Henslee, in Letter to the Georgian, Declares His Comment Was Made After Trial.

The idea that there could have been any mistake in the dates when they overheard Juror A. H. Henslee make denunciations remarks against Leo M. Frank was dispelled by the person who has made denunciations in respect to the nature of Henslee's remarks.

It is said that the investigators of Henslee against the defendant were asked before the trial began and Henslee was known as Juror.

They said at Henslee's reply to the charges in which he seeks to establish Henslee's one of his remarks indicating prejudice and bias were made after the evidence was all in and the trial returned.

Say They're Not Mistaken.

The affiants declare that if it comes to the mind of any person that they have incidents by which they are able to fix the dates as being those of Frank's trial, there is no opportunity of mistake.

Henslee in a letter sent to The Georgian Tuesday, admitted that he had made some of the remarks which he believed were prejudicial and that they had been uttered after the trial and that he had stated evidence which he believed was prejudicial to the defendant.

He also said that he proposed to make a bit of incident at the next trial, and that he had stated evidence which he believed was prejudicial to the defendant.

Juror Henslee's Reply.

Three Henslee's letter from Henslee.

Replying to your article in reference to October 6, in reference to Messrs. Holmes, Johnson and Gray, I will say I am sorry to learn that you would go ahead and make such statements about my signatures that I had received and tried Leo M. Frank in your office per your date of July 27. Having read your deposition in Hugh Derssey's office, I will say that I spoke of the case and met your many friends in your office on September 2, which was Tuesday morning.

Sorry to think that you would charge yourself, and dating your deposition as on Oct. 27, I will say that your office on June 27, 1913, was never mentioned. As to meeting you all here, I have never done so, but say that you have misinterpreted your deposition regarding the Frank case.

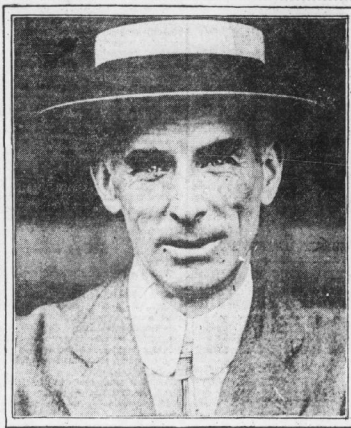

I did willingly express my opinion on September 2, Tuesday morning, to many of your friends, to whom you introduced me, and did say and express to your friends and yourselves that Leo M. Frank, from the evidence of Jim Conley, was really a pervert.

I made a statement to one of the Atlanta papers that I almost certainly knew that from the deposition received from Sparta, Ga., there would not be anything that I had expressed prior to this case similar to that of Henslee's. Regarding the fact that you and my family for years, I would like to state that you gentlemen I regard and hold in the highest esteem as men whom I believe would defend and honor me and my family, regardless of the result.

Denial Calling Them Liar.

I wish to state further from my deposition, after reading me in Hugh Derssey's office, I am surprised that men with your intelligence should come out and

PITCHERS ARE IN SHAPE--SAYS MACK

By CONNIE MACK, Manager of Athletics.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The Athletics this fall are every bit as good as the Athletics of 1911, and exports the country over declared my team of two seasons ago the very best that ever decorated a ball field. Bender and Plank are both right, despite stories to the contrary. I have a good bunch of young hurlers that I can rely on. I look for a very hard-fought series, but honestly believe that Philadelphia will again win the championship of organized baseball.

DAILY SEES DANGLING SCULPTORS

Denounces Overriding as Crying Menace—Urges Immediate Reforms.

The appeal of the thousands of children who are huddled together in overcrowded public schools was voiced Tuesday by Walter R. Daley, president of the Board of Education, in an open statement to Council.

"The only means of relieving the crowded conditions is to build more schools," he said. "Council alone has the power to provide money for this purpose. If Council does not do its duty and provide the funds, the people can't expect anything but bad conditions."

"The greatest need in our city today is greater school facilities. We renew our appeals to Council to take hold of the financing of this matter. In addition to the existing schools of Atlanta, the present conditions are a menace to the city's welfare."

Daily Crowded.

Colonel Daley gave some interesting glimpses into the schoolrooms of Atlanta in his description of the overcrowded schools. The Edward Avenue, Inman Park and Highland Avenue schools have become so filled with the students of that neighborhood that the old Nell School on Moreland Avenue has been rented for the overflow. Five grades will be maintained in this supplementary school, which will be fully opened the latter part of the week. It will greatly improve conditions in that section of the city, but the Edward Avenue, the Inman Park and the Highland Avenue Schools still will be overcrowded.

For instance, in the third grade of the Highland Avenue School there are 94 pupils, the room being so overcrowded that 24 of them have to sit on straight benches that extend all around the room, with their backs to the wall. They have no place to write. The light shines straight into the faces of many of them. That "out" in the conditions are unhealthy is proved by the children's frequent colds and parents constantly complaining about their children's health.

High Schools Bad.

Conditions in many of our schools are not much better than at these extremes. If grown folks had to attend the schools the faults in the system would long ago have been corrected. But children don't know how to make effective complaints to politicians.

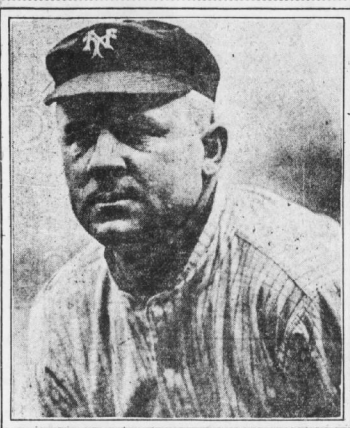

The Edgewood Avenue and Inman Park schools are perhaps in a worse condition than the Highland Avenue school. These children are being taught in damp basements. There is bad air, bad light and bad health go hand in hand. And the children who are subjected to these surroundings come from attractive and comfortable homes. Their parents would not think of allowing them to live amid such conditions at home.

That the relief of school children should be the main program of the City Council next year is shown by an outline by Colonel Daley of the number of new schools needed. They are:

New school near Moreland avenue, new school in Ansley Park, new school in East Atlanta, new school in the Great Park section, for the special benefit of the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mill children, new school in Battle Hill, new school for English and the Exposition Cotton Mill section.

Under such school conditions are desperate," said Colonel Daley. "We need new buildings for every high school in the city."

WE ARE DUE TO GET THE BREAKS--M'GRAW

By JOHN MCGRAW, Manager of Giants.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—In 1911 and again in 1912 my team was beaten by the Athletics and Red Sox because the "breaks" were against us. We had the better team both years, and we have the better team again this fall. We are due to get the "breaks" this time. With Mathewson, Marquard, Tesreau and Denance in top-notch condition I can not figure how we can lose, unless Dame Fortune absolutely rises against us for the third successive time.

NEW YORK UNCERTAIN AND BETS LITTLE AS GREAT SERIES OPENS

By Billy Smith

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—There doesn't seem to be any more interest in the World Series in this big town than there was in that little fracas between the Crackers and the Gulls about a month ago in Atlanta. But, of course, there couldn't be. It was just about as hot there as it ever gets to be.

The feeling here seems to be very much the same as it was in our town when the boys were making their final dash for the flag.

I don't believe I ever saw less certainty about a World Series than there is about this one. Even in 1911, when everybody that really was thinking about it was sure the Athletics would win, the Giants' supporters were going around waving big wads of yellow backs and offering odds.

Maybe the things that happened in 1911 and 1912 have done the fans good. They seem to realize that their pets can be locked—and once you get that into the head of the average bug, he isn't likely to go out and mortgage the family sewing machine to bet on the result.

Now, before our party left Washington—we came up here in Clark Griffith's automobile, and had a fine trip—I circulated a bit and found everybody confident that the Athletics would win. That was largely because the Senators, even with the great Johnson, couldn't stop the Mackmen in the season's race. Washington people fear and respect the Athletics.

I don't know yet what the sentiment is in Philadelphia, but I hear that the same air of uncertainty is keeping the bets down to freak proportions as to who will get the most home runs, or whether the pitcher will win, or something like that. It's that way in New York, too.

Looks Like Matty and Bender.

As usual, the dope favors Matty and Bender to start the ball rolling. I agree with the odds, but I think Mack would do well to avoid Eddie Plank at the Giants' first day, which naturally would call for Marquard to pitch against him. Still, it looks like another battle between the famous old slab pitcher, and it ought to be worth watching.

The latest I could get from headquarters was that Snodgrass would not be in the Giants' line-up today, but that Doyle was all right and would play.

Personally I don't think the absence of Snodgrass will hurt the Giants' chances. Snoddy is a good ball player through the season, and I would like to have him on my club. But there seems to be a fix on him when it comes to a World Series. His back seems to run out about October 4. And the old saying about pitchers holds pretty well with any ball player—"I'd rather have a lucky pitcher than a good one."

When Snodgrass on the bench, Art Shaffer, of course, will be in the field. Art is a fine ball player and a good hitter. But the main effect of that arrangement will be to get Herzog into the game, which could not well be done with Snoddy in the game.

Smith Lands Herod.

This Herzog fellow is one of the best World Series players in the game, the way I look at it. In "World Series player" I mean a chap who has not shined much through the season, but is a plunger always on the job, but not sensational. But when a big event, or a crucial series, comes up, why, that type of player suddenly goes crazy, as the saying is. He feeds like a wizard

In addition to the exercises, a parade around the room, with their backs to the wall. They have no place to write. The light shines straight into the faces of many of them. DENATURED TANGU EVEN NOW UNDER A BAN

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—The Tango in its most approved and censored form has been taboed in the Chicago public schools. The word "tango" is under a ban by order of Supt. Ella Plank Young today.

SOUTHERNER SAYS THE ATHLETICS' HURLERS WON'T BE ABLE TO GO THE ROUTE.

As for Connie Mack's chances, I think that they are slim, chiefly because Bender and Plank will not be able to go the route, and I do not think that he has any reserve pitching strength of the proper caliber. Brown, Bush and Hoack will not deliver, but it is possible that Shawkey will pitch a good game. I do not think much of Denance, either, with regard to World Series pitching timber. It is true that he has pitched better this year, but after he wins one or twice from a team they begin to get on to his delivery.

HIT DEAD BY FRANK JUROR

Henslee, in Letter to The Georgian, Declares His Comment Was Made After Trial.

Standing emphatically by their sworn affidavits that A. H. Henslee, one of the men who found Leo M. Frank guilty of the murder of little Mary Phagan, had expressed violent opinions against the prisoner before the trial, John Holmes, S. M. Johnson and Will Gray, of Sparta, Tuesday attacked the accused juror's defense.

The three Sparta men declared they were absolutely certain that Henslee made the statements as well as the defense boys to secure a new trial from Judge Down before the case came up to the Fulton court, because they say Henslee made the remark that he had been summoned as a juror and might be selected as a juror.

Henslee, in a letter sent to The Georgian Tuesday, admitted that he had made some of the remarks credited to him, but asserted that they had been uttered after the trial and that he had stated explicitly that he believed the testimony of the juror made on the stand.

Henslee said that he proposed to ask a bill of indictment at the next grand jury against Julius A. Lehman, one of the persons who made a declaration because of Lehman's alleged opinion to represent Henslee as a juror.

Juror Henslee's Reply. Here is Henslee's letter from Sparta.

Replying to your article in reference to Henslee, Holmes, Johnson and Gray, I will say I am sorry to think that you would go about making such statements as you give your signatures that I had remarked and tried Leo M. Frank for your office per your date of July 27. Having read your deposition in High Dorsey's office, I am sure that I spoke as you state and did not say my friends in your office on September 2, as you state Tuesday morning.

Surely to think that you would accuse yourself, and dating your deposition as you did, either July 27 or June 27, I will say I was in your office on June 27, either in train, but the Frank case was never mentioned. As to reading you all letters, I have never done so, but I do say that you have misquoted your file. I did willingly express my views regarding the Frank case on September 2, Tuesday morning, met many of your friends, to whom you introduced me, and did say and express to your friends and yourselves that Leo M. Frank, from the evidence of the case, was really a pirate.

I made a statement to one of the Atlanta papers that I almost positively knew that from the deposition received from Sparta, Ga., there would not be anything that I had expressed prior to this case similar to that of Henslee. Regarding the fact that you have reported that you were present at my trial, I would like to state that you gentlemen, except as men whom I believe would defend and honor my name and my family, regardless of their sentiment.

Denies Calling Them Liars. With a state further from my deposition, after reading same in High Dorsey's office, you expressed that men with your signatures should come out and in a way request a reply, as you have never. The fact is, you got your data wrong.

Ryan Will Bare Sulzer Plea To Barnes

Court of Impeachment Finally Decides to Consider Governor's Appeal to Republicans.

