hour. But it was the opinion that Georgia would never yield in her determination to have the game played at Ponce DeLeon Park.

Efforts by The Georgian by use of the telephone to gain an inkling of the Georgia authorities' position or their reception of the ultimatum said to have been issued by Tech, failed to allay fears that the game would not be played, but the hint was dropped that the matter was being given very serious consideration.

Seek to Oust Players. With the ruling out of Jim Preas, the Yellow Jackets' star lineman, by the S. I. A. A. on charges of professionalism, a merry war between the University of Georgia and the Georgia School of Technology teams is about to break forth with a thunderous echo.

Certain Tech men declare Georgia posters were behind the move whereby Preas was ruled out.

In turn, Tech men are endeavoring to unearth professional charges against Georgia players.

Charges Already Made. One of Atlanta's biggest business men, a former Tech student, to-day declared that "Tiny" Henderson, Georgia's massive tackle, played professional baseball in Cordale within the last year and that he hoped to have affidavits to prove it in time to have Henderson ruled out of Saturday's game at Grant Field.

This Techite also gave out the information that Tech alumni were working on reports to the effect that both Paddock and Conklin were induced financially to return to the Athens University this fall after both had announced they were through with their studies and had entered business, Conklin here in Atlanta and Paddock in Brooklyn.

Georgia Men Make Denial. On the other hand, Georgia men declare that they had absolutely nothing to do with the Preas case.

They claim that the S. I. A. A. received all their information concerning the big Yellow Jacket player from Colonel Bingham, owner of the Bingham School, in Asheville.

Athletic relations between Georgia and Tech have been "strained" for some time, but with the barring of Preas by the S. I. A. A. there is no chance of reconciliation.

"War to the bitter end," has been declared by Tech men.

Feeling over the Preas matter is running so high this afternoon that it is possible that the Tech-Georgia game will not be played at all. Tech has issued an ultimatum that the game will be fought at Grant Field or nowhere. Georgia has also issued an ultimatum that it will be played at Ponce DeLeon or nowhere.

And neither side will give in to the other. In fact, the Tech athletic authorities announce that the issue is closed as far as they are concerned.

PATTERSON IN WAR ON LIQUOR

Ex-Governor, Before Anti-Saloon League, Explains His Flop From 'Wets' to 'Drys.'

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Nov. 12.—Condemning the liquor traffic which he once supported, Malcolm R. Patterson, ex-Governor of Tennessee, explained his changed attitude at today's session of the Anti-Saloon League convention.

"The Anti-Saloon League and I have not always been friends," he said. "I am aware that to have suddenly changed the views of mature manhood which I once asserted and proclaimed from one end of Tennessee to the other, has excited surprise and provoked comment. But this is a world of changes. I am neither ashamed nor abashed to acknowledge the wrong."

Declares Opposition. He declared that his opposition to further legislation to regulate the saloon traffic when he was Governor was based on a misguided judgment. He dwelt at length upon the crimes placed at liquor's door and how he had striven to help even his own son in the struggle for redemption.

"At last I have felt its foul and starchy blow as it has turned upon me in its deadly and shaming wrath," he said, "upon me, who had pleaded before the people for its very existence."

"The saloon can not produce one veracious witness in its favor as it stands indicted before the bar of public opinion. It stands a convicted felon and must receive the sentence of the law. It must go, never to return, and with the going of the saloon liquor itself should go. I favor prohibition in any form that will either reduce or destroy the liquor traffic. I favor it personal-wide, town-wide, State-wide, nation-wide and world-wide."

Accompanies Hooper. Twice elected Governor of Tennessee as a "wet," Mr. Patterson came to Columbus in a special car accompanied by Governor Ben W. Hooper, who succeeded him as Tennessee's Chief Executive, to give his endorsement to a nation-wide program that would have for its aim the elimination of the saloon.

At a business session of the convention this afternoon, it was expected that the Rev. Perley A. Baker, of Columbus, would be re-elected general superintendent of the league. Joshua Levering, of Baltimore, long prominent in the councils of the prohibition party, was one of the principal speakers at the morning session. Mr. Levering predicted that the ban of prohibition would be placed against the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors before 1920.

"The country is aroused," said Mr. Levering, "and we can see the dawn of victory. Nothing can stem its progress."

The fire started from a grate on the second floor and burned through the floor. It was extinguished without great damage.

CONLEY TO GO FREE, SAYS COUNSEL

"There's Not a Ruling in Law That Would Apply Against Him," Says Attorney.

"There is no law to convict Jim Conley, and he will go free." This statement was made by W. M. Smith, attorney for Conley, the Frank witness and confessed accessory after the fact to the murder of Mary Phagan, Wednesday, as the negro sat in an ante-room to Judge Ben Hill's courtroom awaiting trial on charges of misdemeanor and felony.

Contrary to expectations, Attorney Smith declared that Conley would plead not guilty to both charges. It had been thought that the negro would admit the misdemeanor count at least.

Conley was not placed on trial Wednesday, as was expected. For the past two days the negro has been held in the "bull pen" at the courthouse with the expectancy of being called by Solicitor Dorsey. Court recessed Wednesday, however, without his case being called.

In the event a plea of not guilty is adhered to, the case will be forced to go on until all probability, which is expected to cause further delay.

Attorney Smith refused to discuss the technicalities of the case against his client, but persisted that there was no case against him. Referring to the negro's admissions to complicity in the Phagan murder on the witness stand when he appeared as the star witness against Leo M. Frank, Smith answered:

No Ruling Hits Conley, He Says. "Well, you search the lawbooks and see if you can find any ruling that would apply against Conley. I will get him out scot-free without trouble."

Two indictments were found against Conley by the Fulton County Grand Jury. Both charged him with being accessory after the fact, but one of the indictments involved only a misdemeanor while the other constituted a felony.

A fine point of law is involved in the two indictments. Conley, on his own confessions, was guilty of the misdemeanor by hiding the knowledge of the crime from the officers until he made his admission to the detectives some three weeks after the Phagan girl was slain.

The felony indictment presupposes that Conley did "hide, harbor or conceal" the perpetrator of the crime from the officers of the law. The question arises as to whether Conley, by shielding Frank, as he says he did, was guilty of the felony in the meaning of the law.

Conley Still Jaunty. In the event that Conley is convicted on one or both of the charges and Frank is given a new trial and acquitted, the anomalous situation will arise of an accessory after the fact without a principal in the crime.

Conley did not appear to have been affected by his long almost solitary confinement in the Tower since the Frank trial. He was dressed in the same blue suit which he wore on the witness stand, with the addition of a red necktie. The same black broad-brimmed felt hat was set jauntily on the side of his head. He wore a new shirt and new shoes.

The negro refused to talk to a number of newspaper men who attempted to question him. He would only smile and squint at them through his shifty eyes.

Frank Case Witness In Court as Thief

Gordon Bailey, alias "Snowball," a negro witness in the trial of Leo M. Frank, appeared in the Court of Judge Ben Hill Wednesday in the role of defendant.

Bailey was charged with participating in the robbery of Edward Darden and Len Chapman, two other negroes. Darden said he had been robbed of $2.50 and a watermelon by Bailey and his two accomplices. Bailey, he said, gave the watermelon back.

Wheeler County Is Legal, Rules Court

The question of Wheeler County's constitutional existence was settled to-day when the Supreme Court handed down an opinion declaring it to have been constitutionally created.

The question was brought into the court of review on a habeas corpus proceeding from Montgomery County. It was contended that the Constitution limited the State to 148 counties, and that Wheeler increased that number. The court held, however, that a later amendment adding another county to that total automatically increased it to 149, and implied that it might be added to indefinitely, if the people see fit.

WHOLESALE DEATH PLOT ALLEGED

Patrick Ursery Arrested at Hazlehurst for Alleged Scheme to Get Wife's Inheritance.

HAZELHURST, GA., Nov. 12.—Never before in its history has this town been so stirred as at the arrest of Patrick Ursery, a well-known resident here, on the charge of poisoning the entire family of his wife to gain her inheritance.

Mrs. Ursery is the daughter of J. G. Ross, a wealthy farmer. But a short time after the ceremony the entire Ross family took ill and their condition became so serious that it was feared they would die.

Circumstances surrounding the stricken persons were suspicious and an investigation was made by the family physician. An analysis of the food which they had eaten showed the biscuits to contain a large quantity of strychnine. Further investigation pointed to Ursery as having administered the poison to the flour from which the biscuits were cooked.

Actions Called Unusual. Ursery is declared to have purchased a bottle of strychnine last Saturday. On Sunday he and his wife and infant child visited the Ross home.

While there, according to members of the stricken family, Ursery's actions were most unusual. It is said that he preyed into everything in the house, especially in the kitchen and pantry, where the flour and uncooked food was kept.

Then suddenly Ursery took his wife and baby away from the Ross home without saying when he would return.

According to Mrs. Ross, he told her not to use the flour, a new sack of which had lately been purchased. Monday morning Ursery unexpectedly appeared again at the Ross home.

Whole Family Was Ill. The entire family was writhing in agony. Despite the protests of his wife that she might remain to attend her parents in their illness, Ursery took her to his own home.

Friends of the Ross family, learning later of Ursery's actions, began an investigation of the case, which resulted in his arrest.