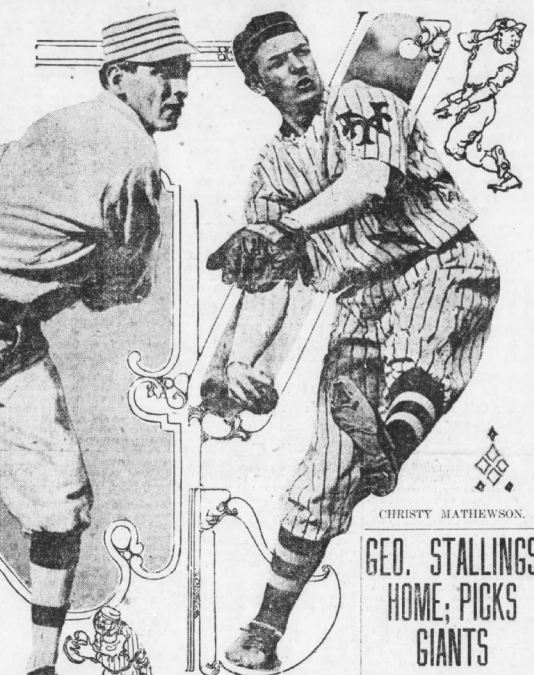

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 7.—The court of impeachment in the trial of Governor William Sulzer today decided in executive session to submit the testimony of Allan A. Ryan, son of the tobacco trust magnate, relative to attempts made by the accused State Executive to have the Republican members of court influenced by their State leaders Senator Kilbo, Root and William Barnes.

During Monday's session Ryan had testified that Sulzer had asked him to appeal to Senator Root and have Barnes wield this influence. President Judge Cullen had heard this testimony and had been upheld on appeal from the decision.

Senator Brown, Republican leader of the Senate majority, however, introduced a fight to have this testimony and further testimony as to political deals involving the Republicans entered in the records. He was successful. The vote upon which the court reviewed itself was 41 to 14, immediately after the decision of the court had been announced, and Ryan was recalled to the stand.

NEW YORK UNCERTAIN AND BETS LITTLE AS WORLD SERIES OPENS

By Bruy Smith, Manager Atlanta Team.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The National Baseball Commission was notified at 10:30 o'clock that the early showers had had no effect on the field at the Polo Grounds. At the same time the Weather Bureau gave assurance that no heavy rains would fall during the day.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—There doesn't seem to be any more interest in the World Series in this big town than there was in that little fracas between the Crackers and the Gulls about a month ago in Atlanta. But, of course, there couldn't be. It was just about as hot there as it ever gets to be.

I don't know yet what the sentiment is in Philadelphia, but I hear that the same air of uncertainty is keeping the bets down to freak proportions as to who will get the most hits, or stolen bases, or whether this pitcher will win, or something like that. It's that way in New York, too.

Betting Very Light, With No Odds Given

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Betting on the outcome of the game today between the Giants and Athletics and on the series was light, despite rumors of enormous wagers. The feeling here seems to be very much the same as it was in our town when the boys were making their final dash for the flag. I don't believe I ever saw less certainty about a World Series than there is about this one. Even in 1911, when everybody that really was thinking about it was sure the Athletics would cop, the Giants' supporters were going around waving big wads of yellow backs and offering odds.

GEO. STALLINGS HOME; PICKS GIANTS

Augusta, Ga., Oct. 7.—George Stallings, of the Boston Braves, quietly eased into Augusta yesterday from the North and an equally quiet arrival in the afternoon for his plantation at Hadcock, Ga. The "baseball scholar" was asked about the World Series.

"The Giants will win," opened Stallings, "although it will be a great struggle. I am making this forecast on a hope, not on sentiment, for with Larry Doyle in shape I am confident the Braves will have a made the best of it. I expect to see Matty much stronger than last year, and he and Duke Marquard will battle the Mack-nuts. I am sure."

"As for Connie Mack's chances, I think that they are slim, chiefly because Bender and Plank will not be able to go the route, and I do not think that he has any reserve pitching strength of the proper caliber. Brown, Bush and Hoack will not deliver, but it is possible that Shawley will pitch a good game. I do not think much of Donmore, either, with regard to World's Series pitching. It is true that he has; my club takes this year, but after he wins once or twice from a team they begin to get on to his delivery."

Asked about his own team, Stallings modestly stated that he had done fairly well this year. He said that he expected to finish in the first division in 1914, although he would make no predictions about a pennant for his Braves either next season or the season after.

Stallings' sentiment seemed to be here, something he hasn't done in years, it is said. But it wasn't a discussion of baseball that caused his return to relax into a smile, but it was talk of a big tree of cotton at Hadcock which he is getting 14 cents per pound for as far as he picks it out.

'HOME-RUN' BAKER'S 'MOUNTY' PUTS 'SOUTHWEST' TO FLIT

By Billy Smith
Manager, New York Atlanta Team.

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 7.

With 46,000 roaring fans jamming the stands, the Giants and the Athletics met this afternoon to do battle in the first game of the World Series of 1913.

M'Graw led off with a surprise for the thousands of fans who were sure no one but Matthewson, the "Old Master," would open the series. The fox "Little Napoleon" sent Rube Marquard to the mound to start the first game.

Tommy Mack was the general opinion, selected as Chief Bender to carry the money in the "jump game" shodgrass was not in the line-up. Shaffer having his job in center field, Herzog pitched third in Arlie's place.

M'Graw shifted his batting order, also sending Merkle far down the line to a station below Chief Meyers. Burns, the young outfielder, was in the "clean-up" position.

Kion was umpiring back of the bat, with Egan, of the American League, on the bases. Higley was in right field and Connolly in left field to watch the foul and fair hits down the lines.

FIRST INNING.

Murphy first up for the Athletics, hit a long fly to Bert Murray, which the giant outfielder took easily. Win one strike on him. Orling singled sharply to left, a fine drive past Merkle. With one strike on Collins, Orling strayed off and Marquard pitched him nearly out with a snap throw to Merkle. Then Collins panned a single to center, and the mighty Baker advanced to the plate. The crowd sat back and held on with both hands but Frank's best was a high fly to Burns. NO RUNS, TWO HITS, NO ERRORS.

A terrific roar greeted Shaffer as he stepped to the bat to lead off for the Giants. He jockeyed with Bender, getting him down in the hole, with two strikes and three balls. Then he tied to Murphy, and the crowd groaned. Doyle waited for a ball and on the second pitch sent to Strunk in deep center. With one strike and two balls called, Fletcher got the first hit for the Giants, a pretty single to left field, and the crowd exploded in a vast ovation. The roar flattened out as he tried to steal and was winged, Schang to Collins. NO RUNS, ONE HIT, NO ERRORS.

SECOND INNING.

Melniss fouled off one pitch and then hit to Herzog, who pegged him out at first on a close play. Strunk fouled off two, watched a ball sail past him, and then fanned. Barry hit to center, and Herzog pitched to Herzog, who pitched to left field, and the crowd exploded in a vast ovation. The roar flattened out as he tried to steal and was winged, Schang to Collins. NO RUNS, ONE HIT, NO ERRORS.

THIRD INNING.

Melniss fouled off one pitch and then hit to Herzog, who pegged him out at first on a close play. Strunk fouled off two, watched a ball sail past him, and then fanned. Barry hit to center, and Herzog pitched to Herzog, who pitched to left field, and the crowd exploded in a vast ovation. The roar flattened out as he tried to steal and was winged, Schang to Collins. NO RUNS, ONE HIT, NO ERRORS.

FOURTH INNING.

Crusade for Temperance, Better Housing and Absolute Law Enforcement Arranged.

It became known Tuesday that approximately $100,000 will be used during the next twelve months in Atlanta in a renewed and more active campaign against all forms of existing vice, as outlined in the policy recommended by the Men and Religion Forward Movement and adopted by the local Evangelical Ministers Association.

The meeting was held Monday at the Western Memorial Church, and was attended by about 75 ministers, representing every denomination in Atlanta.

The Evangelical Association, according to reports, was a unit in planning itself to stand squarely behind every movement inaugurated by the executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

My May 21 Lecker Clubs.

The meeting was the inauguration of a crusade of the old war on vice which resulted in the extermination of the epidemic, it is hoped in that it will include a general campaign for temperance, better housing conditions and absolute law enforcement.

There is likelihood of the war being directed against the locker clubs of the city was also indicated, although no members of the committee would discuss this feature of the contemplated campaign.

The Rev. W. S. Brown, pastor of the English Lutheran Church, and chairman of the Evangelical Ministers Association, and Marion Jackson, chairman of the executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, declared Tuesday the general reform campaign inaugurated a year ago would be prosecuted vigorously during the next twelve months, not only in Atlanta, but throughout the state. Neither would be ousted in regard to a rumored direct and aggressive war on the liquor traffic, including the locker clubs in Atlanta, but the Rev. Mr. Schaeffer intimated pretty broadly that some such fight as this would be made sooner or later.

"If they don't live squarely up to the law," said Mr. Schaeffer, "we will certainly allow them a share of the proceeds of our general campaign."

Mr. Jackson described the campaign as one of broad scope, including an educational campaign for temperance, better housing conditions, reform of the betterment of the convict camps and an extension of the work of the associated charities.

General Work Planned.

"The lines of work already undertaken--the teaching of the poorer children, the fighting against vice and the urging of prison reform will be continued during the coming year," said Mr. Jackson.

The first line of the work will be to secure a better cooperation between the churches and the Associated Charities in promoting better general living conditions, the minimization of poverty, etc., while the second great line of our endeavor will be the spreading of the gospel of temperance."

Timothy O'Day and O'Connell, who were to report at the park at 10 o'clock, did not reach the park until nearly noon. The impatient crowd remained in the park during a downpour until Judge Marcus Neumann, who represents the National Commission, announced the postponement of the game.

Denial Made by Frank Juror Is Attacked

Standing emphatically by their sworn affidavits that A. H. Hendon, one of the men who found Leo M. Frank guilty of the murder of little Mary Phagan, had expressed violent prejudice against the prisoner before the trial, John Holmes, S. M. Johnson and Bill Gray, of Sparta, Tennessee, attacked the accused juror's defense.

The three Sparta men declared they were absolutely certain that Hendon made the statements on which the defense hopes to secure a new trial from Judge Rhea and that the case came up in the Fulton court, because, they say, Hendon made the remarks at a station and had been summoned as a witness and might be selected as a juror.

Hendon, in a letter sent to The Georgian Tuesday, admitted that he had made some of the remarks credited to him, but asserted that they had been uttered after the trial and that he had stated explicitly that he had not followed the testimony of J. H. Conley made on the stand.

He also said that he proposed to seek a bill of indictment at the next grand jury against Julius A. Lehman, one of the persons who made a deposition, because of Lehman's alleged endeavor to represent Hendon as a perjurer.

PUPIL GIVES HERBLOOD TO SAVE WOMAN

Remarkable Surgical Operation Revives and Promises to Cure Patient Who Was Dying.

Held back from the open doors of death by one of surgery's modern triumphs—blood transfusion—Mrs. Geo. T. Kesner lies at the Red Cross Sanitarium, No. 88 Cooper street, slowly regaining her strength and the vivid color of health.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Bezzie Tyler, a student in the Southern College of Medicine and Surgery, has returned to her classes and her clinics as though it were an everyday occurrence for her to give up eight or ten ounces of her life blood for the benefit of some patient whose only hope of living lay in just this remarkable operation.

Dr. W. B. Lingo, head of the Red Cross Sanitarium, and Dr. Kesner, husband of the patient, who has offices in the Forsyth Building, agreed that blood transfusion was the only means that offered a reasonably certain hope of saving Mrs. Kesner's life. The operation is fraught with danger, not alone to the patient, but to the person who is brave enough to give the unusual quantity of blood, and the problem at once arose of finding someone willing to make the sacrifice.

Insisted on Giving Blood. Mrs. Tyler, as soon as she learned of the circumstances of the case, insisted that she be the one. She was not intimidated by the experience of some who have themselves been greatly weakened or actually imperiled in health by the great loss of blood. She was eager for the experiment and most hopeful for its success.

As a reward for her sacrifice and her professional enthusiasm, she had the great joy Tuesday of learning that the pale, weak woman in the ward at the sanitarium is happy and smiling—smiling a little wanly as yet, it is true, but filled with new life and the hope of ultimate recovery.

A delicate pink is beginning to show in the lips and under the finger nails which for many days were almost the color of death. A faint flush steals occasionally over the features. She is now able to talk without the languor and complete exhaustion that formerly attended her every effort. She is hopeful and cheerful and supremely grateful.

She knows that she has been in the shadow of death and that she has been brought back into the sunlight of life by the courage of a fellow-being and the skill of modern surgery.

Praises Heroic Woman.

"It is all very wonderful," she said feebly Tuesday to a visitor. "I can not quite understand the mysteries that these doctors have solved, but I know that I feel so much better and so much stronger than I did before. I never can thank Mrs. Tyler enough. It was very good and noble of her."

Mrs. Tyler did not wish to look at her in this manner at all.

"Why, it wasn't such a disagreeable experience," she declared. "Of course, I felt a little weak and faint after it was over, but that is all. I am so glad Mrs. Kesner is getting better. Isn't it grand?"

Another transfusion will be made Thursday or Friday at the sanitarium and Mrs. Tyler again will give up about eight ounces of her blood.

LATEST NEWS

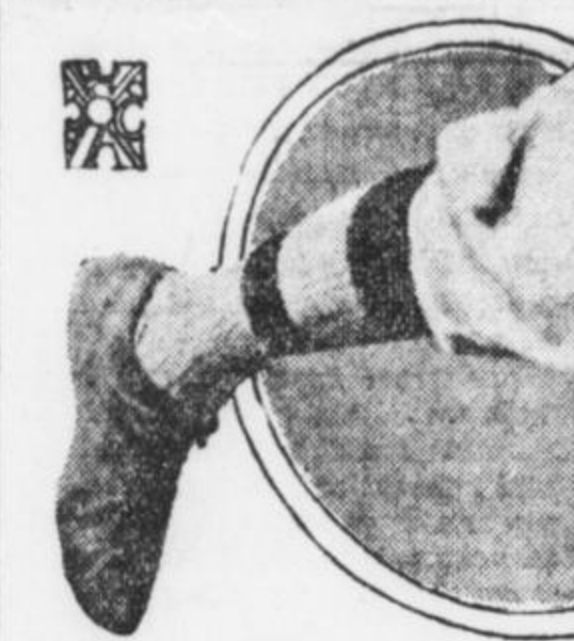

In a spirited word battle between Mayor Woodward and J. O. Cochran, president of the park board, the projected $8,000 refreshment and public comfort stand at Grant Park was lost at a meeting of the commissioners Tuesday afternoon. The stand was intended to replace the one which burned some weeks ago. The park board, however, at present has $2,500 in its treasury. Mayor Woodward cited the ordinance prohibiting the city from contracting a debt which would extend into the following year, and declared that the expenditure would be unlawful. He $2,500, it was finally decided, will be spent to erect a public comfort building in Grant Park.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—The Administration currency bill to-day was denounced as the "death knell of national banks and a cause of paralysis to business," by A. Barton Hepburn, the New York financier, and chairman of the currency commission of the American Bankers' Association, which will meet in convention here to-morrow. Colonel Thomas McCrae, of Arkansas, one of the leading bankers of the Southwest, warmly defended the bill, and served notice that he would lead a fight in the convention in favor of the Glass-Owen measure. A bitter fight is in prospect.

ASSUMES GUILT CHARGED TO GOV. SULZER

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Louis A. Sarecky this afternoon supplied for Governor William Sulzer a full and sweeping defense before the high court of impeachment during which he left the witness stand to assume the role of "Jim the Penman," long enough to write the Governor's same four times to prove that he and not the Governor had signed many of the telltale check endorsements that beset the path of the defense.

Sarecky assumed responsibility for every material act relating to the article of impeachment which charges the Governor with making a false campaign statement to the Secretary of State.

Sarecky swore that the Governor told him it made no difference who signed the statement so long as it complied with the law.

"I went outside and worked on the statement for a day and a half," Sarecky testified, "and brought it to Governor Sulzer. He signed it and I took it to the notary and he signed it and mailed it to the Secretary of State."

Sarecky added that Sulzer did not read the statement and had nothing to do with preparing it.

'Big Chief' Bender, Who Won the First Of Crucial Games

CHARLES A. BENDER.

ASSUMES GUILT CHARGED TO GOV. SULZER

The meeting was held Monday at the Wesley Memorial Church, and was attended by about 75 ministers, representing every denomination in Atlanta.

The Evangelical Association, according to reports, was a unit in pledging itself to stand squarely behind every movement inaugurated by the executive committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

May Hit at Locker Clubs. While the monster campaign is a continuation of the old war on vice which resulted in the extermination of the tenderloin, it is broader in that it will include a general campaign for temperance, better housing conditions and absolute law enforcement.

That there is likelihood of the war being directed against the locker clubs of the city was also indicated, although no member of the committee would discuss this feature of the contemplated campaign.

'HOME RUN' BAKER AGAIN SWATS HIS WAY TO FAME

By BILLY SMITH, Manager Atlanta Team.

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The Athletics have the "jump game."

By a score of 6 to 4, Connie Mack's crew finished in front of the embattled Giants, battering two pitchers from the mound, and winning a free-hitting and rather sloppy game played in a heavy mist and part of the time in an actual rainfall.

Nearly 40,000 fans saw the game, swinging alternately from the heights of joy as their pets took a scanty lead to the depths of despair as "Home Run" Baker uncorked one of his celebrated fence climbers and put the count on the other side.

McGraw sprang a surprise when he sent Rube Marquard to the slab for the first game to oppose Bender. For a time it looked as if the pick was a good one, but in the fourth inning resounding blows and a misjudged fly by Shafer that gave Schang a triple put the Athletics two runs to the good. The Giants had previously collected a single tally in the third inning.

Baker's celebrated act came off in the next frame, with Collins on and two out. He hit high into the right field bleachers and even the New York crowd applauded his feat, though it looked like the certain doom of their favorites.

And so it proved. McGraw hurled his men in a desperate rally against Chief Bender in the home half of the fifth, and sound walloping sent over three runs, shooting the Giants to a place where a single run was needed to tie.

That run never came over. While yielding eleven hits, Bender was strong whenever danger threatened, and after the fifth inning the Giants had only one good chance. Then, with runners on third and first and one out, Fletcher hit into a double play.

Marquard gave way to McCormick as a pinch hitter in the fifth, and McCormick delivered the hit—as usual. Crandall succeeded the Rube and did well until the eighth, when a bunt by Collins, a single by Baker and McInnis' double counted another run. Tesreau took up the job and returned the side without another run by a fine exhibition of pitching. The Athletics could do nothing with him in the ninth, but the Giants were equally soft for Bender.

Here's the Way the Game Went, Told Play by Play

FIRST INNING. Murphy, first up for the Athletics, hit a long fly to Red Murray, which the Giant outfielder took easily. With one strike on him, Oldring singled sharply to right, a line drive past Merkle. With one strike on Collins, Oldring strayed off first and Marquard picked him neatly off with a snap throw to Merkle. Then Collins rapped a single to center, and the mighty Baker advanced to the plate. The crowd sat back and held on with both hands, but Frank's best was a high fly to Burns. NO RUNS, TWO HITS, NO ERRORS.

A terrific roar greet Shafer as he stepped to the bat to lead off for the Giants. He jockeyed with Bender, getting him finally in the hole, with two strikes and three balls. Then he fled to Murphy, and the crowd groaned. Doyle waited for a ball, and on the second pitch lifted to Strunk in deep center. With one strike and two balls called, Fletcher got the first hit for the Giants, a pretty single to left field, and the crowd exploded in a vast ovation. The roar flattened out as he tried to steal and was winged, Schang to Collins. NO RUNS, ONE HIT, NO ERRORS.

SECOND INNING. McInnis fouled off one pitch and then hit to Herzog, who pegged him out at first on a close play. Strunk fouled off two, watched a ball sail past him, and then fanned. Barry hit to Fletcher and was out at first. NO RUNS, NO HITS, NO ERRORS.

Burns got Bender in a deep hole, three and one, and then fanned, the chief showing nerve in the pinch. His first two pitches to Herzog were strikes. Then he wasted one at which Herzog declined to bite. Herzog fouled off another, watched the second ball go by, and fouled again, this time into the left field grandstand. The next pitch was ball three, after which Herzog hit to McInnis for an easy out. With a ball and a strike on him, Red Murray got his first hit against an Athletic hurler, a single to left. It was Indian against Indian, but Meyers, with two strikes on him, flied to Oldring. NO RUNS, ONE HIT, NO ERRORS.

THIRD INNING. A heavy mist began to descend out of the cloudy sky, and the Polo Grounds began to offer rather a gloomy appearance. Schang found one of Marquard's fast ones for a hard fly to Burns, who made a great running catch. With two strikes on Bender, Marquard wheeled up three wide ones, after which Fletcher took the Chief's bounce and threw him out at first. Murphy singled to right field, and Oldring hit to Fletcher, who threw to Merkle in time. NO RUNS, ONE HIT, NO ERRORS.

Merkle fouled one off, and then watched a hook pass him for strike two. He passed up a waste ball, and then bounced a single to Barry in deep shortfield, bating out the throw. Marquard laid down a suicide splash, Collins to McInnis, but Shafer's effort resulted only in a high fly to Strunk. Larry Doyle, however, came through with a single to right, scoring Merkle with the first run of the game. The huge crowd went into hysterics, and the noise was deafening. Fletcher ended the small rally with a fly to Murphy. ONE RUN, TWO HITS, NO ERRORS.

GRAIN SHORTAGE 1,250 MILLION BUSHELS

Wheat, Oats, Rye and Barley Deficiency Not Made Up by Potato Crop.

Serious shortage exists in the world's crop of grain for 1913. The supply is nearly 10 per cent less than last year. The total deficiency aggregates 1,250,000,000 bushels of the five grain staples.

Unless Russia and Argentina contribute the year with much greater yields than last year, the world's wheat production will be only about 100,000,000 bushels more than last year. This will be an increase of only 3 per cent over the supply of wheat produced throughout the world in 1912.

Of grave importance also is the European shortage in rye, because even more than wheat, it is the breadstuff of the teeming millions of Europe. Europe may have only 1,100,000,000 bushels less than last year.

I was on the train between Edison, Ga., and Atlanta, Ga. On June 6 I was on the train between Tifton and Ashburn, Ga. Regarding his statement and affidavit, I heard it as absolutely false, and furthermore wish to say I called on Mr. Lehman Saturday evening, October 4, in his place of business, and stated to him personally that the only reason I came by was to inform him that I would get a bill of indictment when the next Grand Jury convened in Fulton County to charge him with making a perjury. That was all I had to say to him, and left his place of business. Regarding all the foregoing statements, will say that it is on record that the Franklin Buggy Company's place of business is Jacksonville, Ga.

WORLD'S SERIES BEING OPENED BY EACH OF THE PLAYERS

The way I look at it, by "World's Series player" I mean a chap who may have played through the season, but a player always on the job, but not a player who has never been in a game...

Here's a funny thing that may not be noted generally. American League players will be used at St. Paul Park, and the game today and others at the Polo Grounds...

There are some slight differences, one of which I might mention—the infield fly rule.

But the Giants' habit of confidence in Bender's removal waning, and they are going to fight him to the limit.

I still like the Athletics to win this series, and I have an idea they will take the game today. But if they do not, why, they lost the first game two years ago and lost it again by winning the series.

So as much as I can see, early this morning is that the game is going to produce a huge crowd, a lot of excitement, and a good battle—unless it rains.

EVERY FOOT OF RAILWAY UNDER THE CLOSEST FOR RICH EXPRESS LOOT

Every foot of the right-of-way of the Atlantic Coast Line and connecting railroads between New York and Savannah has been searched in the effort to find a clue which might lead to the detection of the thieves who looted the Adams Express Company of $72,000 in the recent sensational robbery.

Not for a moment since the discovery of the robbery has any man who might have had the slightest opportunity of taking the money been from under the surveillance of detectives. Approximately 150 men are under suspicion, while the number of detectives of the express company and Pinkerton forces at work upon the case is all about the 17,000.

Search of the right-of-way failed to reveal the slightest trace of evidence of the robbery. Every section along the line was searched, and the entire territory was covered by the officers of the railroad employing the detectives are receiving cooperation from them.

Perhaps the hardest workers in the search for the thief are the financial men among the 150 suspected ones, who realize that only by the discovery of the guilty man will they come under suspension.

The case has already spent considerably more than $100,000 of the case.

One theory of the case which has developed strongly in the past few days is that the money never left New York. Some of the detectives adhere strongly to this belief, but this has not resulted in a stacking of the money.

That the money was in the package when it was shipped is a possibility which would not be rejected for the messenger handling the package out of New York, until after it had been revealed in a factor in the case which has resulted in the doubling of the number of detectives at work on the case.

The fact that the original package sufficient time to have the seals placed the third time, the messenger responsible for it.

When this messenger was called the attention of the next messenger to the seal.

"I wouldn't need for the package until it was revealed," he said, "but the new seals don't look any better than the others. If you don't want to accept for it, I can't say any more."

The package weighed between 16 and 20 pounds and the detective do not believe it could have been handled without attracting attention. The idea that one man alone controlled the robbery is doubted by the officers, for they do not believe any person could have succeeded in getting the money out of the package.

White Way Searched. New York's White Way has been searched with detectives on the alert for the thief, should he find in the temptation to dissipate some of his sudden wealth.

The police are reported to have been under surveillance. Even New Orleans reported as a gambling paradise of crooks, has been thoroughly searched by a force of 100 men.

Every man among the good fellows in the pursuit of White Way fully has been investigated.

The chase of $72,000 remains intact. This is the strong belief of the men working on the case. Express company employees are the most men in the world of this kind, and one of them who would like to spend money freely for fear of diverting suspicion to himself.

No express robbery, in many years has been so thoroughly investigated as this one. It is also one of the most baffling which has ever faced the Pinkerton agency.

So far there has been but one slighting hint which might give an indication of when and how the money was taken. This is a slight indication between the accounts of two men as to what one was doing during a certain period of 45 minutes.

One of the men claims to have done the thing, the man working with him says he can not remember him doing this, but is inclined to think he was doing something else.

Harry Scott on Case. Just who these men are and where they work is something which the detectives decline to disclose. It is understood, however, that the men are located at the New York and New Orleans offices of the Pinkerton agency.

PITCHERS ARE IN SHAPE, SAYS MACK

By CONNIE MACK, Manager of Athletics.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The Athletics fall are every bit as good as the Athletics of 1911, and experts the country over declared my team of two seasons ago the very best that ever decorated a ball field. Bender and Plank are both right, despite stories to the contrary. I have a good bunch of young hurlers that I can rely on. I look for a very hard-fought series, but honestly believe that Philadelphia will again win the championship of organized baseball.

HE GETS LICENSE AND SHEER

Durward Bagwell Now Has a Shattered Dream Instead of a Wife.

Monday Durward F. Bagwell, No. 45 Chapel street, an employee of a provision drug store, had a heart full of hope and a head full of plans for the future—visions of love in a cottage floated before his eyes.

Tuesday he had a reveille for a month's rent of the cottage, a contract with the furniture people to cancel a useless marriage license and a shattered dream.