In the County Jail Ursery denies emphatically the charge against him. He waived preliminary examination, and his bond was fixed at $5,000. He was unable to obtain this amount and will remain in jail.

Mr. Ross and his family will recover.

SHRIEKS OF 'FIRE' PUT HOTEL IN WILD PANIC

Guests of the Adair Hotel, No. 265 Peachtree street, fled down fire escapes and through smoked-filled rooms in their negligees early Wednesday morning when fire was discovered on the first floor of the four-story structure.

Many persons on the upper floors were aroused by the screams of fright and rushing of feet below, and without attempting to clothe themselves or save their property rushed pell-mell from the building.

The fire did small damage and was extinguished before the fire department arrived. It originated in the wardrobe in the room of Walter Wilson, a real estate operator. Matches in one of Wilson's coats there are said to have been ignited by heat from a radiator, against which the wardrobe stood. In an instant the clothing was ablaze and smoke filled the room.

Mrs. Wilson, returning from breakfast, opened the door to the room and was enveloped in a cloud of smoke. She screamed in terror and ran back through the building shouting to the guests to escape.

Panic followed as the smoke, pouring from the Wilson bedroom, filtered up to the next floor. Many of the women guests caught up Mrs. Wilson's screams of fire and sent it on over the building.

On the fourth floor Mrs. Charles M. Hayes was aroused from her sleep by a blanket about her, she caught up a cage in which her pet canary bird lived and climbed out on the fire escape. Her husband, who is secretary of the Atlantic Compress Company, followed her, together with Robert Luther, an insurance man, residing on that floor. The three began a rapid ascent.

Mrs. C. H. Chisholm and her daughter, Miss Caroline Chisholm, also occupying quarters on the fourth floor, took time to pack their valuables into two suit cases and rushed down the stairway amid the clouds of smoke, which by this time had filled the entire building.

On the first floor, after the panic there had subsided somewhat, men investigated the origin of the fire. Finding it confined to the Wilson wardrobe, they summoned waiters from the breakfast room in the basement who, with buckets of water, rushed into the room and in a few minutes extinguished the blaze.

Out on the fire escape, Mrs. Hayes, with her canary bird, her husband and Luther, had just reached the second floor and were preparing to lower the last flight of the iron steps to the ground when they were informed that the fire was out and were taken into the building through the window. Mrs. Hayes almost fainted from exhaustion.

MRS. DODD HEIRS Suing to Set ASIDE WILL

A fight to set aside the will of Mrs. Barbara C. Dodd and prevent her estate of more than $300,000 from going to the schools and charitable institutions to which the money was bequeathed, was begun by the heirs-at-law in Judge W. D. Ellis' division of the superior court Wednesday morning.

The relatives of Mrs. Dodd interested in the litigation are Mrs. Barbara C. Dibble, of Montgomery, Ala.; Henry E. Dibble, of Campbell County, Ga.; Mrs. Fannie T. Ackerman, of New York; Oscar C. Dibble, Thomas Barnard, George Dibble and Malcolm Dibble.

The suit is directed against Charles E. Currier, president of the Central Bank and Trust Company, who is executor of the will.

Argument on the demurrers and counter demurrers to the petition of the heirs-at-law to set aside and prevent the recording of the will was begun Wednesday and probably will consume the greater portion of the day. The examination of witnesses probably will not begin until Thursday morning.

The heirs-at-law object to the admission of the will to record on the ground that Mrs. Dodd was not of sound and disposing mind and memory when the instrument was executed; that she did not make the will freely and voluntarily, but was governed by an insane delusion in reference to the heirs-at-law and that she suffered from a violent monomania in reference to the heirs-at-law based on an insane belief that they were not related to her.

MRS. SLATON GIVES HER RECIPE FOR GEORGIA DAY BEATEN BISCUIT

Mrs. John M. Slaton shown cooking as she will for Georgia Day dinner. The first lady of Georgia is as much at home in the kitchen as she is in the dining room, and graces both.

Governor's Lady Will Furnish Bread for Big Dinner—Tickets To Be Unique.

Here is the recipe for the biscuit that Mrs. John M. Slaton, first lady of Georgia, will make for the big Atlanta dinner that will be held on Georgia Day, Tuesday of next week at the Auditorium. The recipe which Mrs. Slaton herself has given to The Georgian, is for the fine old-fashioned beaten biscuit which have been a famous Georgia, Maryland and Virginia delicacy from ante-bellum days. Mrs. Slaton had the recipe from her mother, Mrs. John M. Grant, and here it is:

To one quart of flour add three rounded tablespoons of lard and about one-fourth cup of water. Add a pinch of salt. Mix the dough and if it is not quite soft enough, add a very little more water. When the dough is thorough mixed, either beat in the old-fashioned way or run through a rolling machine, which is still better. The secret of success is in folding and rolling the dough thoroughly. It should be rolled until it pops when folded. Then when the biscuit are cut out, each one should be pricked with a fork on top to keep it from blistering.

The dinner for which Mrs. Slaton has so graciously agreed to furnish the biscuit will be composed entirely of Georgia products. Georgia-raised turkey and Georgia ham will probably be a prominent feature of the menu.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce committee, of which Milt Saul is chairman, is having the tickets printed for more than the original price of the ticket. One coupon will entitle the holder to a pair of suspenders, another to a pair of socks, another to 50 cents on a pair of shoes, and so on. The general sale of tickets will begin on Thursday and due notice will be given to everybody.

GEORGIA'S 'DRY' LAWS GO TO U. S. COURT

MACON, Nov. 12.—An attack on the constitutionality of a feature of the Georgia prohibition law has been instituted in the Bibb Superior Court by the Macon Saloon Men's Association.

That clause which prohibits the Ordinary from issuing a license to any man who has ever been convicted of violating the prohibition law is alleged to be violative of article 1, part 3, of the Constitution of Georgia, and of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

S. D. Cassidy, who was convicted of selling whisky in 1911, applied to the Ordinary yesterday afternoon for the "near-beer" license, and was denied it, although he tendered the money. This furnishes the basis for the proceedings. A petition for mandamus has been filed with Judge Mathews, of the Superior Court, and Ordinary Wiley has been ordered to show cause on November 22.

Attorneys for Cassidy state that if defeated in the State Supreme Court, they are going to the United States Supreme Court. As practically all of the present saloon men of Macon have been convicted of violating the prohibition law, they will be unable to engage in the business here in the future, unless that restrictive feature of the law is proven unconstitutional. This is the first time that the question has been raised.

TEN VERDICTS IN SLAYING CASES AFFIRMED

The present term of the Supreme Court does not appear to be a particularly happy one for plaintiffs in murder appeal cases, for out of a total of eleven cases decided and handed down to-day, only one was reversed and sent back for a new trial.

The docket yet has several murder cases pending for decision, as it is unusually heavy in that respect this term.

In the case of Hall vs. the State, murder, the old rule against courts of review interfering with the trial judge in the matter of determining alleged bias upon the part of jurors was reaffirmed. It was again specifically set forth that the court of last resort will not disturb rulings of this kind, unless it can be shown that the trial judge has flagrantly abused his discretion.

In the same case it also was held that it is the duty of trial judges to quell disturbances and applause in trial courts, but that such applause or disturbance must be objected to immediately by counsel, or it would not operate to gain a new trial. The court implied that an overruled motion for a mistrial or an objection to applause, if made immediately, might operate to win a new trial.

It was stated in the clerk's office to-day that the bill of exceptions in the Frank case is expected in the Supreme Court next Monday. That will mean that the Frank case will be set for argument on or about December 15.

Brother of Bride Who Fled Denies She Was Kidnaped

That Mrs. Forrest Ashworth, wife of a young clerk for M. Rich & Bro. Company, who was declared to have been kidnaped by her parents, left her husband willingly, was the assertion of a brother of the young woman Wednesday.

The Ashworths were married a month ago. Two weeks later the bride left her husband for a visit with friends. It was supposed. She was next heard from at the home of her parents in Tampa, Fla., when a suit for the annulment of the marriage was instituted.

Ashworth declared his bride was being forced by her parents to bring the suit.

The brother of Mrs. Ashworth said his sister left Ashworth after repenting her marriage.

Stevens and Captain Frank McIntyre of the First Regiment and the Savannah Hussars, respectively.

He did not deny that there had been considerable friction between himself and Captain McIntyre in the past, particularly in reference to certain matters coming up during the administration of Governor Brown.

Three Reasons Why POSTUM

Instead of Coffee

A Food Drink Postum made of choice whole wheat, roasted, with a small portion of New Orleans molasses, contains the nutritive elements of the grain, and is wholesome and nourishing. Coffee has no food value whatever.

Has Fine Flavour Postum has a dark, seal brown color, which changes to rich golden brown when cream is added. It has a delightful aroma, and a rich, snappy flavour quite similar to that of Old Dutch Java.

Free From Drugs Postum is absolutely free from any drug. Coffee contains caffeine, a poisonous drug—about 2½ grains to the cup. It often causes biliousness, headaches, heart agitation, nervousness, sleeplessness, and other ills. Postum, being pure and free from caffeine or any other drug, may be used freely by young and old.

Postum comes in two forms:
Regular Postum must be well boiled to bring out the flavour and food value.
Instant Postum is a soluble powder. Made instantly by stirring a spoonful in a cup of hot water—with sugar and cream added.
 If coffee don't agree, try POSTUM

GAZAN SURE OF NEW TRIAL FOR LEO M. FRANK

Interview in Savannah Press Declares Attorney's Visit to Cell Convinced Him.