His fiancée, to whom he was to have been married Monday night at 8 o'clock, became the bride of John Henry Gwyn, the son of the late Grand Park, where they will live while Mr. Gwyn pursues his vocation of driving taxicabs for his father.

The bride was Miss Jessie Brock, the 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brock, No. 45 Larkin street. Her marriage was the culmination of a romance that has traveled along the path all true love travels, being filled with quarrels and repudiation and the final return to the first love, and in which her sister, being left with a shattered dream, devoted herself to the cause of young Mr. Gwyn, and finally succeeded in persuading her brother to marry her.

Miss Brock has been employed for some time at the Benjamin-Oborn drug store, at Mitchell and Whitehall streets, as cashier in the department of which Mr. Bagwell is manager. Shortly after she went to work there she became acquainted with Mr. Gwyn, and he at once fell in love with her. A few weeks later they had a quarrel and renounced each other. About this time Mr. Bagwell began paying court to Miss Brock, and a month or so ago they became engaged.

Mr. Gwyn soon renounced his part in the quarrel, and endeavored to effect a reconciliation with Mr. Bagwell, and that the wedding date was set for Monday night at 8 o'clock. He at once wrote to his sister, Miss Brock, in his name and she and her mother and the bride went to the office of Justice of the Peace Edgar H. Orr, who performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Brock, the girl's mother, received a message that her daughter was going to be married, and immediately telephoned Mr. Bagwell, and they went to the office of Chief of Police E. J. Connelley, who ordered him to stop the wedding. Chief Connelley told Mrs. Brock that her daughter had been secured by the girl's mother and her father, and that she was now in the hands of her mother's home with her husband and left word that she was married and happy.

WE ARE DUE TO GET THE BREAKS--M'GRAW

By JOHN MCGRAW, Manager of Giants.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—In 1911 and again in 1912 my team was beaten by the Athletics and Red Sox because the "breaks" were against us. We had the better team both years, and we have the better team again this fall. We are due to get the "breaks" this time. With Mathewson, Marquard, Tesau and Demaree in top-notch condition I can not figure how we can lose, unless Dame Fortune absolutely rules against us for the third successive time.

YAM PATCH LEVY TAKES IN TOO MUCH GROUND

George Court Holds Each Potato Must Be Attached to Each Order Stick.

If for some reason or other you should wish to buy a potato patch in Georgia, you must levy on each separate and individual potato or your old levy will not stay put. That's what the Georgia Court of Appeals says, and the court ought to know about things of that kind.

The decision fixing this rule was handed down to-day in the case of Russell vs. the State, from the Louisville City Court.

Russell, it seems, recently offered the purchase of having his sweet potato patch levied on for debt, and the party proceeding, after serving the process, put a big sign in the middle of Russell's patch reading "This potato patch has been levied upon."

It is a crime in Georgia to dispose of property that has been levied on except through due process of law. Russell proceeded to "arabize" in his patch and sold many potatoes for good hard cash, the imposing and sinister sign notwithstanding.

He was convicted in the Louisville court and appealed to the Appeals court, which held that the levy covered only the potatoes in the patch, and in no other indeterminate manner. It ruled that a potato patch collected.

TRUST CONTROL OF COLLEGES IS BARED

Princeton Was Glad to Get Rid of President Wilson, Says Witness.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Senator Wesley demanded that George H. Shibley, of Washington, director of the political research bureau, be called to testify before the Banking and Currency Committee to-day, he more specifically in his statement as a professor must preach the sound money doctrine of "free exchange" of gold for silver.

Shibley then declared that President Wilson narrowly escaped removal from Princeton by a vote of the trustees, which was vetoed the short ballot system, that Edward W. Bemis of the University, was discharged because he sold the facts about the "College Gas Company," that John R. Common, of the University of Wisconsin, was discharged because he sold for Bryan, that James Allen Smith, of the University of Wisconsin, was discharged because he could not teach the traditional sound money doctrine, and that he could add indefinitely to this list.

Shibley said that when President Wilson, as President of Princeton University, took an open position in favor of the short ballot, he was guilty of heresy in the eyes of the Board of Trustees who were glad when he left the university because of the influence of his advanced ideas.

Shibley, when asked to elaborate his statement that President Wilson's views caused him to have a narrow escape from discharge, he was speaking only in a general way as he had of a number of other educators.

NEW HEIRY PRINCESS' SUICIDE

Fear Auto Accident Expose Would Link Her Name With That of Baron, Given as Cause.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—A new theory to account for the suicide of Princess Marie Louise of Romania, who killed herself recently at Heidelberg Palace, is advanced by L'Opinion.

The newspaper says that the young woman registered in September at the Ruyal Hotel at Fontainebleau as Baroness de Roman, a sister of Baron Hens von Heintzenberg, and that she was the only woman of whom the Princess committed suicide.

The young woman and Heintzenberg were married in the forest. One evening the automobile in which they were driving was overturned, and the Princess was injured. The Baroness is said to have sought the parents of the girl and paid $200,000 to insure peace.

The mysterious departure met the police to work, and they discovered that the young woman, the newspaper says, was the Princess Sophie. This news reached Heidelberg Palace, and in fear of a scandal the Princess fled to Rome.

CULZER TRIED TO REACH MURPHY, AVERS PYLE

Trust Magnate's Son Testifies Governor Tried to Have Boss Call Off Tammany.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Allen A. Ryan, son of Thomas P. Ryan, a financier and trust magnate, testified before the court of impeachment to-day that Governor Sulzer had requested him to get Delancey Pyle to see his influence with Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, to call off the impeachment trial.

This was the first time that any testimony had been brought out to show that Sulzer had appealed either directly or indirectly to the men who were to be impeached.

Ryan said Governor Sulzer told him he positively wanted Charles F. Murphy to see that he was willing to do what was right if the impeachment trial could be blocked.

When Ryan had completed his story, James A. Roschley was introduced to say that he had offered Governor Sulzer $25,000 to have the trial refused. The court by 29 to 24 refused to admit this testimony.

STILLINGS HOME; PICKS GIANTS

Southern Says the Athletics Hurlers Won't Be Able to Go the Route.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 7.—George Stillings, of the Boston Braves, quietly moved into Augusta yesterday from the North and as quietly eased out again in the afternoon for his plantation at Haddock's Ga. The "baseball sphinx" was asked about the World Series.

The Giants will win, "without strings," although it will be a great struggle. I am making this forecast on dope, not on sentiment, for my Larry Dove in shape I am confident Mrs. Dove has a chance the better of it. I expect to see Marty much stronger next year and he and Rube Marquard will battle the Braves. I am sure.

As for Connie Mack's chances, I think that they are slim, chiefly because Bender and Plank will not be able to go the route, and I do not think that he has any reserve pitching strength of the popular caliber. Brown, Bush and Hoek will not deliver, but it is possible that Shawkey will pitch a good game.

EVERY FOOT OF RAILWAY SEARCHED IN HUNT FOR RICH EXPRESS LOOT

Every foot of the right-of-way of the Atlantic Coast Line and connecting railroads between New York and Savannah has been searched in the effort to find a clue which might lead to the detection of the thieves who looted the Adams Express Company of $72,000 in the recent sensational robbery.

Not for a moment since the discovery of the robbery has any man who might have had the slightest opportunity of taking the money been from under the surveillance of detectives. Approximately 150 men are under suspicion, while the number of detectives of the express company and Pinkerton forces at work upon the case will exceed the 175 mark.

EVERY FOOT OF RAILWAY SEARCHED IN QUEST FOR RICH EXPRESS LOOT

Every foot of the right-of-way of the Atlantic Coast Line and connecting railroads between New York and Savannah has been searched in the effort to find a clue which might lead to the detection of the thieves who looted the Adams Express Company of $72,000 in the recent sensational robbery.

Not for a moment since the discovery of the robbery has any man who might have had the slightest opportunity of taking the money been from under the surveillance of detectives. Approximately 150 men are under suspicion, while the number of detectives of the express company and Pinkerton forces at work upon the case will exceed the 175 mark.

Search of the right-of-way failed to reveal the slightest trace of evidence of the robbery. Every section gang was put to work, and the entire stretch gone over minutely. The offers of heavy rewards have served as a stimulus to the railroad employees, and the detectives are receiving cooperation from them.

Perhaps the hardest workers in the search for the thief are the innocent men among the 150 suspected ones, who realize that only by the discovery of the guilty man will they come from under suspicion. The express company has already spent considerably more than $15,000 on the case.

Seals Were Faulty. One theory of the case which has developed strongly in the past few days is that the money never left New York. Some of the detectives adhere strongly to this belief, but this has not resulted in a slackening of the work to discover if it was taken anywhere along the line.

That the seals upon the package were in bad shape and the package would not be received for by the messenger handling the package out of New York until after it had been revealed is a factor in the case which has resulted in the doubling of the number of detectives at work on the New York end. The resealing, it is said, was not done in much better time than the original, but without sufficient time to cover the seals placed the third time, the messenger received for it.

When this messenger was relieved he called the attention of the next messenger to the seals. "I wouldn't receipt for the package until it was resealed," he said, "but the new seals don't look any better than the others. If you don't want a receipt for it, I can't blame you, but it is not any fault of mine." The new messenger was busy, though, and is said to have remarked, "I guess it's all right," and accepted for it. The package weighed between 76 and 80 pounds, and the detectives do not believe it could have been handled without attracting attention. The idea that one man alone committed the robbery is scouted by the officers, who do not believe one person could have succeeded in getting away with the money.

White Way Searched. New York's White Way has been thronged with detectives on the alert for the thief, should he yield to the temptation to dissipate some of his sudden wealth. The places of amusement of every city along the line have been under surveillance. Even New Orleans, regarded as the spending paradise of crooks, has been thoroughly searched by a horde of sleuths. Every man among the good fellows of the larger cities who has displayed any loosening of his purse strings in the pursuit of White Way folly has been investigated.

The package of $72,000 remains intact. This is the strong belief of the men working on the case. "Express company employees are the most model men in the world at this time," one official said. "There is not one of them but who would hesitate to spend money freely for fear of diverting suspicion to himself."

No express robbery in many years has been so thoroughly investigated as this one. It was also one of the most baffling which has ever faced the Pinkerton agency.

So far there has been but one slight thing which might give an indication of when and how the money was taken. This is a slight discrepancy between the accounts of two men as to what one was doing during a certain period of 45 minutes. One of the men claims to have done one thing; the man working with him says he can not remember him doing this, but is inclined to think he was doing something else.

Harry Scott on Case. Just as these men are and where they work is something which the detectives decline to disclose. It is understood, however, that the two men are located at the New York end of the line. It was also one of the most baffling which has ever faced the Pinkerton agency.

"So far there has been nothing discovered which might give us any definite line to work upon, but with the ground so well covered as the Pinkertons and special agents of the Adams Express Company have covered it, I do not believe there is a chance for the persons stealing the $72,000 to escape," said Superintendent J. H. Kelly of the Pinkerton branch in Atlanta.

"I doubt if any one case in the history of express robberies has been investigated more carefully than this while the immense amount of territory in which the robbery might have occurred, has made it doubly hard to work. Still, the guilty one will eventually be detected is my belief."

'PITCHERS ARE IN SHAPE,' SAYS MACK

By CONNIE MACK, Manager of Athletics. NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The Athletics this fall are every bit as good as the Athletics of 1911, and experts the country over declared my team of two seasons ago the very best that ever decorated a ball field. Bender and Plank are both right, despite stories to the contrary. I have a good bunch of young hurlers that I can rely on. I look for a very hard-fought series, but honestly believe that Philadelphia will again win the championship of organized baseball.

ATHLETICS BEAT GEO. STALLINGS HOME; PICKS M'GRAW'S MEN IN OPENER GIANTS

"Home Run" Baker, of Swat Southerner Says the Athletics' Fame, Repeats, and Is Big Hurlers Won't Be Able to Factor in Team's Victory. Go the Route.

Continued From Page 1. Shafer was out, Collins to McInnis, the runners advancing a base each. Doyle was out, Berry to McInnis, Merkle scoring and McCormick taking third. Fletcher singled off Bender's slings, scoring McCormick. Doyle went to second. Burns singled to center, scoring Doyle. Herzog lifted a high one to Collins. THREE RUNS, FOUR HITS, ONE ERROR. SIXTH INNING. Otis Crandall replaced Marquard on the slab, and Strunk fled to Shafer. Barry fled to Shafer, after the count was two and two. With the count two and three, Schang fled to Burns. NO RUNS, NO HITS, NO ERRORS.

Collins threw out Murray and Meyers grounded weakly to Bender. Merkle fanned. The Giants looked pretty feeble at this stage. NO RUNS, NO HITS, NO ERRORS. SEVENTH INNING. Bender fanned. Murphy grounded out, Doyle to Merkle. Oldring fled to Shafer. NO RUNS, NO HITS, NO ERRORS. With the count two and one, Crandall grounded out, Barry to McInnis, on a fast play. The top of the Giants' batting list came up again, and the crowd was hopeful, especially as Shafer singled to center on the second ball pitched. Doyle singled to right, sending Shafer to third, but Fletcher hit into a double play, Barry to McInnis, on a line drive. NO RUNS, TWO HITS, NO ERRORS. EIGHTH INNING. Collins beat out a bunt, and Baker made his third hit, a single to center, sending Collins to third. Then McInnis double to left, scoring Collins and sending Baker to third. It was a sample of the old-time team hitting that made the Athletics feared in 1910 and 1911. Tesreau replaced Crandall on the slab, and fanned Strunk on three pitched balls. With two strikes on Barry, Baker was out at the plate on an attempted double steal, Meyers to Doyle to Meyers. Barry fled to Doyle. ONE RUN, THREE HITS, NO ERRORS.