SAVANNAH, Nov. 12.—That Leo M. Frank will get a new trial when his case comes up before the State Supreme Court was the declaration of Simon G. Gagan, a member of the well known law firm of Gagan & Gagan, who has just returned from Atlanta where he visited the pencil maker's cell in the State Prison. Gagan declared that he had seen Frank in his cell and that he was convinced that Frank was innocent. He said that he had seen Frank in his cell and that he was convinced that Frank was innocent. He said that he had seen Frank in his cell and that he was convinced that Frank was innocent.

PINDELL IS NOW SURE OF POST IN RUSSIA

Secretary Bryan Is Wrathful in Stating That Name Will Go to Senate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—President Wilson will send to the Senate the nomination of Henry M. Pindell, of Florida, Ill., to be Ambassador to Russia, according to a statement issued by Secretary of State Bryan today. "The Ambassadorship to Russia is vacant," said Secretary Bryan's statement, "and the President has for some time been desirous of filling it by an appointment which would be entirely worthy of the great dignity of the importance of the post. Knowing Mr. Pindell personally, he is confident that he could conscientiously and efficiently perform the duties of such a place, and he has accordingly appointed Mr. Pindell to the post. Mr. Pindell did not seek the appointment. He was tendered him without any solicitation on his part, not only, but without any knowledge or anticipation on his part that it would be offered to him. In response to the offer he simply stated that he would be glad to serve the Administration in any way in which the President thought he could serve successfully, but that he did not feel that he could conscientiously obligate himself to serve the ordinary term of a foreign appointment because he did not feel that he could leave his business so long. The President asked him to accept it for as long a time as he could stay and he consented. This is a full statement of the matter which has been grossly misrepresented. The President will not allow malicious misrepresentation to interfere with his right to nominate to the Senate the best qualified man within his choice for conspicuous and responsible positions. Secretary Bryan declined to state the exact term for which Mr. Pindell has accepted the Ambassadorship, saying that he did not believe that this point had been definitely settled. "Mr. Pindell will remain abroad as long as he can without endangering his business interests. I now consider that the incident is closed."

J. Ham Lewis 'Spilled' On Polished Ballroom

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—A little story is being told of Senator James Hamilton Lewis' appearance at a "hop" at the fashionable Chevy Chase Country Club. He crossed the hall to greet an acquaintance, and after bestowing profuse compliments, started a sweeping bow in farewell. The bow was never finished. The Senator slipped on the polished floor and sat down heavily. He arose and remarked: "Something must have been spilled on the floor." A young bud near by agreed with him. "I think it was a Senator," she added.

Eskimo Girl Sent to Leavenworth Prison

LEAVENWORTH, KANS., Nov. 12. Carrie Fong Sing, a 19-year-old Eskimo girl, who was convicted by the Federal Court in Alaska of killing an American soldier at Nome, was received at the prison at Lansing today to begin a sentence of six years. Carrie Fong Sing was released from the Federal prison here on April 27, 1913, after having served two years for attempting to kill another soldier at Nome.

Escaped Lunatic Tries To Have Leg Cut Off

MACON, Nov. 12.—A man walked into the office of City Physician O. C. Gibson and asked to have his right leg amputated, because he was "mad with it." WILSON IS HAILED BY LABOR UNIONS

Member of Cabinet Is Given Rousing Welcome by American Federation.

SEATTLE, Nov. 12.—A rousing welcome was accorded William B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor, by the delegates to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor. Secretary Wilson has been a member of a labor union for many years, and had been closely associated with the leaders of the Federation before he was elected a Congressman from Pennsylvania. Hope of settling the long controversy between the factory of electrical workers was expressed by delegates today. It was believed that the Reid faction of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers would prevail over the leading faction to cause the retirement of all present officers and the holding of an election in which all members of the trade will participate. A settlement was also hoped for in the disputes between the carpenters and sheet-metal workers' unions.

The latter's daughter is suing for the money, claiming that her mother was intended as the beneficiary of the policy.

I have never voted for even a constable who was elected."

38 STORM DEAD BODIES WASHED UP BY LAKE

Restored Communications Bring Fresh Stories of Horrors—Loss to Reach $5,000,000

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Slowly restored communication to-day told of the horror left in the wake of one of the worst storms that has ever visited the Great Lakes region. What the total death toll was between Friday night and yesterday may not be known before several days. The estimate of 100 was generally accepted. Twenty-eight bodies have been washed ashore in different parts of the lake region. Property loss was estimated at nearly $5,000,000.

Six men met death when lightship No. 52 was wrecked fifteen miles below Buffalo, and the wreckage of the ship was tossed up on the shore. Twenty-six men and two women were taken off the steamer Waukegan after they had spent two days on the helpless boat off Gulf Rock, expecting to be dashed to death. They related tales of suffering that were increased by the constant washing over the side of huge waves. Seventeen bodies which were washed ashore on the Canadian side of Lake Huron were believed to be from the Canadian freight steamer Regina.

Cleveland Still Paralyzed by Snow.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Nov. 12.—This city is recovering from the worst blizzard that ever held Cleveland in its grasp, to face the menace of food and fever.

Communication by rail and wire is gradually being restored. Famine which began to be felt yesterday because of the complete isolation of the city from outside sources of food supply were partially alleviated today when a few trains began to reach the city.

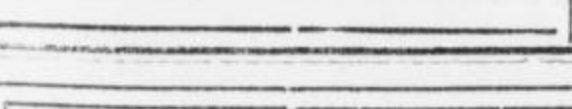

Snow is piled many feet deep everywhere. Warmer weather and rain are forecast. Should a downpour come Cleveland would find itself in the throes of the worst flood in its history.

The water supply is in an unprecedentedly dangerous condition. Cleveland draws its service from Lake Erie and has no filtration system. The storm has made the water so turbid and muddy, and has so befouled it with sewage, which the city empties into the lake, that it is undrinkable. Yet thousands of families have no means of obtaining other drinking water, and pestilence threatens.

Schools will not be reopened until next week. Telephone service still in chaos and can not be fully restored for many weeks. The collapse of buildings and live wires have already caused the death of five persons. Dozens of others have been injured.

The suffering among the poor has been frightful. Calls for aid upon charitable organizations have exceeded all former records. It is impossible to bury the city's dead because the streets are so blocked with snow that carriages can not operate and cemeteries are so impenetrable that graves can not be dug.

The danger from fire is threatening, but so far the city has escaped any serious conflagrations. The fire hydrants in the business section are buried many feet under snowdrifts and fire apparatus can not penetrate the snow in the streets.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

JAMES B. NEVIN

No courts of review in the United States are worked more thoroughly or more continuously than the Supreme and Appeals Courts of Georgia. The various restrictions thrown about these two courts are so rigid and uncompromising that it has almost reached the point where the judges thereof must work all the time. If not overtime, to keep up with the work assigned to them.

In Georgia, contrary to the practice in more than half the States, any case, no matter how small and insignificant, may be carried to the courts of review. Cases involving a little as five dollars have been carried there!

In addition to that, cases submitted to either for affirmation or reversal must be acted upon within twelve months, or they stand affirmed automatically. This provision the courts have construed as mandatory upon them to dispose of all cases within twelve months, as they would consider an automatic affirmation of a court below as more or less of a reflection upon themselves.

For the reasons stated, therefore, and for other reasons, the members of the two Georgia courts of review find it necessary to reside in Atlanta continuously, in order to be available for work in the Capitol at all times. The Court of Appeals judges spend practically all of their time in the Capitol, either hearing arguments, consulting, or writing decisions; and the work of the Supreme Court judges is little less heavy. There are six Supreme Court judges, however, against only three judges of the Court of Appeals.

The suggestion that the salaries of the judges of the courts of review be raised generally is popular throughout Georgia—certainly the salaries of no public officials could be raised with less friction inside the Legislature.

The Governor got another one of those queerly addressed letters to-day, the kind that give Secretary Jesse Perry large and frequent pains! This one was addressed thus—and it came from Sweden: The American Governor, Of Georgia, Atlanta.

"Guess you Yonson, or whoever it is writing this thing, thinks we sometimes have Chinamen or Zulu Governors of Georgia," remarked Perry.

George P. Munro is being talked about as a candidate for Congress against "Uncle Charles" Adamson in the Fourth. Indeed, it is confidently predicted that his appointment will be forthcoming in a few days. Mr. Munro is quite well known throughout his district, and has many friends therein. The man he is to run against has been rated for years one of the strongest political factors in Georgia, and he undoubtedly will be hard to beat. Still, there is no sort of law against somebody trying it, as Mr. Munro undoubtedly knows; and they do say that the aspirant for Mr. Adamson's seat "knows his way around" pretty well, politically!

Former President of the State Senate W. S. West, of Valdosta, is spending a few days at the Ansley. Mr. West's name frequently has been mentioned in connection with the Governorship, but as he and the present Governor are bosom friends, he is not saying anything much about himself in that capacity nowadays. He is a very strong man politically, however, and if he should run for Governor, South Georgia, at least, is apt to give him many willing and enthusiastic votes.

Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture Dan Hughes' recent interview, in which he urged the farmers not to "blow" their surplus wealth this fall, but rather to bank it, has attracted much attention and approval throughout the State. Not only was the advice given by Mr. Hughes apparently sound and acceptable, but it was couched in exceptionally attractive English and aptly illuminated with classical references.

As a matter of fact, Dan Hughes, besides being an exceptionally well informed man, and completely "on top" of his present job, is an unusually graceful and convincing writer. He contributes frequently to various agricultural publications throughout the nation, and articles from him are regularly solicited by a number of them.

Mr. Hughes has been in the office of Commissioner of Agriculture as assistant for a little more than four months, and already it is perfectly plain that James D. Price, the head of the department, made no sort of mistake when he named his superior young South Georgian as his first lieutenant in the Agricultural Department.

Between the two, Governor Slaton and Commissioner Price, the various State fairs will have been pretty well covered by the time the last one is held. Both have strained every point possible to visit those do which they have been invited, and that the Governor has been forced, through circumstances over which he had no control, to miss, Commissioner Price generally has succeeded in getting to.

Both men are enthusiastic advocates of the county fair idea, and neither has left undone anything that might tend to encourage them. There have been around seventy fairs held in Georgia this year—and every one of them has constituted an exceptionally good affair. Eventually it is hoped to have a fair in every county of the State every year.

Gets His Citizenship Restored to Preach. LITTLE ROCK, ARK., Nov. 12.—Louis Yancey couldn't be ordained as a minister until his citizenship was restored by Governor George W. Hays. So the Governor pardoned him. Yancey was converted in the penitentiary some years ago. At the same time the Governor raised a citizen as he could preach he made Allen Sprawn a citizen so he could be marshal at Hermitage. Sprawn once did time for theft.

WILSON SEEKING MAN TO UNITE MEXICANS

Sounding Out Huerta and Carranza on List of Leaders for Provisional President.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 12.—The military commander this afternoon called the Chief of Police into secret conference, and indications are that troops will be called out within a few hours.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—President Wilson is making a final effort to bring the Huerta and Carranza factions together in Mexico and to find a man satisfactory to both elements for provisional President, according to a report current in administration circles to-day. It is believed that William Bayard Hale has presented a list of names to General Carranza at Nogales and that John Lind is sounding out the Huerta regime on the same candidates in Mexico City.

Secretary of State Bryan refused this afternoon to discuss the Paris report that the United States has requested France to demand the resignation of Huerta. Rear Admiral Fletcher, commanding the United States warships at Vera Cruz, reported to the Navy Department that the battleship Louisiana will remain at Tuxpan to await the outcome of the battle there, although all Americans have been taken out of danger. He also reported that the Michigan has sailed for Tampico.

Wilson will issue a statement within a fortnight making clear the exact purposes of this Government in the present Mexican crisis, according to the accepted belief in official circles to-day. It is known the President has been urged to give to the House an outline of his policies before November 20, when the new Mexican Congress will meet. It is argued the publication of such a statement directly before the convening of the Congress would discount whatever effect the latter would have on the situation. It is also pointed out that since European Governments have been informed of the future American policy toward Mexico, there is no reason why it should be withheld from the people of the United States. The one significant development of the past 48 hours is that the relations between the United States and the three European powers most directly concerned in Mexico—Great Britain, Germany and France—now are on a much better footing. This is due not only to the speech made by Premier Asquith in which he disclaimed all intention of opposing the American policy, but also to the frank interchange of views which the State Department initiated some days ago.

Dr. Hale Confers With Carranza Again. NOGALES, ARIZ., Nov. 12.—Today's conference between Dr. William Bayard Hale and General Venustiano Carranza, head of the Constitutional list force, is expected to have a marked effect on the future policy of the United States in Mexico. General Carranza has notified the American Government that if the embargo on munitions of war were lifted he could drive General Huerta from power within a month. Dr. Hale came here as the representative of President Wilson to give Carranza an opportunity to prove his claims. Dr. Hale is of the opinion that energetic methods must be used to oust Huerta, and it is said that he believes only intervention can solve the present difficulty.

30 Carloads of Ammunition to Border. MEMPHIS, TENN., Nov. 12.—Local freight officials of the Illinois Central said to-day that in the past week 30 solid carloads of ammunition had been hauled over their lines through Memphis to the Mexican border.

American, Driven From Mexico, Urges Intervention. MOBILE, Nov. 12.—R. M. Uimer, who was a wealthy merchant of Torreon, Mexico, and whose business was ruined by the last revolution, has just arrived in Mobile. He says that half has not been told of the awful conditions in Mexico, and that Americans are on their knees praying for intervention by the United States. "If the United States raises the embargo on arms, conditions in Mexico will be speedily remedied," said Mr. Uimer. "If the United States intervenes in Mexico it will require 600,000 men and several years' warfare to put that country in good shape."

Huerta Quells Strife in Cabinet. SPECIAL Cable to The Atlanta Georgian. MEXICO CITY, Nov. 12.—General Huerta has quelled the last element of opposition that has developed in his Cabinet since the relations of Mexico and the United States became critical. Announcement was made to-day that Minister Aldape was "seriously ill because of overwork." This presages announcement that Aldape will retire from the Cabinet. He has been at odds for some time with Ministers Blanquet and Mohno and his retirement will make the "war element" among Huerta's advisers supreme. Aldape has voted with the other Ministers on matters affecting the foreign policy of the present government, but he has been the center of some story debates before yielding to the pressure of his colleagues. Rumors that Chihuahua has fallen into the hands of the rebels were circulated here early to-day, but were immediately denied by the Government.

ALARMS NOT AT POINTS AGREED, SAYS MAYOR

New $100,000 Fire System Omits Recently Annexed Sections, Woodward's Criticism.

Supporters of Mayor Woodward in his criticism of the new $100,000 fire alarm system found an added argument Wednesday in the fact that it covers only the territory of the old system. The contract has been completed, but there are no boxes in Ansley Park, Druid Hills, East Atlanta, Oakland City or in any territory recently annexed.

"It is just another evidence of the bad management in awarding that contract," said Mayor Woodward. "It is a moral obligation contract and therefore illegal, but if it were a legitimate contract the total cost of $100,000 is entirely too much.

"No move has been made to get any pay on the contract, and I have not had occasion to make a thorough investigation of the matter.

To Make Thorough Probe.

"I will look closely into this failure to provide alarm boxes in Ansley Park and the new sections. The only reason for building a new system, as I understand it, was to give service to these sections."

Citizens of these sections are preparing to make vigorous protests through their Councilmen.

Fire Chief Cummings explained the situation as follows:

"The contract adopted by the Board of Firemasters and the Council, whether it be legal or illegal, did not provide for any more than has been done. We have fifty new boxes to be put up in these sections as soon as there is some agreement on the contract."

"We can make these extensions and give these people fire protection at a very little cost. Until then they will have to use the telephones."

More Stations Wanted.

An urgent matter to come before the Finance Committee in January will be the need of a fire engine house in Ansley Park.

The nearest station is on North avenue, and the residents complain that every time there is a fire there the houses burn down before the fire engines arrive.

A lot has been purchased for a station on West Peachtree street, near Sixteenth street. Lots have been bought in the First, Fifth and Eighth Wards also. The delegations in Council representing these sections will demand money for houses and equipment.

CITY BREVITIES.

The work of placing the Red Cross Christmas seals on sale probably will begin within a few weeks. Mr. R. Duffy has been named secretary of the committee in charge of the local end of the work, and will work under the direction of H. S. Cole, chairman of the general committee. His office will be with the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

A movement to relieve school conditions by reducing the numbers in overcrowded rooms, and to improve the teaching force by offering better salaries, has been inaugurated by the Atlanta Public School Teachers Association. The association will work with other organizations for the betterment of the schools. Miss Kate Massey was elected president at a recent meeting.

Dr. Theodore Toepel, director of physical culture in the public schools, will give a lecture on tuberculosis at the German Lutheran Church, Garnett and Fourth streets, Wednesday night. The lecture will be in German and will be illustrated with stereoscopic views.

Company I, of the Georgia National Guard, known as the German-American Guards, will give a ball Wednesday evening, in the Freundschaftsbund hall, 137 1/2 West Peachtree street. One of Atlanta's best orchestras will furnish music for the dancers, and a brass band will play during the intermissions.

The 3,300th performance of the Chicago Glee Club will be given in Atlanta Friday evening at the Tabernacle, when that organization appears here at the Tabernacle under the auspices of the Alkibiades Lyceum Bureau. President S. R. Bridges has announced that the Knelsel instrumental quartet will be the next attraction.

Lack of time to attend to the affairs of the Board of Education is advanced by Walter R. Daley as the reason for his retirement as chairman, which was announced Tuesday afternoon. His term expires on the first Monday in January. He has served five years. It is generally understood among local politicians that he will be succeeded by R. J. Quinn, whose name will be offered by Councilman C. W. Smith.

A movement to reduce the term of office of the president of the Chamber of Commerce from two years to one year will be inaugurated at the meeting of the directors of that organization Wednesday afternoon. President Wilmer L. Moore is said to be in favor of the change. The directors will also hear the report of the milk committee, of which Dr. E. A. Visanaki is chairman, and will name a committee to nominate officers.

General Robert K. Evans, commander of the Department of the Gulf, U. S. A., has written to Atlanta friends that he will return to Atlanta November 20, accompanied by Mrs. Evans and their son, Lieutenant Hornsby Evans. They have been spending General Evans' leave of absence on their Mississippi farm, and the general has been delivering several addresses in behalf of the Army League.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS APPEAL TO ADULTS

Throughout Atlanta to-day 150 Sunday school superintendents and associate workers are busy in the adult Sunday school membership campaign, which began with a banquet at Hotel Ansley Tuesday night and which will last until the end of the year.

"Get every able-bodied man and woman to attend Sunday school," was the slogan adopted. The campaign has started with a determination to break all records for Sunday school attendance.

The banquet was a brilliant one, attended by many men and women noted for their religious work in Atlanta. They were elated over the recent Sunday school membership campaign in which the total membership of many Sunday schools was more than doubled.

Slogan buttons were presented to those who attended, and will be given to others participating in the campaign, which will culminate in a mass meeting the last of the year. To encourage the work an institute will be held for Sunday school workers December 8 and 9.

Addresses were made at the banquet by W. O. Foote, superintendent of St. Mark, Methodist; D. W. Sims, secretary of the Georgia Sunday School Association; Major J. R. Quinn, superintendent of Wesley Memorial; Dr. Joseph Broughton, superintendent Baptist Tabernacle; John S. Spalding, superintendent Second Baptist and secretary of the Superintendents' Congress; C. V. LeCraw, superintendent First Christian, and W. E. Newell, superintendent Inman Park Presbyterian.

$1,000 MORE WILL FINISH BLIND FUND

The campaign was started three weeks ago, and the aim is to keep it until the Home is free of debt, and prepared to continue its work of teaching the blind the means of earning a living—and then providing them with work.

"However, I will marry any man who gives me two pearls as large as my eyes."

FOR DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR OR ITCHY SCALP—25-CENT DANDERINE

Girls! Girls! Save Your Hair! Make It Grow Luxuriant and Beautiful.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff, you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fashian, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. It eventually—why not now?—Adv.

A Bachelor's Diary His affair with Sally Spencer grows more serious.

By MAX

RECEIVED that letter from Sally Spencer, throwing the responsibility of our future conduct on our shoulders, and I have not answered it. My heart cries for a decision begging her to come home; my head counsels against it, and when one is part for the head puts forward arguments that are more convincing than those urged by the heart.

leged obligations she owes to love instead of the duty she owes to herself. Oct. 25--Sally asked if she had fallen from the pedestal on which I had placed her when she made the most human appeal for the right to prove her love for me. I think, somehow, that her letter has made me value her a little higher. I am not shocked, as I should be shocked. On the contrary, being a man with blood in his veins and not at all like the heroes made of paper and through whose veins there dribbles a little printer's ink, I experienced a pleased surprise.

crisply cool. We walked rapidly, and the exertion brought the prettiest red to her cheeks. I saw several men turn and look at her with admiration, and looked to punch their heads for doing it, but if she noticed their admiration she gave no sign. Once, while standing on a corner, trying to decide between a wax works exhibition and a vaudeville show, realizing that we would not have money for both, a friend came up with his machine. He had seen my pretty companion first, and was so absorbed in admiration that he narrowly escaped running into a telegraph pole. I hoped he would break his head, but he didn't. He made a quick stop, jumped to the pavement, and then, as he started toward her, saw me. I cannot decide if the look he gave me was embarrassed at being detected in what he had hoped to make a pleasant flirtation, or relief at the prospect of an introduction. At any rate, I disappointed him, for, catching my companion by the hand, I made a quick plunge for a car that was passing, caught it, lifted her on and we were going in a direction directly opposite from that we had planned before she had time to catch her breath.

Their Married Life Helen scorns a taxi and is sorry for it.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

THE rain was coming down in sheets and the wind almost tore the umbrella from Helen's grasp. "Oh, this is dreadful!" as she stepped in a swirling puddle, splashing the water up over her shoes. "I suppose we should have taken a taxi." "If only it doesn't spot this suit," complained Louise, holding her clinging skirt above her ankles. They had reached the corner now, but there was no car in sight. "Let's stand under here," running to a sheltered doorway. "Oh, I hope it won't hurt your suit," apologized, as Louise resentfully shook her wet skirt.

until quarter after. We've got to get out of these things." Helen led the way to her dressing room and switched on the light. "Now let me have your coat," taking a hanger from her wardrobe; "and take your skirt off. I'll have Nora hang that in the kitchen." But Louise's blue serge coat had faded through the lining on to her silk waist. There were blue smudges on the shoulder and sleeve. "Take it off quick--I'll put it right to soak in cold water. It's all my fault. Oh, I can't tell you how sorry I am!"

out in all that storm?" he demanded. "And you didn't take a taxi?" "Oh, yes, I know dear, we should have taken one, but when we started I didn't dream it would rain so hard." Warren turned to Louise with an impatient shrug. "It's almost impossible to get Helen into a taxi. It's her pet economy. All the times we were in Paris--cheap cabs are there--I don't think she ever took one unless I was with her." Helen flushed, for she knew the Louise already thought she had been penurious about the cab. "Nora now served the coffee in the library, and Helen left Louise to talk to Warren, while she looked after her clothes. "The skirt and dried on the radiator and Nora had pressed it to look like new. Almost all of the stains had come out of the shirtwaist, and Helen herself ironed it dry. Then she curled the bedraggled feather with the back of a paper cutter. "Oh, what you mind Warren's house slippers--just until you're dry!"

When Papa Is Hurt

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax: My father got his finger smashed in one of those revolving doors the other day--it wasn't badly smashed--just bruised a little, but he came home from the office and had every one of us at home flying around for hours taking care of him. I had seen my mother so sick that she could scarcely stand, get up and smile and do her best to look pleasant when she heard my father coming. It makes me mad to see a man such a baby--but mother says I ought not to be mad about it, because they are all that way and they can't help it. I'd hate to think that the man I marry is going to be like that--do you think he will be? DISTURBED.

love and sympathy and petting and forgiving, and when she gives him those things she gives him what he needs and what he unconsciously craved for. He has to fight all day in business, and he has to pretend to be energetic and resourceful and tireless and quick-witted and good humored and generous and big hearted--a kind of soul among human beings. When he gets home to the woman he loves he wants to throw off the mask and be what he really is all the time--an anxious, timid, well-meaning, affectionate child. What They Are. The cleverest men in the world, the men who do the great things that the women who treat them like little boys could never do are the most boyish and dependent upon the women of their private life for love and sympathy. Really great people are always in their hearts very simple. Now, disturbed, when you fall in love with a man, you make up your mind that if there is anything in him at all he will be a man among men, and when he comes home to you he'll be a boy. Don't be angry with him for it, be glad of it. Be proud that, no matter how big he is in the world, at home he is just yours to comfort and console and take care of, with all the love and tenderness and forbearance that is in a woman's loving heart.

The Defense. Farmer Hiram sold butter to the village grocer and took sugar in exchange. It seemed to the grocer that the sugar he was getting was short weight, so he went over to the grocery store to make a complaint. "Look here, Mr. Jones," he said, "it seems to me you're giving me short weight sugar." "No," said Jones, in a dry voice, "no that can't be, for in measuring out that sugar of yours I always use a pound of your butter as a weight."

The Large Portion.

He had taken her out to supper, hoping and trusting that she wouldn't eat very much, but she ordered some pheasant with trimmings. "Why, George," she remarked later on, "you're not eating any of this bird. Won't you have some?" "My share's coming," replied he mournfully. "I got the bill."

An Anniversary.

A man may be rough-looking and yet have a touch of sentiment about him. A ragged, ill-kept looking man appeared at the door of a woman's home, and in pleading tone asked: "Have you a piece of cake, lady, to give a poor man who hasn't had a bite for two days?" "Cake!" echoed the woman in surprise. "Isn't bread good enough for you?" "Ordinarily, yes, ma'am. But this is my birthday," explained the tramp.

HOME AT LAST

Nora opened the door for them with a cry of dismay. "Put these umbrellas in the bath tub, Nora. And don't serve dinner."

That's No Lie.

"I want you to understand that I got my money by hard work." "Why, I thought it was left you by your uncle." "So it was, but I had hard work getting it away from the lawyers."

The Man Who Picks Winners Is Always a Hero Till He Tosses a Lone Bloomer

GEORGIAN SPORTS COVERED by EXPERTS

PREAS THINKS S. I. A. A. RULING VERY UNJUST

Jim Was Careful to Protect Himself Against Professionalism. Hard Blow to Tech.

The Jackets' hard luck story did not come until late, but when the news reached Jim in the Yellow Jacket hive now, you speak a whole mouthful. Coach Heisman, Assistant Coach Alexander, the team, and all the student body are in a very melancholy mood to-day, Heisman being the bluest of them all. This sad feeling is caused all from the loss of one player, and a good one, Jim Preas. At the S. I. A. A. meeting Monday afternoon Preas was declared ineligible to participate in college athletics on the charge of professionalism. This was the greatest blow and caused more sorrow than any other incident that has happened to Jim in his nineteen years of existence. When the news reached Jim he did not believe it, taking it merely as a joke, but when he was convinced that it was true, he did not know what to do with himself. He has worn a sad, depressed and humiliating expression ever since.