Burns waited for two wide ones to pass him, and then hit to Baker, and was out at first. Herzog was out, Collins to McInnis. Murray singled to left, but Meyers fled to Strunk. NO RUNS, ONE HIT, NO ERRORS. NINTH INNING. Herzog threw out Schang. Tesreau threw out Bender. Murphy walked. Rain began to fall heavily. Murphy went out stealing. Meyers to Doyle. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Barry threw out Merkle. McLean batted for Tesreau and fled to Barry. Shafer fanned. NO RUNS, NO HITS, NO ERRORS.

HE GETS LICENSE AND SHE WEEDS ANOTHER

Durward Bagwell Now Has a Shattered Dream Instead of a Wife.

Monday Durward F. Bagwell, No. 23 Chapel street, an employee of a downtown drug store, had a heart full of hope and a head full of plans for the future—visions of love in a cottage floated before his eyes.

Tuesday he had a receipt for a month's rent of the cottage, a contract with the furniture people to cancel, a useless marriage license and a shattered dream.

His fiancée, to whom he was to have been married Monday night at 8 o'clock, became the bride of John Henry Gwinn, the 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gwinn, of No. 79 Tinnell street, four hours before. They are happy in a cottage near Grant Park, where they will live while Mr. Gwinn pursues his vacation of driving taxicabs for his father.

The bride was Miss Jessie Brock, the 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brock, No. 48 Larkin street. Her marriage was the culmination of a romance that has traveled along the path all true love travels, being filled with quarrel and renunciation and the final return to the first love, and in which her sister, Miss Margie Brock, assiduously devoted herself to the cause of young Mr. Gwinn, and finally succeeded in bringing about the wedding.

Miss Brock has been employed for some time at the Benjamin-Ozburn Drug Store, at Mitchell and Whitehall streets, as cashier in the department of which Mr. Bagwell is manager. Shortly after she went to work there she became acquainted with Mr. Gwinn, and he at once fell in love with her. A few weeks later they had a quarrel and renounced each other. About this time Mr. Bagwell began paying court to Miss Brock, and a month or so ago they became engaged.

Young Mr. Gwinn soon regretted his part in the quarrel, and endeavored to effect a reconciliation with his sweetheart. She told him she was engaged to Mr. Bagwell, and that the wedding date was set for Monday night at 8 o'clock. He at once enlisted her sister, Miss Margie Brock, in his cause, and her labors were finally crowned with success.

Monday morning both Mr. Bagwell and Mr. Gwinn secured marriage licenses, within half an hour of each other, in which Miss Brock was named as the party of the second part. At 12 o'clock Miss Brock left the store to go to lunch, and told her fiancée she had some shopping to do before the wedding. She met her sister and Mr. Gwinn uptown, and the trio went to the office of Justice of the Peace Edgar H. Orr, who performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Brock, the girl's mother, received a message that her daughter was going to be married, and immediately notified Mr. Bagwell. Together they went to the office of Chief of Detective Newport Lanford and asked him to stop the wedding. Chief Lanford told them he was powerless, and then the girl's mother and her fiancée secured the city for the daughter and fiancée, without success. While they were looking for her she called at her mother's home with her husband and left word that she was married and happy.

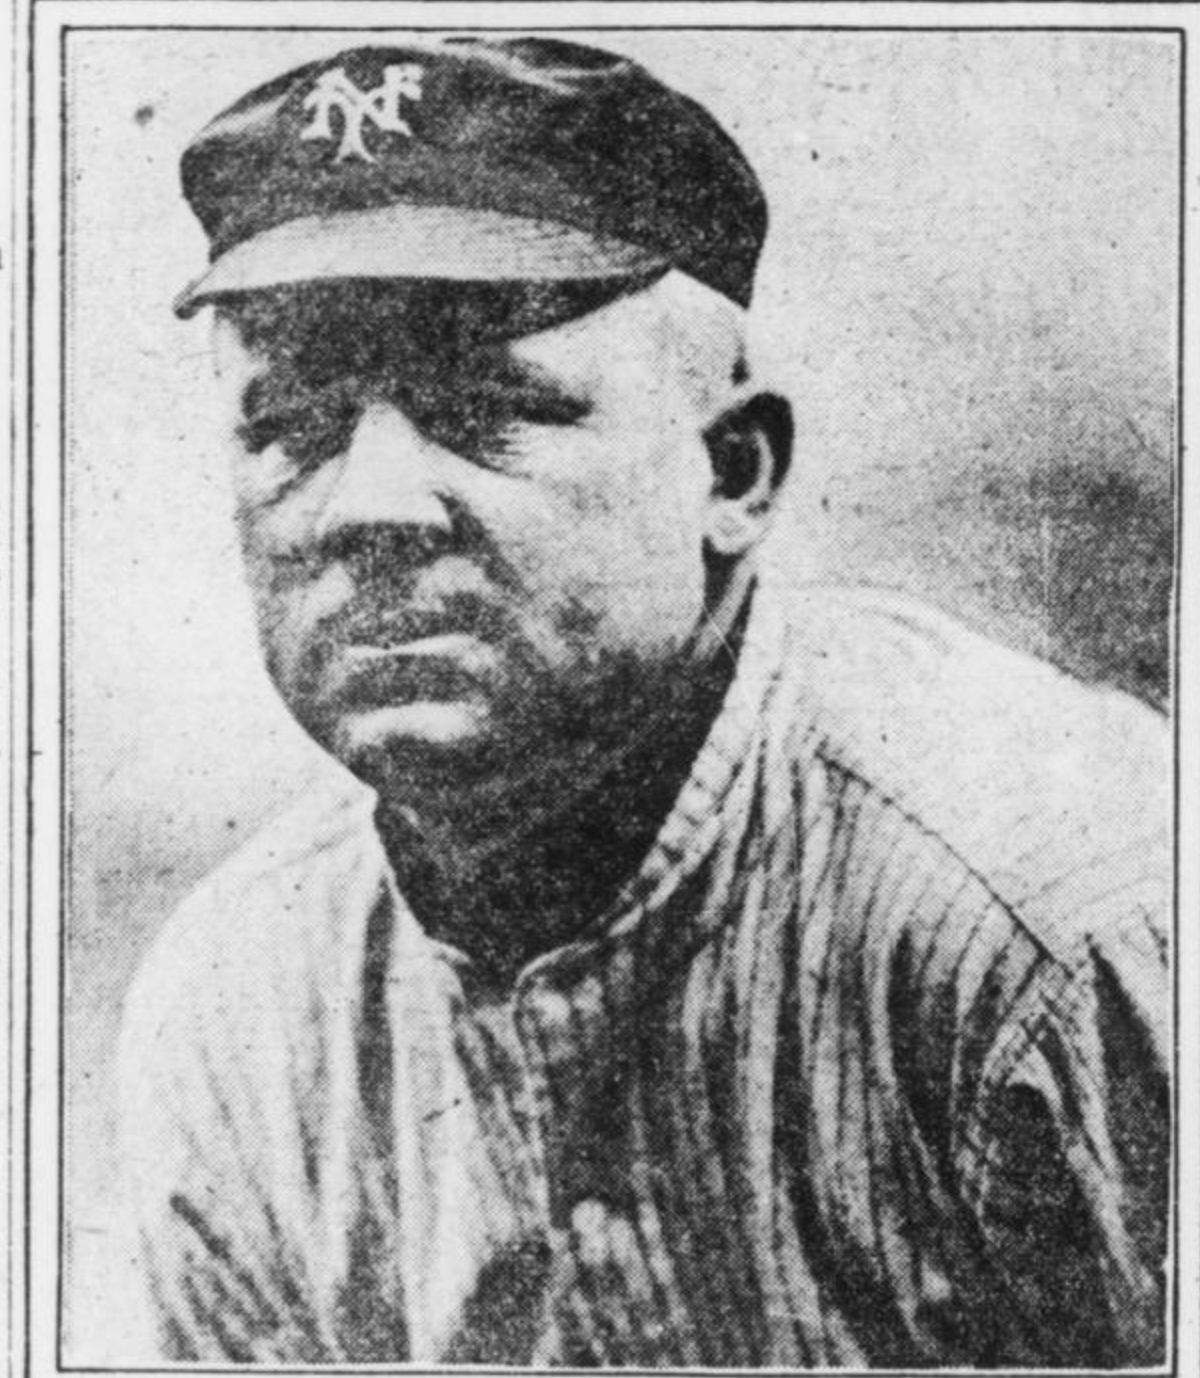

Woman and Child Injured as Auto Crashes Into Pole. Mrs. R. E. Hinman, No. 126 Elizabeth street, and 3-year-old adopted daughter, Isabel Frye, were cut by flying glass Tuesday when an automobile driven by Dr. Hinman became uncontrollable and smashed into a telephone pole in Inman Park. The windshield was broken and the car otherwise damaged.

The child suffered lacerations about the face and shoulders, and is said to be in a serious condition. Mrs. Hinman's injuries are not serious. The physician escaped unhurt.

Detective, 'Planted,' Gets Caught in Fire. While a detective watched for robbers at the Atlanta Woodware Company's establishment at Marietta and Foundry streets Monday night the structure mysteriously caught on fire. The detective had a narrow escape and the building was damaged to the extent of about $5,000.

The detective had been "planted" in the building to apprehend robbers who have been stealing from the woodware concern for the last few weeks. KILLED OVER NICKEL CARD GAME. GADSDEN, Ala., Oct. 7.—Henry Hutchens, formerly of this city, who was shot and killed in a 5-cent card game at Bridgeport, was buried here today. 'WE ARE DUE TO GET THE BREAKS'--M'GRAW

By JOHN MCGRAW, Manager of Giants. NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—In 1911 and again in 1912 my team was beaten by the Athletics and Red Sox because the "breaks" were against us. We had the better team both years, and we have the better team again this fall. We are due to get the "breaks" this time. With Mathewson, Marquard, Tesreau and Demaree in top-notch condition I can not figure how we can lose, unless Dame Fortune absolutely rules against us for the third successive time.

DENIAL MADE BY FRANK JUROR IS ATTACKED

Henslee, in Letter to The Georgian, Declares His Comment Was Made After Trial.

Standing emphatically by their sworn affidavits that A. H. Henslee, one of the men who found Leo M. Frank guilty of the murder of little Mary Phagan, had expressed violent prejudice against the prisoner before the trial, John Holmes, S. M. Johnson and Shi Gray, of Sparta, Tuesday attacked the accused juror's defense.

The three Sparta men declared they were absolutely certain that Henslee made the statements or which the defense hopes to secure a new trial from Judge Roun before the case came up in the Fulton court, because, they say, Henslee made the remark that he had been summoned as a talesman and might be selected as a juror.

Henslee, in a letter sent to The Georgian Tuesday, admitted that he had made some of the remarks credited to him, but asserted that they had been uttered after the trial and that he had stated explicitly that he believed the testimony

Princeton Was Glad to Get Rid of President Wilson, Says Witness.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Senator Weeks demanded that George H. Shibley, of Washington, director of the political research bureau, the first witness before the Banking and Currency Committee to-day, be more specific in his statement that college professors must preach the sound money doctrine of "trust oratory" or lose their positions. Shibley then declared that President Wilson narrowly escaped removal from Princeton because he advocated the short ballot system, that Edward W. Bemis, of the Chicago University, was discharged because he told the facts about the Chicago Gas Company; that John R. Common, of the University of Wisconsin, was discharged because he voted for Bryan; that James Allen Smith, of Marietta College, lost his position because he would not teach the traditional sound money doctrine, and that he could add indefinitely to this list.

Shibley said that when President Wilson, as President of Princeton University, took an open position in favor of the short ballot, he was guilty of heresy in the eyes of the Board of Trustees who were glad when he left the university because of the influence of his advanced ideas.

NEW THEORY IN PRINCESS' SUICIDE

Fear Auto Accident Expose Would Link Her Name With That of Baron, Given as Cause.

PARIS, Oct. 7.—A new theory to account for the suicide of Princess Sophia of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, who killed herself recently at Heidelberg Palace, is advanced by L'Opinion. The newspaper says that two women registered in September at the Savoy Hotel at Fontainebleau as Baroness de Rotha and daughter, Baron Hans von Bleichroeder, who was mentioned as the man for love of whom the Princess committed suicide because their marriage was impossible, was with the women, the newspaper says for a week. The young woman and Bleichroeder automobilized every day through the forest. One evening the auto struck a little girl and seriously injured her. The Baroness is said to have sought the parents of the girl and paid $3,000 to insure secrecy. The women left immediately for the Tyrol. The mysterious departure set the police to work, and they discovered that the young woman, the newspaper says, was the Princess Sophia. This news reached Heidelberg Palace, and in fear of a scandal the Princess killed herself.

Governor Slaton Personally Investigates and Verifies the Circulation of The Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American.

October 4th 1913.

At the request of the management of The Atlanta Georgian and The Sunday American, I personally examined on Friday afternoon their various circulation statements, in detail.

These circulation figures I have checked up and verified in person. I have examined the sworn statements of the circulation manager and the cashier of The Georgian corporation, and cross questioned them in detail about the circulation figures.