BRINGING UP FATHER

By George McManus

POLLY AND HER PALS

Hard Work Being a Sport

JIM is a good, clean, clever sportsman. It has been the height of his ambition since early childhood to become a college athlete of the Jim Thorpe variety, but to think of his being ruled off for professionalism causes him to lose all his athletic ambition. Jim says he is unjustly accused and can not understand the condition of the case upon which he is suffering a penalty. Preas has not, or did not, receive money for athletic service, but received a scholarship from a prep school, and the prep school contends that this scholarship was awarded to him for his athletic service. Preas thought he was getting it for his general excellence in the school he attended just before this one. That is the ground upon which he was ruled out of S. I. A. A.

JIM very easily could have been a professional for he has had numerous offers to play football and baseball for money, but he would not accept any offer. He has been guarding himself against the strict S. I. A. A. rules for several years. Last year while he was at Riverside he would not even practice with the Gainesville ball players, saying that some one might say he was playing with the team and getting pay for it. Jim is very anxious to get back into the game, but no efforts are being made to get him back as the season will be closed before he could begin to get it straightened with the S. I. A. A. representatives.

THE loss of Preas is not the only blow the Jacket squad suffered. Patten is in the hospital. He had 102 degrees of fever last night. Johnson and Alexander's shoulders are slowly healing and neither will be in the game. Loeb is in bad condition, but it seems impossible to keep him out. Lucas and Trawich are still being held by the faculty.

'Parlor Baseball' Didn't Work Players Tried Being Polite Once

By O. B. Keeler. ONCE upon a time there were a couple of baseball teams that agreed to cut out all the rough stuff and be polite on the field, even to the umpire. And the umpire, on his side, agreed to be polite and gentlemanly and forbearing in his attitude toward the players. That is not a Fairy Story. It is the cold truth. It was tried once—just once. Joe Kelly tells the story, and as we got it direct from a guy, who had it straight from a guinea, who got it from Joe, we are able to offer the report of this unparalleled experiment verbatim, or, at least, as nearly so as the postage and authorities will permit. Following is it: YOU can refine baseball until the old Baltimore star, said the old Baltimore star, "and you can make a parlor game out of it by giving the umpire power of life and death but you can't make ball players stop talking in the heat of action. Baseball can be made, and is being made, gentlemanly and clean. But when it comes to the Chesterfieldian stuff between umpires and players—good-night!" That is Mr. Kelly's gentlemanly lead, following which we will endeavor to relate what happened in the afterpart. IT would seem that in the old days the Baltimore and Boston clubs decided to play one game—just one—on the basis of entire calmness, courtesy and politeness. This is the more reasonable in that on those teams were such well-known examples of mildness and gentility as Muggsy McGraw, Hughey Jennings, McCarthy, Reitz, Long and Mr. Kelly himself. And the umpire's name was Hurst—Tim Hurst. No wonder they would be polite—what? WELL, they started the "parlor game," just to show the newspapers it could be done—the writers had been knocking free oratory for some time—and the first inning went as smoothly as a saucer of cream connecting with a Persian kitten. There was no outbreak when Mr. Hurst called a strike on Tom McCarthy that was level with his ears. McCarthy's ears blushed, but he inquired, with wonderful poise: "Wasn't that ball a trifle high, Mr. Umpire?" And Mr. Hurst came back courteously: "I fear I may have erred in my judgment that time, Mr. McCarthy, but kindly overlook it." And in the second half, when Jack

Doyle slid into second in a cloud of dust and Mr. Hurst said "out!" Jack came out of the dust with his face as red as a spanked lobster, only to remember the agreement and remark, politely: "Pardon me, Mr. Hurst, but I fancied Mr. Long failed to touch me." Whereupon Herman Long, equally thoughtful, bowed and said: "I am under the impression that I did touch Mr. Doyle," just as Chesterfieldian as you please. SO far, so good—but that was only the first inning. In the second came the blow-off, and if Mr. Lord Chesterfield had been there, he undoubtedly would have fled from the scene, twittering with horror. Baltimore had three men on bases and Jennings was at bat. Reitz made a dash for the plate on what he thought was a passed ball. The Boston catcher recovered the ball and dove for the sliding Reitz, but Jennings carelessly wandered into him and spilled him a dozen feet away. "Out for interference," yelled Hurst. And then the lid came off in pieces. "You big Irish loafer," squealed Reitz, "what for am I out?" "You sorrel-topped stiff," roared the Boston catcher at Jennings. "I ought to knock your block off, and for two cents I'd do it!" "You're a piece of cheese," returned Hughey, "and this bum umpire is a porch-climber." Mr. Kelly cut in. "I thought this was to be a polite game," he began, and somebody hit him on the nose with a big mitt, so he couldn't finish. "I can lick the whole outfit," yelled Hurst, ferociously, "and I'm going to do it if yer don't play ball inside half a minute!" "You're a cheap crook," shrieked Muggsy McGraw, at which Hurst made the observation that they were all a lot of yellow dogs, quitters, and so forth. And then the surplus steam having been released in the accustomed way the game went on. But the polite stuff was off. Decidedly off.

ANOTHER FOOTBALL VICTIM. DAVENPORT, IOWA, Nov. 12.—Football claimed another victim here in the death of Ed Morrissey, captain of St. Ambrose College team. His death occurred yesterday at Mercy Hospital. He was 21 years old.

What Is To Become of Me?

That's the question that was put squarely up to Evelyn Nesbit Thaw as she faced an ordeal, such as few women survive, at the trial of her husband for the slaying of Stanford White. How she tried to answer the query forms the nucleus for another thrilling installment of the life history of this remarkable woman. It appears in as one of the many gripping tales which make up this truly great paper. There will be fact and fiction in plenty.

Where Shakespeare Went to Church

MOTOR EXHIBITS ARE SEEN BY THOUSANDS

Sousa and Band Given Great Welcome—Big Attendance Is Expected Throughout Week.

That all records for attendance at the Great Southern Automobile Show in the Auditorium will be shattered this year is a certainty. The automobile exhibitors assured this when they engaged John Phillip Sousa, "The March King," and his famous band of 52 talented musicians.

Sousa came and conquered. Thousands heard the afternoon and evening concerts of his first day here. It was the largest crowd ever at an Atlanta automobile show. The dealers were correspondingly gratified.

The new models were not neglected by the swarms of visitors. During the intermissions in the concert program they wandered through the maze of cars just out of the factory. They kept the local dealers and factory salesmen jumping to show them this advantage and that advantage of such particular make.

Society Enjoys Music.

Society turned out afternoon and evening for the concert. Smart gowns and costly jewels were on every side. And the majority seemed to be there to have a good look at the 1914 cars as well as to hear the incomparable Sousa.

It was a bit incongruous to see young women—and older—whose presence has graced many a function in Atlanta's exclusive set, perched up on the seat of a huge motor truck drinking in the music from the great stage. But they were there and hugely enjoying it, too, more so probably than as if they had been ensconced in the soft, luxurious cushions of one of the high-priced touring cars of electric.

Sousa's concerts will continue throughout the remainder of the show. He has arranged a program for Wednesday that should attract even larger crowds than greeted his initial appearance the day before. Miss Margie Gluck, violinist, and Miss Virginia Root, soprano, who won great applause Tuesday, are on the program again in the afternoon and evening.

Southern Flagman, Young Atlantan, Is Crushed to Death

Caught between two coal cars, Reese N. Waits, 23 years old, son of W. W. Waits, superintendent of freight terminals of the Southern Railway at the Inman Yards, was crushed to death at Pepperton, Ga., shortly after noon Wednesday.

News of the death of young Waits was received in Atlanta an hour later.

According to reports, Waits, who was a flagman for the Southern Railway, was assisting in coupling two cars with a chain. The drawhead of one of the cars had pulled out. Through some mistake, the engine backed too far. Waits was caught between the cars and so badly crushed that he died before medical attention could be given him.

Charleston Plans to Own Waterworks

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 12.—A plan for Charleston to own its waterworks is before the City Council. It is advocated by Alderman H. P. Williams and consists of three propositions, either to buy the present private plant under the franchise terms, or the company's terms, or build a new plant.

Spartanburg After Low Freight Rates

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 12.—A representative of the Interstate Commerce Commission will come to this city December 19 to take testimony in the freight rate case brought by Attorneys Wimble, of Atlanta, and Earle, of Greenville, in behalf of the Chamber of Commerce of this city against 25 railroad companies.

SHAFT PREPARED TO GREENE AT GUILFORD

Unveiling of Memorial to Revolutionary War Hero Will Be National Event.

GREENSBORO, N. C., Nov. 12.—The unveiling of the General Nathaniel Greene monument at Guilford Battle Ground, 6 miles north of this city, July 4 next, will be an event of national importance, and it is expected that distinguished statesmen and soldiers from the various States that were represented with Greene in the Battle of Guilford Courthouse, one of the fiercest struggles of the Revolution, will be present and take part in the exercises.

In a short time the model, which is nearing completion by the sculptor, F. H. Packer, at his studio at Rockville Center, L. I., will be inspected by a committee of the National Fine Arts Commission and a committee of the Guilford Battle Grounds Company, composed of President Paul Schenck, Congressman Stedman and Senator Overman.

The 15 acres of ground at the battle ground are undergoing extensive improvements preparatory to the big event next July. Grass is being sown, shrubbery planted and various work on the walkways and roads is being done.

The statue will have a massive granite base, surrounded by a bronze equestrian statue of Greene.

Lewis Is Retaken as Bigamist; Bondsmen Ask To Be Released

Dr. M. W. Lewis, the prominent Carrollton physician arrested in a hotel here with his patient, Miss Effie McCalmon, also of Carrollton, and later rearrested on a charge of bigamy, was taken into custody again Wednesday in the Fourth National Bank Building at the instigation of the Sheriff of Carroll County.

Dr. Lewis is out under $1,000 bond on the first charge, and when indicted by the Carroll County Grand Jury for the bigamy charge, obtained his release under $500 bond.

According to information received by Chief of Police Beavers from the Carroll County Sheriff, Lewis' bondsmen on the bigamy charge desire to be released. The physician will be returned to Carrollton Wednesday afternoon to get new bondsmen. He denies the charge that he is a bigamist.

Five Are Arrested on Moonshine Charge

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Nov. 12.—Homer Ballentine, Marvin Ballentine, Ellie Ballentine, Oscar McKelvey and James Dowdy, of Lauderdale County, were brought to Huntsville in custody of Deputy Marshal Root yesterday afternoon on charges of being implicated in the operation of an illicit distillery near Cloverdale.

The still was destroyed last July by Deputy Collector Chenault, but no arrests were made then. The five defendants were tried before Commissioner Greenleaf in this city and bound over to the next Federal Grand Jury. The men were allowed to go home and make bonds.

Gadsden to Have Militia Company

GADSDEN, ALA., Nov. 12.—W. E. Bare, who has been enlisting men for a company of State Militia, received information yesterday that the application has been received and accepted by the officers of the Fourth Regiment.

He stated that he will muster the company this week. Seventy-five men have enlisted.

ADMITS 4 WIVES, BUT HE DENIES 13

BIRMINGHAM, Nov. 12.—Robley L. Allen, who will be sentenced Saturday on his plea of guilty to the charge of bigamy, denies bitterly that he has been married thirteen times. He says that he has been married four times, two wives being dead, one living and remaining firm in her love to him, and the last girl accepting his deceit and on speaking acquaintance with Mrs. Allen.

"One of my wives was the widow of a man I killed in Birmingham twelve years ago," said Allen. "I was tried and acquitted for the killing, it being shown that the shooting was in self-defense. Fate was strange to lead me to marry the widow of the man I killed. We separated and she moved to Ohio and died there."

"Another of my wives died and two of them are still living. An attorney has worked up a list showing that I had married thirteen times, but that is an error."

Gadsden Plant Ships Pipe to Canal Zone

Good Bowels Are An Aid to Growth

Growing Children Need a Mild Laxative to Foster Regular Bowel Movement.

As a child grows older it requires more and more personal attention from the mother, and as the functions of the bowels are of the utmost importance to health, great attention should be paid to them.

Diet is of great importance, and the mother should watch the effect of certain foods. A food will constipate one and not another, and so we have a healthy food like eggs causing biliousness to thousands, and a wholesome fruit like bananas constipating many. It is also to be considered that the child is growing, and great changes are taking place in the young man or young woman. The system has not yet settled itself to its later routine.

A very valuable remedy at this stage, and one which every growing boy and girl should be given often or occasionally, according to the individual circumstances, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a laxative and tonic combined, so mild that it is given to little babies, and yet equally effective in the most robust constitution.

At the first sign of a tendency to constipation give a small dose of Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and prompt action will follow in the morning. It not only acts on the stomach and bowels, but its tonic properties build up and strengthen the system generally, which is an opinion shared by Mr. John Dey, of Bloomfield, N. J. He has a large family and at ages where the growth and development must be watched. Little Marie has thrived especially well on Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mr. Dey considers it the right laxative for young and old, and has found none better for young children.

The use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will teach you to avoid cathartics, salts and pills, as they are too harsh for the majority and their effect is only temporary. Syrup Pepsin brings permanent results, and it can be conveniently obtained of any nearby druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded. Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill. That, Mr. Dealer, is what the people in your vicinity are going to do during the next three months.

Yes, if you get busy at once. Wise Dealers are right here in Atlanta now contracting for the sale of CARTERCARS.

CARTERCARS sell easier than any other automobile made. It's because they are the most simple.

A boy can drive a CARTERCAR. Your wife can demonstrate it. There is practically nothing to get out of order with the CARTERCAR Gearless Transmission.

"THE CAR WITH A CONSCIENCE"

The Continuation of a Great Success

The automobile surprise of 1913 becomes a certainty for the season of 1914.

The Oakland has been the phenomenal success of the past season.

Never before has a car received such unstinted praise.

Never before has a car been so generously admired.

Never before has a line been so easily sold. It has been the talk of the automobile world.

The history of the Oakland Motor Company has been a steady climb upward.

Starting in a small way in 1908, the business has increased steadily year after year until, for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1913, the gross receipts amounted to over ten millions of dollars.

We have been able to make this progress because we have built honest, serviceable automobiles. A company can not thrive unless it does. In this commercial age, dealing as we do, with a keen public, it is absolutely necessary to make every purchaser an "asset"—a satisfied customer who is willing to recommend his choice to friends.

Good-will is a priceless thing to have. The Oakland has it.

Don't fail to carefully inspect our exhibit at the Auto Show—you will see the prettiest and best cars in the entire show.

To Build a Model City.

That Is the Idea Now Agitating Governments. By the Time It Is Realized the City May Be Out of Date.

The American sculptor, Christian Andersen, has interested various governments, including our own and that of the Kaiser and the King of England, in a plan to build a modern international city to cost a hundred million dollars.

The matter is really seriously discussed and sites have been suggested on the New Jersey coast, the coast of Holland near The Hague, on the Mediterranean between Cannes and Monte Carlo, on the shore of Lake Neuchatel, in Switzerland; at St. Germain, just outside of Paris; in the Sea of Marmora, near Constantinople and other places.

Discuss with your family what YOU would call a model city and how you would build it, if you had a hundred millions to spend.

We are inclined to think that it would be impossible to construct a pleasing city even with unlimited money, just as it is impossible to construct a new pleasing language.

A language or a city is A GROWTH OR AN EVOLUTION LIKE AN INDIVIDUAL.

The best that humanity can do is to improve the individuals and the cities that exist.

Atlanta has accomplished wonders in the way of building, rising, as it were, upon the very ashes of war into a great metropolis of promise.

Berlin has done more, perhaps, than any other city in existence in the way of general improvement.

San Francisco is a marvel of the world in her sudden uprising from the fire, but it is not a new city, for the City IS THE SPIRIT OF THE CITIZENS, and that spirit was there. Fire could not destroy it.

Alexander the Great planned a really remarkable combination of a model city and a piece of gigantic self-glorification.

His modest scheme was to cut a statue of himself out of solid mountain of rock, a statue so vast that the outstretched arm would support wide boulevards and aqueducts AND THE CITY BE BUILT IN THE PALM OF THE STATUE'S HAND.

That notion of building a city and having the city in the palm of your own hand was worthy of Alexander. He might have carried out the plan if he had combined with the power to rule others THE POWER TO RULE HIMSELF—that is to say, in plain language, if he could have kept from getting drunk. The getting drunk exposed him to disease and disease killed him, and the statue holding a city in its hand was not completed.

If the nations should combine to build a model city it would be very interesting, very pretty.

But one single villa perched high on stone walls above a deep cut street in a corner of Rome would supply more food to the human imagination than the entire model city.

And one queer little village like La Tourbie, perched on a rock and overlooking the Mediterranean, would be more interesting than forty model cities.

As a matter of fact, the model city or otherwise, as we now know it, will, in our humble opinion, before long, be only a memory like the nest of the roc that used to lay eggs as big as your market basket, or the colonies of beavers.

The flying machine will mean the end of the city for dwelling purposes.

The day is not far distant when what we now call the city will be a great office building with a gigantic factory to which the workers will fly in the morning from their separate homes on the hills and the plains far distant, and from which they will fly at night—like sea gulls flying to and from their work.

Men have gathered in cities because walking is painful and travel is slow. Human beings now living will see the workers of the humble kind travel a hundred miles in twenty-five minutes or less, from their little houses and their little patch of ground, to the big industrial beehive or city in which their work will be done.

The city will be a building perhaps a mile or more high, with landings at various altitudes.

The late Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, used to talk about tearing down the old building which has since burned down, and building another building. He said that if he was not afraid of being laughed at he would certainly plan a tower for a landing place for flying machines.

Those living will see such towers and many of them.

They will see the day when all men and women will go to their work THROUGH THE ROOF INSTEAD OF FROM THE GROUND FLOOR.

The high hills now abandoned will be covered then with individual palaces and model apartment houses.

The city with its dirty, dusty, filthy, crowded streets will vanish and in a material way civilization will begin.

If you want to make money for your great-grandchildren buy hill tops cheap. They will be choice real estate before very long.

Give Your Wife a Check Book!

That Is, if You Are Able. At Any Rate, Give Her an Allowance. Don't Haggle Over Money!

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

MANY men of wealth are generous in allowing their wives to run large bills; to dress well; to entertain well; to travel, and buy expensive things; yet their wives are not allowed to have a check book or a purse of their own.

Men of this type have produced the suffragettes and militants. The moment there is any haggling or arguing over money in a home, love dies. It can not live in such a sordid atmosphere.

Are you amiable when at home, and do you look for things to praise in your family? Or are you silent about everything which pleases you, only mentioning the matters which are not satisfactory?