Purely from a business man's viewpoint, both The Georgian and The Sunday American, in points of quality and quantity of circulation, should be, and I have no doubt are, highly satisfactory and effective advertising mediums.

The fine circulation showings furnish me ample foundation for warm congratulations. I sincerely wish for Mr. Hearst and his Georgia newspapers the fullest measure of prosperity and success--both of which seem assured.

John M. Slaton.

Georgia Delegation at Boston in Determined Fight to Get 1914 Convention.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—If the next convention of the American Bankers' Association is not held in Atlanta it will be due to the fact that the Georgia delegates to the convention held here in this city failed to vote their full strength.

The Atlanta men also do very often. Georgia delegates started a motion picture on the way toward the convention for Atlanta last year. Headed by W. P. Venable, Jr., and President L. B. Hildreth of the Georgia Bankers' Association, the Southerners went at their task as though it was the biggest and most important thing in their lives. Atlanta is the only city that has been mentioned, but no organized effort is being made other than that which was waged by the Georgians.

OLD MOONSHINER SEES END OF HIS BUSINESS

JOHN B. INGRAM.

John B. Ingram, former moonshiner, for whom bond was obtained several months ago through the efforts of the Atlanta "Sunday" to testify before the Federal Grand Jury in the case of the two youths, Grover McDonnell and Floyd McAfee, who are said to have been implicated with him in the illicit distilling.

"I might have known they'd get me," he said Tuesday. "I'm through with it all now. Moonshining is a mighty interesting business, but the revenues are getting altogether too busy for it to be safe any more. Times are changing. We used to think it was all right for a man to make liquor for himself and his neighbors without any interference, but now we're wrong. I can see it now."

Reports from Blairville, Union County, say that Ingram has been living a model life in every respect, fully justifying the confidence that was placed in him when his release from jail was obtained by The Georgian and aid was extended his family by persons who were stirred to pity by his story.

The Sheriff of the county, and ministers and other prominent citizens of Blairville are authority for the statement that Ingram is working hard at honest labor to support his family and that his three little girls, none of whom ever had attended school before, now are acquiring an education in the public schools and are being given every advantage that the meager income of their father will permit.

It is believed that Ingram will plead guilty to the charge of illicit distilling whenever he comes up before Judge Newman in the United States District Court, October 15. It is his hope that on the strength of his record since he was released under bond that he will be given a suspended sentence. Persons who have watched his career in the last few months will recommend the Judge to Newman. If H. Caldwell, alleged to have been in partnership with Ingram, will be tried at the same time.

Two boys are said to have come upon the still when they were trespassing in the mountains and to have assisted in the manufacture of moonshine from an intent to violate a law for which they are found innocent, their trial probably will not be held until spring.

W. M. MOONEY BILL TO BE BUILT UP OF WALL ST.

Securities Will be Handled on Exchanges Where Majority of Shares Are Held.

By BOERSIÄNER.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—If the Currency bill passes the Senate it will be the House, New York will be left of a final excuse for monopolizing the trading in certain securities.

The defense of "easy and abundant issues" of "quick and ready banking accommodations" will be no longer valid. Certain securities may be handled where the shares are majority held.

Boston should have exclusively American Telegraph and Telephone and the greater part of the business in Amalgamated, Ansonia and Utah Coppers. Philadelphia should lead Wall Street in the handling of Pennsylvania and Reading. Chicago should have a monopoly of Peoples Gas and chronicle more trading in St. Paul, Illinois Central and Baltimore and Ohio than the Eastern houses.

These are instanced at random. There are many more securities really alien to the Wall Street market.

The Exodus Eastward.

Before Wall Street had enjoyed the vast vogue, which began in 1901, it was natural usage for securities to be issued and traded in one of the exchanges where such values were preponderantly held. Thus Boston did much more in Atchison, in Burlington, in New York and in all the others than New York. Philadelphia was privileged in Reading, Pennsylvania. Chicago was the chief market for several steel issues and of Peoples Gas.

There are many more securities really alien to the Wall Street market.

The Exodus Eastward.

A Thriller on the Diamond

State Senator and former Representative W. L. Converse, of Lowndes county, is being urged by numerous friends in South Georgia to enter the Congressional race next year against Representative Randall Walker, of the Eleventh.

Senator Converse, who besides being a statesman, is one of the very best men in the commonwealth, has taken the matter under serious advisement and it is altogether likely that he will enter the contest.

At least, that is the persistent opinion of those who are watching the political movements from the lips of observers who keep pretty close tabs on things in the Southwestern section.

If Senator Converse does get into the Congressional race, it goes without saying that he will become immediately a most formidable candidate and one to be reckoned with. His services in the Legislature have made him a name known to the people and it is true that among the entire membership of both the House and the Senate his name is mentioned with sympathy and good wishes. He probably did not do any other man at home for the schools in the Eleventh district than any other one man from that section. He is very modest about that, however, and rarely mentions it himself.

Senator Converse is a well-balanced man. He is an extremist in nothing. He is tolerant and mindful of the opinions of others. The difficulty in the way of getting him to run for Congress, perhaps, would be in convincing him that he could spare the time from his business.

Because of some rules of prudence in the conduct of the service of which he was not aware when he had applied for the position at Shanghai, it appears that Colonel Johnson, of Rome, likely will not be named to that post. A number of other names are being urged, but proper man to be United States Minister to Uruguay.

This is one of the most important diplomatic assignments in South America. Colonel Johnson would fill it most acceptably. The Rome secretary's later run to things agricultural in large measure, and the agricultural interests of South America are vast. If Colonel Johnson is sent to Uruguay, and it is thought he may be, he will be more or less in his element and fully capacitated to render great and material service to his country.

Secretary Bryan is said to be heartily in favor of Colonel Johnson for the South American post.

The rumor that Judge Pottle, of the Court of Appeals, is thinking of resigning persists, notwithstanding the Judge's most emphatic denial. Judge Pottle was rendered a most advantageous legal connection a short time ago and did talk that matter over with a few friends. It is his hope that the resignation report found currency through this. In addition to this, too, he was mentioned for Congress in succession to Mr. Roddenberry, and that, also, served to push the rumor along.

Judge Pottle says, however, that he has no idea whatever of resigning now nor any time soon. In fact, he is not thinking of resigning at all.

Seaborn Wright, of Floyd County, called on Governor John M. Slaton for a "social chat" today.

How does anybody know it was a social chat?

Nobody does know—that's what the Home man said it was, however.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Wright and the Governor are the personal friends, and have been since they served in the Legislature together.

Governor Slaton probably has more callers, for one reason and another, than any Governor of Georgia since Governor W. F. Atkinson, whose office was generally well crowded with visitors.

It has come to be rather a difficult matter to get to the Governor, though no fault whatever of his own. Callers, among them many who come from purely transient and casual impulses, are very numerous, and as the Governor is an good natured and friendly as they make them, much of his time is thus taken up.

He recently ordered clemency hearings restricted to the last Thursday and Friday of each month, however, and hereafter it will have more time at his disposal for reason of that shifting of matters.

Representative Crawford Whittaker, of Sumter, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, is the Atlanta visitor, and called on Governor Slaton to-day.

Mr. Wheatley thinks there is little in the reported opposition to the new tax equalization law, save in some quarters, perhaps, where small politics is being played, and in other quarters where misinformation prevails.

"There is this thing about the new law," said Mr. Wheatley to-day, "if a man is an honest tax payer, if he doesn't dodge and lie out of his taxes, this law likely will lower his total taxes to a marked degree within twelve months of its birth. If, however, he is a dishonest taxpayer and has been dodging his taxes this new law likely will raise the total of his taxes. That's all there is to it!"

"It merely is a question of helping the honest man and bringing to 'jaw' the dishonest man, and no more loss can be made of it than that."

"Eventually, it will come to pass that this law is the most popular thing enacted by any legislature in many years. It will come to that, because the law is just and right, and the men who gallantly fought for it through the Legislature will come in time to be recognized as real patriots and business men."

Thomas W. Loyley, of Augusta, who knows a word of politics in Georgia, and is most popular among them, is in Atlanta.

Mr. Loyley devotes his entire time nowadays to editing and managing his splendid newspaper, the Augusta Chronicle.

GRAIN SHORTAGE 1,250,000 BUSHELS

Wheat, Oats, Rye and Barley Deficiency Not Made Up by Potato Crop.

Serious shortages exist in the world's crop of grain for 1912. The supply is nearly 15 per cent less than last year. The total deficiency aggregates 1,250,000 bushels of the five grain staples. This shortage is not made up by potatoes, the world's supply of which is not greater than last year, and 200,000,000 bushels less than the world's normal potato crop of 1910.

These amazing conditions are indicated by the preliminary report upon world's crops and the future of prices, prepared by Orange Judd Southern Farming of Atlanta. This authority estimates that the four breadstuffs—wheat, oats, rye and barley—will probably be 500,000,000 bushels less this year than in 1911. 200,000,000 bushels less than two years ago, but 4 per cent more than in the 1910 crop.

Less Russia and Argentina contribute the year with much greater yields than now seems possible, the world's wheat production will be only 100,000,000 bushels more than last year. This will be an increase of only 3 per cent over the supply of wheat produced throughout the world in 1911.

Of grave importance also is the European shortage in rye, because even more than wheat, is rye the breadstuff of the toiling millions of Europe. Europe may have only 1,700,000 bushels of rye of the 1912 crop, or 150,000,000 bushels less than last year.

With a smaller crop in North America than last year by more than 200,000,000 bushels and with another 100,000,000 deficit elsewhere, the world's crop of oats may be 10 per cent less than last year, a decrease of 400,000,000 bushels, in spite of the fact that Russia has the most prodigious oats crop in its history—1,600,000,000 bushels.

Barley is much less than usual in North America, but the world's total yield may come up to the normal amount.

Great Britain and Europe east of Russia, the wheat-importing regions of the world, will need to import between 600,000,000 and 700,000,000 bushels during the coming year, calling for every bushel of surplus wheat.

In the case of corn, only 250,000,000 out of an average world's supply of 850,000,000 bushels is consumed in the corn-importing countries, but the surplus this year is so reduced that it is a question whether any such quantity can be spared.

Southern Farming adds: "The area of fall-winter oats and other grains will be greatly increased this year throughout the South, as a result of the world-wide shortage. Next year will see more acre devoted to corn and small grains in the South than ever before."

AL WILSON'S 'GOLDEN VOICE' SET FOR RELEASE

German Comedian Pleases Admirers in Made-to-Order Play at Atlanta Theater.

By FARLETON COLLIER.

It is a great thing to be a hero with a golden voice, and a magnificent presence and an incandescent light, and to have an entire world written up about you, and here is the circumstance there are always scores of ladies to split their white gloves and stockings for you, and here is the ubiquitous and unfailing adjective "cute" as your reward, as in the case of Al Wilson at the Atlanta play.

His love and there in your audience is always a person to wonder why one man should be so infatigable a hero, and why the situations are written so obviously and after the fashion of the penitents with the golden voice and the woman who laughs for the humor and the humor by turns, even giving an opportunity to a drink out of a tin of two on the piano.

But then, this aptly named element was small indeed, at Al Wilson's show last night. It seemed a most loyal audience, was, author's show, "A Rolling Stone," in which he is depicted as a rather fetching new young man who marries a girl who he had known for less than five minutes. Al Wilson is an excellent comedian as well as a naive hero. He is aided by the formidable Lucie Wilson and Harry West, who like him, are fully qualified to do a German dialect. But Al Wilson's most effective device is the adoption of a kindergarten chorus of six girls of years in tender years, who are the girls they would be just toddling out of the care of their mothers, and here, "cute," the audience said, quite openly.

But then, the show was a warm and delightful following in Atlanta.

Character Sketch Feature at Forsyth.

The first of the series of weekly character sketches, save the world's absence of the Forsyth from becoming human, was the sketch of Hugh Heriot, Thomas Herbert and Margaret Williams, called "The Son of Solomon." For clever character work and for much fun, interspersed with heart-throbs, the act is one of the best of vaudeville performances. It is the story of an attractive, simple-minded old Jew, and his loyal daughter and his ward son. Hugh Heriot does great things with the character of the old man.

The second act is that of an old lady, Eddie Girard, who, with Jessie Gardner, have a sketch in two scenes, street scene opportunity to get on the monkey characterization that made him famous in the city.

The remainder of the bill is made up of conventional features, such as Henrietta Wilson and company, in a heavily billed feature. Heriot allows. The act is that of a young woman with her hair and a rifle and a revolver with a skill and accuracy that a Buffalo Bill would envy. The audience seemed to like the "Five Society Boys" very well, indeed. Eddie Girard and Irene Shannon, very energetic young man and woman, are billed as some of the best of the city. James Thornton, monologist, is an old acquaintance. Quite a loyal following came for him when he appeared on the stage yesterday, and in response he talked agreeably for some time.

A hard-working, capable and athletic act with which the bill ends. There is a hard-working, capable and athletic act with which the bill ends.

Burning Love Story Holds Lyric Boards.

There are times when a little love is a dangerous thing, and when too much of the erotic fire becomes a veritable mine of dynamite. All sorts of interesting things are likely to happen.

With this in their minds, a large crowd crowded in the Lyric Theater last night to witness the opening performance of "One Day," the play from Elmer Gley's novel, which was advertised as "The Greatest Love Story Story Yet Written."

Add what they saw was a love story, the enough, but handled discreetly as to be comfortably entertaining. And well acted.

PASTORS GIVE UP REFORMING OF SAVANNAH

Time Too Precious to Waste in Hopeless Effort, Declares Leader of Ministers.

SAVANNAH, Oct. 7.—Savannah Protestant ministers are today studying the Bible and have by mutual consent agreed to abandon the efforts to reform the city, in compliance with a resolution adopted by the Protestant Ministers' Association yesterday.

The Rev. Dr. W. L. Pickard, pastor of the First Baptist Church, offered the resolution.

"We may talk here about how to reform a city or town, but we are not to do this," he declared. "We know that there are things here that should not be. We know the houses in our midst should be. We know the open saloons in this city should go. But time is too precious and the Gospel is too great for us to waste the time we have with such a study of conditions and cease our efforts to reform."

Dr. Pickard said that the way to reform a city or town was by leading a Christian life and setting a good example. He said the mere closing of houses did not stop vice, nor the closing of the saloons the desire of a man to drink. His speech was warmly applauded.

A New Style Kimball

Style 111—$250 Increased in Mahogany

We are offering a genuine Kimball Piano—one of the world's standard makes—in a new case design, at a price unobtainable in our intricate musical value is considered.

On account of being made under the most favorable conditions, by the world's largest manufacturers of pianos, and sold direct, we are in a position to offer this high-grade instrument for such a nominal sum. With increased facilities for production means greater values for less money to the buyer. Really, a $400 value as compared to pianos of equal grade sold by dealers and agents.

We stake our reputation, representing over fifty years of piano manufacturing, on the musical merits of this instrument, tone, quality and durability both considered. It has a wonderfully sweet and sympathetic tone. The style is semi-classical in design, with plain panels.

We could repeat the cost of manufacture of this instrument, gloss over its short-comings, and sell it for less money, but we won't. Because the reputation is at stake. We could charge more, but we couldn't give you an instrument with a better tone or greater durability. It is true that we have more expensive pianos, but the difference is largely in the case.

A limited number of these styles are now on display at our warerooms.

Cash, or convenient terms can be arranged.

HOBSON BRANDS UNDERWOOD AS 'TOOL'

Declares Senatorial Opponent Is Controlled by Liquor and Wall Street Interests.

MOBILE, Oct. 7.—Oscar W. Underwood, Democratic floor leader in Congress and candidate for United States Senator as the successor of the late Joseph P. Johnston, was charged today being the tool of the liquor and money interests and a person who has been guided by personal ambition rather than a desire to serve the people, in an address delivered at Wetumpka last night by Congressman Richmond Harrison, Underwood's opponent for Senator.

"You mean to tell me he is incapable of serving the liquor interests as a tool?" asked Congressman Harrison. "Is he capable of serving Wall Street as a tool?" "I say yes."

Then Hobson charged that Underwood, as chairman of the Joint House and Senate Committee, which considered the tariff bill, allowed a Senate amendment to be killed that would have brought the United States a tax of $2,500,000 a year in revenue for the improvement of bread.

"Congressman Hobson brought up the Thomas F. Ryan contribution of $50,000 to Underwood's campaign during the 1912 Presidential fight."

"Colonel Rankin correct in saying Oscar Underwood knew nothing of the contribution of $50,000 by Thomas F. Ryan to finance his campaign in the Democratic National Convention?" he asked. "I gather he was conscious that he was financing his campaign or he was a dummy."

"I now say he is in the hands of the liquor and money interests."

Atlanta Sure to Get 1914 Roads Congress

It was practically settled Tuesday that Atlanta would get the 1914 Roads Congress. Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta Board of Trade, who returned Monday night from Detroit, where the Congress in Detroit is more than confident.

"I expect the executive committee to choose Atlanta over New Orleans. They will decide in two months," said Mr. Houser.

A Happy Bald Headed Man

Well Known Politician Nearly Bald Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It. A Western politician, well known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair. Many of his old friends did not know him and others thought he had a wig. He made the following statement: "I attribute this remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe which any lady or gentleman can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Harbo Compound and 14 drops of glycerine. Apply this mixture two or three times a week with the finger tip. It makes the hair grow and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens the hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat, Which Clogs Kidneys; Then the Back Hurts.

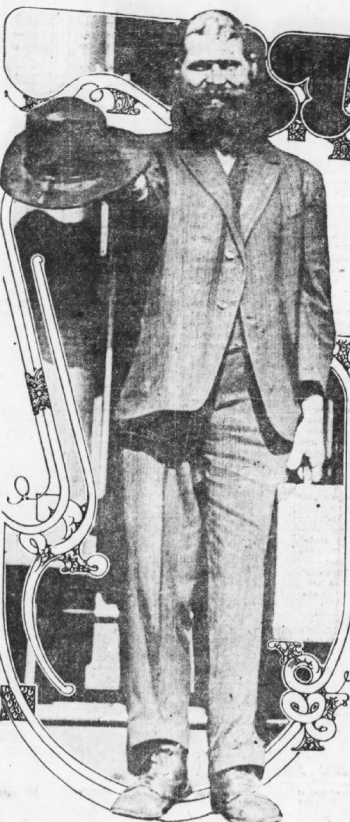

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get clogged and clogged and need a flushing occasionally. Also we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headache, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean. At the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store. Dissolve a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the purest of grapes and lemon juice, combined with little else and harmonized to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal action. They will neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer irritating, thus ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts is harmless. It makes a delightful effervescent, little water drink, which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean. Thus avoiding serious complications.

Harvard Man Says It's 'Bawston,' Too

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., Oct. 7.—You pronounce Boston Bawston. This is the claim of Dr. William King, of the Harvard Medical department. He has made a study of the phonology of the tongue. OLD MOONSHINER SEES END OF HIS BUSINESS

JOHN B. INGRAM

"Revenuers Too Busy for Trade To Be Profitable," Declares John Ingram.

John B. Ingram, former moonshiner, for whom bond was obtained several months ago through the efforts of the Georgia so that he might return to his impoverished family in the mountains of Union County, came to Atlanta Tuesday to testify before the Federal Grand Jury in the cases of the two youths, Grover McConell and Floyd McAfee, who are said to have been implicated with him in the illicit distilling.

"I might 'he knowed 'em right me," he said Tuesday. "I'm through with it all now, though. Moonshining is a mighty interesting business, but the revenuers are getting altogether too busy for it to be safe any more. Times are changing. We used to have been implicated with him in the moonshine liquor for himself and his neighbors without any interference, but we were wrong. I can see it now."

Reports from Blairsville, Union County, say that Ingram has been living a model life in every respect, fully justifying the confidence that was placed in him when his release from jail was obtained by the Georgia.

150 Students Enter Pharmacy College

With more than 150 students enrolled the Atlanta College of Pharmacy has opened the fall term of its twenty-third year. The opening exercises were held in the school's new quarters at No. 225 Broadway street, Monday morning.

Dr. George F. Palmer, president of the school, was the principal speaker. He declared that the outlook for the present year is bright and that he was much gratified that the school has grown to be one of the largest in the history of the college. They call the first vowel the "open o."

FUND IS SOUGHT FOR GEORGIA AT CANAL FAIR

Campaign To Be Inaugurated for Representation of State at Panama Exposition.

A campaign to raise funds for the establishment of a Georgia State exhibit at the Panama Exposition will be inaugurated shortly when Commissioner Frank H. Hoop, of the exposition, arrives in Atlanta to confer with officials of the Chamber of Commerce.

Prospects Are Glowing. George Hugh Perry, director of the exposition, in a letter to Mr. Harrison, the chairman of the committee, says that he is being made on the grounds by other States, and expressed the hope that Georgia will be represented. "We sincerely hope that some movement may be started in Georgia to bring about participation in the exposition," writes Mr. Perry. "So far 27 States have arranged to take part and legislative appropriations amount to $250,000 in North Carolina and $100,000 in New York have been made. Other Legislatures will appropriate and in most of those States where Legislatures failed to appropriate movements have been started."

"We have so far secured the participation of 27 foreign governments. The fourteen exhibit spaces are now in the course of construction. The director of exhibit reports that there will be several other exhibitors represented in those places. The direct investment on the part of concessionaires in the exhibit spaces will reach a sum total of $5,000,000."

"I am a citizen of Georgia to visit San Francisco and investigate the matter as to the rights of Georgia in the exhibition which will be held here in 1915. I will return in early, and an international exposition ever held."

WOMEN BATTLE FIRE IN HOME, GALE-SWEPT

One Thousand Are Homeless in Bitter Cold Weather After Terrific Alaskan Storm.

NOME, Oct. 7.—Fire broke out today in the ruins left by the Northern gale which partially destroyed Nome. As the fire-fighting apparatus was destroyed by the storm "bucket brigades" were formed to stem the flames. Women worked side by side with the men.

More than 1,000 persons are homeless here in bitter cold weather and $150,000 damage has been done as the result of the storm, which swept in from Bering Sea. Two miles of territory along the seaboard was swept and it is feared that isolated prospectors were overwhelmed. Searching parties started out at dawn.

ATHLETIC HURLERS EQUAL GIANTS' STAFF—SAGREE

By Allen Sanger.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The Atlanta Braves are just as strong today as they were in 1911, and hence the Giants must be a better club than in that year to beat them. The fact that Combs is not there to help beat that year. Waddell started to break new bats on September 15 and put his arm out of commission. Since that tragedy I have fixed any player who started strong last season.

Mark went on to say that only four pitchers have figured in the clashes with New York, namely, Bender, Ryan, Egan and McGraw.

Here with is shown a picture of the Giants as they will probably line up to-day when they face the Athletics in the opening game of the world's Series. In this remarkable and unique illustration the players are shown in the respective positions they will occupy on the diamond. "Matty" is placed in the pitcher's box, as it is next to certain that "Big Six" will do the hurling in the first trap.

Expert Damon Runyon Compares Giants and Athletics

GOOD PITCHING VS. HISTORY—WHICH WILL WIN?

By Damon Runyon.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—There is an old, old saying that the three times a year the world's champion pitcher and his New York Giants are to be seen in the city of Philadelphia. It is not that the pitcher will be seen in the city of Philadelphia, but that the pitcher will be seen in the city of Philadelphia.

In the recent accident which wrecked his automobile may keep him out. He attempts to throw the ball around the infield since he returned to the game shows that his shoulder is still troubling him, and Arthur Shuster may have to play the keystone position after that.

was in 1911 or 1912. He is regarded by many fans as the case of the National League short relievers, and it is doubtful if Barry will outplay him as he did in 1911, or as Wagner did in 1912.

McGraw Will Depend On His Snap Judgment

By John J. McGraw.

NEVER make predictions on the outcome of a battle of this sort, but we will go into the world's Series with our full strength, unless something unforeseen occurs, and we will be prepared to give a good account of ourselves.

After him, in Philadelphia, will probably come Rube Marquand and Art Fletcher. It is a great condition. It is the story of McGraw who again tried with his luck. The opening game is ever an advantage, and so the great Matty will likely open his eyes today.

McGraw's snap judgment is necessary. We have an excellent chance to win. Any team that can win a pennant in a major league and also take two World's Championships is necessarily strong.

McGraw says No Rain. The general impression was that McGraw, the marvelous, and the famous "Chief" Bender, would meet for the second time in the opening battle of the championship campaign. Neither McGraw nor Connie Rice committed himself on the point, and there was nothing to indicate that they knew themselves.

"Mark and Bender is not important, and we remain in full view. Matty beat Bender in the first game in 1912, the second being 2 to 1. Frank was the second slinger from Manhattan, 3 to 1. Combs beat Matthew in the 1911-2, 1, and Bender trimmed Matty in the fourth contest, 4 to 2. In the fifth, Marquand, Ames-Chandler, proved more capable than Combs. Mark, the Giants winning 4 to 2, in ten innings, but in the final game Bender was too much for the Ames-Witte-Marquand combination, so the A's won by the luring tally of 12 to 2.

Bender Never Better. The Indians never looked better than just now. "Friend" writer would hesitate to question the word of any ball player who takes part in this series.

McGraw's snap judgment is necessary. We have an excellent chance to win. Any team that can win a pennant in a major league and also take two World's Championships is necessarily strong.

Mark, Combs and O'Leary, and he says I won't need more than three to top this time."

McGraw's snap judgment is necessary. We have an excellent chance to win. Any team that can win a pennant in a major league and also take two World's Championships is necessarily strong.

FULFILL THE OATH MADE ON GRAVE OF MOTHER

Tampa Man Slashes to Pieces Foe Who Caused His Arrest and Poverty.

TAMPA, Oct. 6.—Keeping an oath he swore on his mother's grave, Jose Cuesta literally carved Jose Cuesta to pieces this morning in West Tampa, using an 18-inch butcher knife he snatched out of a coffee shop for the purpose.

The man quarred two years ago. Cuesta stayed one night at Cuesta's and Cuesta turned him over to the police for carrying concealed weapons. The next day he was in jail, awaiting trial before that time. Cuesta had to stay 30 days in jail, and while there his mother died in poverty.

He swore to be revenged, and today met Cuesta for the first time, snatching the coffee shop he grabbed a knife and jumped out the door. Cuesta had no chance for his life. The knife slashed him in ribbons with the 18-inch blade. He ran away, but he was captured in half an hour and is in jail.

Wherein for the future the daintiest of evening dresses will hold dominion. It is right here at the dress section, but a secluded spot where women may enjoy greater privacy in trying on dresses.