Do you make the same effort to be agreeable to your wife and children that you make to the guests you entertain?

Or are your best manners all for the transient comer?

Have you stopped to consider that there is nothing on this earth plane so important as making your home the very brightest and most agreeable spot on earth, and that by conserving all your best qualities for such a purpose you will inspire your wife and children with a desire for co-operation?

It is not necessary for you to give all your leisure time to your home; you can have your club life, and your outdoor sports, and still be the king of the home circle.

When you are at home, be all there; in mind and heart and body.

Enter into whatever interests your wife and children; and let them enter into your outside pleasures by talking about them.

Husbands and wives may be very happy with separate tastes and interests oftentimes, so long as they keep close in heart and do not show a bored or jealous spirit regarding these matters.

You may be devoted to golf and your wife to music; but you can take pleasure in her pleasure and she in yours if you know how to use tact, the tact which comes from unselfishness and love.

Is the hour when you reach home the best hour for your family or the worst?

Do they anticipate your coming or dread it?

Is your conversation pleasant and entertaining and agreeable to the table?

Would your children seek you for a confidant or would they hide their troubles from you, fearing your lack of sympathy?

What sort of a husband and father do you think you are?

And what is the use of life anyhow if you are not making every effort to succeed in those important roles?

Letters From the Readers of The Georgian

A GOOD DISCUSSION. Editor The Georgian:

I am a lawyer and have been practicing in the State of Georgia for a good many years. I have been interested in the discussion of the Georgia system of jury trials which is taking place in your columns. It is a good discussion. It is bound to do good, because it is calling the attention of the people to the need of a change in the manner of administering our laws.

dences of activity which I saw upon every hand. The thing which impressed me most, however, was the universal cordiality which I met on every hand. From street gamins to business men I found all eager to aid a stranger, and I wish in this letter to express my unbounded admiration for your city and its people.

BOSTON, MASS.

ON THE RIGHT LINE. Editor The Georgian:

I was greatly impressed the other day reading the signed editorial by Mr. Hearst in which he declared that direct nominations, the Massachusetts ballot, the initiative, the referendum and the recall were the electoral reforms needed to complete the destruction of the "machine" system. The editorial in question was a splendid effort. It was on the right line. I agree heartily in the idea expressed.

successfully the public interest.

The theory has also been maintained that thorough scholarship and the possession of a philosophical cast of mind disqualify one for mastering the concrete problems of administration.

It is in the interest of the un-disciplined and unphilosophical to give the largest possible currency to a notion of that kind and there is truth in the opinion that a man may be educated away from the concrete as well as educated toward it; but, that the trouble lies not in the fact of education, but in the method of it, is abundantly demonstrated by the kind of administration that is being given to the country by the man that the people discovered in New Jersey, and in the classic shades of Princeton University.

It is not knowledge that spoils people for practical efficiency, but knowledge that has not been carried through the digestive process by which it becomes converted into wisdom.

Garrett P. Serviss

Writes on The Mystery of the Wind

The Rapid Changes in the Wind's Velocity, as Revealed by Instruments, Explain the "Holes in the Air" So Dangerous to Aviators.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SINCE man has provided himself with wings he has learned more astonishing things about the air than were dreamt of in his old philosophy. He has HAD to learn them in order to make traveling safe on his new aerial highway. The wind was almost a complete mystery until aeronauts began to make close acquaintance with its strange moods and vagaries. The startling experiences of aviators have stimulated the anemometrists, i. e., the wind-measurers, to fresh investigations which have had surprising results.

Consider, for instance, these things which have recently been found out by the Aerotechnic Institute of the University of Paris: If two anemometers (wind-measurers) are placed side by side about 72 feet above ground when a wind of from 33 to 48 feet per second is blowing, the most remarkable differences in the velocity of the wind are observed. If the anemometers are only 10 inches apart, both usually show nearly the same wind velocity; but if the distance between them is increased to about 32 inches one will sometimes show a wind velocity of 10 feet per second more rapid than that shown by the other. But this difference lasts only for an instant.

If the distance between the anemometers is increased to 23 or 24 feet, the usual length of an aeroplane, the differences in the velocity of the wind shown by them are occasionally enormous, but of very brief duration. This must clearly produce a racking effect upon an aeroplane, which may be disastrous, for one end of it may for a second or so experience a resistance double that felt at the other end.

But this is by no means all. Not only does the wind vary in this capricious fashion at places a few feet or a few yards apart, but it varies with equal violence and suddenness at the same point, as is proved by fixing a single anemometer at a height of 75 or 100 feet above the ground and observing the successive changes in its indications of velocity. Thus it has been found that a wind whose average velocity was about 38 feet per second maintained that velocity for as much as ten successive seconds, and then, in a second and a half dropped to less than 14 feet per second, which it maintained during two seconds, after which in the course of half a second it sprang up to a velocity of 59 feet per second! It maintained the last mentioned velocity for only a single second.

In another case the velocity of the wind rose in three-quarters of a second from 26-1-4 feet to 57-1-2 feet per second.

Considering these facts, it is no wonder that aviators meet with strange accidents by running into what they call "holes in the air," for the sustaining force of the air, on account of the sudden variations of the wind, may almost instantaneously lose half its value, and then, with equal suddenness, recover, or more than recover, its former power. Such things enable any one to understand the peculiar perils that the aviator has to face

Money Is Best of Gifts

BY DOROTHY DIX.

ABOUT Christmas gift! Unless you are making a present to some one who is very rich, the one best bet for an acceptable Christmas present is money. Don't be afraid of anybody being offended by a check, or even a few dimes. They won't, and every one of us could use a little money so handily and get something we secretly pine for and can't afford. If only you would send us a little money instead of the fool thing you do send.

Say, beloved, didn't you ever on a Christmas morning sit down among the junk that your kind friends and family have bestowed upon you, and figure out what it all cost, and wish that you had all of that money to put into something that you are crazy for, something that would do you some good, and that you would rejoice in as long as you lived?

There were silly gift books, with padded backs and fine pictures that cost $10 or $15, and that nobody ever looks at a second time; there were lamps that cost $15 or $20, when your home is flooded with electric lights; there were table centers that cost $5, and scarfs that cost $2 and $4, and imitation Japanese vases that cost $1 and $2, and so on—enough money thrown away in things that were absolutely useless to you to have bought something worth while, if only you could have pooled it all, and if people had thought it proper to have sent you 75 cents or $1.50 or whatever their gift cost.

As for children, always give money if you want to make the little folks doubly happy. For one thing, no grown-up in these days knows what a child wants, and in the second place the fun that children have out of going shopping with the money gives them ten times the excitement and pleasure that any gift could afford of itself.

I used to wear myself to a frazzle buying presents for children, but I don't do it any more. I send them the money and they invariably buy something that I wouldn't have thought of in a thousand years, and their mothers tell me that they look forward to my present more than to anything else they get.

Editorial Comment on the Frank Case

(Editorial in The Chattanooga Times)

The trial judge in the case of Leo Frank, convicted of murder by an Atlanta jury, declining to grant a new trial to the condemned man, made the remarkable statement that, although he had heard all the evidence and the arguments of attorneys, he was not, for his part, able to decide that the man was either guilty or innocent; in other words, what he declared amounts to the expression of a reasonable doubt of guilt. He declined to grant a new trial on the ground that the jury had satisfied itself beyond a reasonable doubt and because the exceptions made by the attorneys for the defense did not appeal to him.

To execute a man in such circumstances would be a reflection upon the people of Georgia. If an able, experienced judge, a man capable of assimilating, understanding and weighing evidence, can not find sufficient ground for taking a man's life under the law, it would be a terrible risk for a juror to assume to take his life nevertheless. Especially does this case appeal for further consideration, not only because of the judge's extraordinary declaration, but because public sentiment had been inflamed almost to the point of insensate rage against the accused by the daily publication, under sensational headlines, accompanied by pictures intended to emphasize the horrors of the crime, of the minutest details and exaggerations of the import of the most inconsequential circumstances. This was kept up for weeks, and it was next to impossible that the public could get anything like a fair and undistorted idea of the real germane facts. Frank was the central figure in it all, and, whether intended or not, all the force of the prurient newspaper campaign landed full against him.

In such circumstances justice demands at least a remanding and a retrial of the case. The State of Georgia can not afford to have one of its citizens go to the scaffold with this clearly-established doubt of his guilt existing in the mind of his judge, and which, for that reason, must inevitably impress itself upon every fair-minded man in the country. The people of the entire country are interested, because it involves a basic principle and the rights of the citizen to his life in default of positive and indubitable proof of guilt of a mortal offense.

Judge Lynch sometimes takes liberties with justice, but the department of justice of a great State can not. The Supreme Court of the State will do justice.

In-Shoots

The mirror never tells us what the neighbors see. The stepping stones to success are mighty slippery. Vulgarly never wins the admiration of even the vulgar. Discretion has cheated the undertaker out of many a job. The man who inherits goodness never seems disposed to brag about it. Some men are conscientious to the extent that they do not wish to be found out.

The real politician is not particular about the companions of slumber. Do not imagine that because a man can work on your sympathies he would always be an easy mark. Probably the most unhappy individual on earth is the near-famous man who fails to land the laurels. It is sometimes difficult to believe that honesty is the best policy when we note the success of a lot of old rogues.