Simply furnished, in mahogany, with rich, deep blue carpet and hangings and heavy plated mirrors, a fitting home for these exclusive fashions.

It is another step toward better service. However, the Little Blue Room is not the attraction that we would emphasize. But the dresses, newly arrived, reflecting the true Paris styles—these are notable triumphs and we take a bit of pride in asking the women of Atlanta to see them.

ATLANTA NEW YORK PARIS

Announcing That We Have Just Received from Estelle Mershon 20 E. 46th St., New York, Many Smart Hats of Paris Design

Fact is, few days pass now that we could not make the same announcement. Hats are constantly coming in now from Estelle Mershon.

The genius of the Paris milliners is wonderful! And perhaps no city in America, outside of New York, has better reason to know this than Atlanta.

And Atlanta has about the same reason as New York. One of the smartest "little shops" of the metropolis furnishes Atlanta with Paris styles as quickly as ocean greyhounds and fast express can whirl them to us.

Their lately arrived hats— Their beauty and distinction is that of line more than anything else.

It is not so difficult to find rich colors and fine materials, but it is the artist's touch that molds these materials of exquisite colors and combinations into beautiful hats.

And there is where Estelle Mershon hats differ. The curve of a brim, the angle of the feather, the unexpected placing of a flower—these are the points that make the hat a success, and yet they have nothing to do with prices.

Will you see these that have just arrived?

Of Course, There Is a "Why" for the Success of Madame Irene Corsets

There are several "whys." One of them is that Madame Irene Corsets are designed by a woman. Another is that she spends a great part of her time in Paris.

How well she has succeeded this year is evidenced by the huge success that Madame Irene Corsets are meeting with here in Atlanta.

You have heard much of the "corsetless" figure, of natural lines, doubtless you have heard more than you have seen. Now it is a fact that there are Madame Irene models that successfully effect the "corsetless figure" that give grace to natural lines.

There Are Madame Irene Corsets at $5.00 to $37.50

See the Lady and the Vulture

Do Such Ladies and Vultures Exist in Real Life? Yes, They Do. And It is a Pretty Gay Life--FOR THE VULTURES.

Almost everything in life really worth while--we don't call whisky, prize fights and the other things that go with them worth while--men owe to woman.

Woman, as some man said in an absent-minded, grateful moment--Gothic, we believe--is man's protector in infancy, his happiness in maturity and his comfort in old age, or words to that effect.

Certainly man owes ENOUGH and more to woman.

When he is born, some woman, a trained nurse, washes out his foolish little eyes with nitrate of silver, so that he won't be blind.

And another woman, his mother, provides him with food.

Women wrap up his foolish little body in clothes, socks, coat, shirt and little cap.

Patiently they care for him month after month and year after year, and he lies and screeches and thinks only about himself.

In childhood a woman, the mother, encourages the boy, wipes away his tears and wipes his nose when the weeping is over.

Another woman, the school teacher, does her best to drive a little knowledge into his head.

Another woman, when he is about sixteen or seventeen, listens patiently while he tells how wonderful he is--and finally marries him.

And when he gets to be a middle aged nuisance, some woman, still patient, listens to him, tells him that he looks young and that he is wonderful.

And when he is old, feeble and helpless some woman take care of him, and, at last, some one of them closes his eyes, and actually, strange as it may seem, IS REALLY SORRY.

And very nicely men repay all this, don't they?

Business men exploit women, work them as hard as they can, get all out of them that they can and cast them aside. And other brutal men use women shamefully and shamelessly, casting them aside pitilessly when they are done with them.

The hardest work, the longest work, the most badly paid work, the work that wears out nerves and muscles and eyesight--MEN GENEROUSLY HAND TO WOMEN.

And in almost every case without exception they pay the woman, a woman like their mother, like the woman to whom they owe so much, JUST AS LITTLE AS WILL KEEP HER ALIVE AND KEEP HER WORKING.

The picture on this page is a pretty good picture of women and men under our present conditions.

The men are the vultures and the women are their prey.

Whatever can be done to make women helpless is done.

One set of laws is made for them and another set for men.

Nature herself has conspired against woman, by making her devoted, unselfish and loyal. Facing the worst of treatment, she still gives the most perfect devotion and affection.

Men have struggled, fought, died and called themselves heroes in the effort to get for themselves the right to make the laws that govern them.

And nine-tenths of them, stupid, selfish and blind, are ready to struggle to prevent WOMEN FROM GETTING THE RIGHT THAT THE MEN HAVE GOT.

In Turkey they actually say of the women, "Keep them ignorant, keep them down, they are inferiors. A harem on earth and no heaven afterward--that is good enough for them."

We don't SAY that in the United States. But, except in some individual case, where our vanity or something else is pleased by making an exception, our treatment of women is about as bad as among the Turks.

We use them, we work them, we won't let them vote, we tax them, we put the load on them.

Our laws refuse to protect them.

We have even had eminently "respectable judges" so vile and heartless as to declare UNCONSTITUTIONAL laws passed that would have protected women against the worst exploitation and brutality of man.

However, a change is coming and the sun of a better day is rising. The beginning of day can be seen.

Woman will play her part in the world's affairs, men in order to keep their power and keep their offices will be compelled to ask themselves, "What do the women want?" and they will be compelled to give the women what they want.

And women, fortunately, want always that which is best for children, best for humanity and the world.

Civilization has not begun, and it will not begin, until the heart of humanity, the goodness of humanity, that is to say, WOMAN, shall play a full part in governing and planning for the race.

In many ways the gentlemanly vultures of civilization are different.

But they all agree on a few things.

They are quite sure that woman ought NOT to vote.

And they are quite sure that she ought not to be guaranteed against misery by laws insuring a MINIMUM WAGE.

And they are particularly sure that nothing should interfere with the law of supply and demand, which gives plenty of nice food for vultures in business and politics.

Why Married People Lie to Each Other

They Won't Tolerate the Truth--It Means Quarrels, and They'd Rather Have Peace Even if They Have to Fib to That End.

By DOROTHY DIX.

NOT long ago a wealthy Western woman was heavily fined by the customs authorities for falsifying her statement about the value of a dress she had bought in Paris. Upon investigation the Collector announced that he was convinced that the reason the lady made a false report of what she paid for the frock was not because she desired to defraud the Government, but because she was afraid to tell her husband the truth about what the garment had cost.

About the same time a man in an Eastern town appeared early one morning with a black eye and the most frightful tale of how he had been waylaid by robbers and almost murdered, and left for dead by the wayside, and of how he had crawled home as soon as he recovered consciousness.

He Was Afraid to Tell His Wife the Plain Truth.

The police immediately began search for the footpads, and as they began to get "warm," as the children say in playing hide and seek, the gentleman confessed that there had been no assault made upon him, but that he had tarried downtown too long and looked too often upon the bear as it foamed, and had fallen against a fence in trying to find his own domicile, and that he had concocted his cute little lie about the assault because he was afraid to go home and tell his wife the unvarnished truth.

This do we see how fear of the partners of our bosoms makes liars of us all. Probably there is no other place on earth where strict veracity is at as much of a discount as it is in the family circle, which universal experience proves that, however admirable it may be as a theory, it is a boomerang in practice. Probably no man and no woman ever tries telling the exact truth to his wife or her husband, but once. That is not sufficient to point the moral. Let it be forgotten that the champion liars of history and tradition, Ahab and Sappho, were a married couple, who had doubtless acquired dexterity in putting across plausible fibs in dealing with each other.

Now, most married people, while recognizing the impossibility of maintaining the character of truthful James and Veronica Sally, and still keeping up friendly relations, have resented this necessity. More: They have been troubled in their consciences about the matter, for they were not by nature liars and would gladly have dabbled with the truth if they could.

family. A wife objects to a husband attending lodge meetings. Why tell her about it? What she doesn't know--don't hurt her. Assuredly not. And it's perfectly wonderful how many astute married people, with a proper respect for their own peace and comfort, have anticipated Judge Phillips' decision, and instead of telling their respective husbands and wives the truth that would raise a row have told the little lies that insured the dove of peace still roosting on the roof.

We Fear Our Wives and Husbands, and Fear Breeds Liars.

Mr. Smith is perfectly aware that his beloved Maria will declare a certain lecture that will be interchangeable if he tells her that he stays down town at night to play poker with some old cronies, but she will think that he did not more than his duty if he remained away from his own fireside to tell to make more money for her to spend. Very well, it's a cinch what Mr. Smith is going to tell Maria about her husband's nocturnal habits.

Mrs. Smith knows by experience the storm that will break over her head if she admits that she's paid $25 for her new hat. Therefore she sweetly remarks to Mr. Smith, that oh, dear, she's nearly dead, she's just been running all over town trying to find a hat that looked like anything and that wouldn't cost but $12, but, thank goodness, she found one in a shop on Whitehall street, that she had come from Fifth Avenue, as if it had come from Fifth Avenue, and she didn't have to pay but $10 for it. Such a bargain! And Mr. Smith remarks that it looks good to him, and he's glad he's married to a woman who knows the value of money, and doesn't fool it away as other women do. And Mrs. Smith kisses him, and has the difference between what she pays for the hat and what she says she paid for the hat charged up on the grocery book and the better-book, and deep peace reigns over Europe, Asia, Polynesia and the Smith family.

Such experiences are not confined to the Smith family. They are daily enacted in every household in the land, and the fault is not with the list, but with the tyrant that makes the list. No man but would like to be frank with his wife. No woman but would like to be open and aboveboard with her husband, but the price of veracity is a continual row, and we all prefer peace even if we have to get it by subterfuge.

Writes on Eugenic Marriages

He Proposes a Plan to Eliminate All Embarrassment and at the Same Time Serve the Purpose of the New Law.

By ELBERT HUBBARD

SEVERAL States in the Union have adopted laws providing for a physical examination of the prospective bridegroom and a refusal of the marriage license to all who fail to pass. But securing a certificate of health, however, and presenting it to the interested parties is a rather unromantic affair.

Altogether it involves a degree of publicity that is rather embarrassing for quite a number of people concerned. A Bridegroom Policy.

Nature works by induction. She gets the thing she wants by moving after something else. In this matter of eugenics let us take a lesson from the dame. My suggestion is that every man before the marriage ceremony is performed, comply with one little requirement.

That is, let him present to the prospective bride an insurance policy on his life. The size of the policy he can fix himself. The amount will mirror his financial status, not his love. Let it be for a minimum of, say, thousand dollars, with no limit to the ante on the maximum.

A life insurance policy implies the health of the individual, and all medical examiners will undoubtedly appreciate the importance as well as the import of "A Bridegroom's Policy."

An insurance policy suits the whole thing on a gracious, graceful and generous ground. An insurance policy is a valuable gift, and when it comes as a love token it will be especially prized.

If a woman gives her life into the keeping of a man, why should not the man in return give her at least a policy on his life? Not only is a life insurance policy a guaranty of health, but it is also a guaranty of something quite as important, and that is business acumen.

To be able to secure a life insurance policy is a privilege. No woman can get one. A Health Certificate.

A Joyous Gospel From Helen Keller

From EDWIN MARKHAM.

Helen Keller, the many ways the most wonderful woman of the age, has just published a book, "Out of the Dark," through the Doubleday-Page Company. In spite of both deafness and blindness, she has conquered the knowledge of the world, and writes like a fervent prophetess of many of our anxious problems. Here are some timely words of wisdom for the myriads of young people who are just returning to their work in the schools.

"In college you will be brought face to face with nearly all the fundamental questions of life, and you will learn how many men have tried to solve them. If you yearn to a happy star, and you also shall help to solve them. The world needs your intellect, your scholarship, but most of all your hearts--hearts that are loving, brave, hopeful, happy.

"Does all this dream of high privilege and noble service seem far beyond the reach of your power of mind? Remember what Senator Hoar said: 'Much of the good work of the world has been done by dull people who have done their best.'"

"Faith and courage have no place in the vocabulary of youth, whose spirit sets its white and shining wings toward the purple ships of the promise land. Be happy, talk happiness. Happiness calls out responsive gladness in others. There is enough sadness in the world without yours.

"The great enduring realities are love and service. Joy is the holy fire that keeps our purpose warm and our intelligence active. Work without joy shall be as toiling. Resolve to keep happy, and your joy and you shall form an invincible host against difficulties."

"Learn from your books not only the day's lesson, but the life lesson. In all knowledge, in the classics, in science, in mathematics, in literature, and in history, you will see the struggle of man to get nearer to God. Resolve then, as you stand on the threshold of your student days, with an enlightened education to dedicate your scholarship to the service of others. When your thoughts become pessimistic, when it seems as if all men were defiled by the tangle of trade, blinded by self-interest and greed, turn the pages of your books to the lives of the great men of the world, the ideals which shaped the American race were not men of letters. American history, too, is filled with heroes and martyrs who joyfully poured aside ambition and gave their lives to the common weal.

'Millionaire' Jury Charges Priest With Slaying Girl

SCHMIDT HURLS CROSS AT CROWD

Coroner's Millionaire Jury Finds Him Guilty—Shower of Money in Court to Bury Victim.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Just as the "millionaire" jury in the court of Coroner Feinberg was today finding Hans Schmidt, the renegade priest-guilty of the murder of Anna Aumuller a dramatic incident ensued, which interrupted the proceedings.

Coroner Feinberg appealed to members of the jury, which was headed by Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Incorporated Rapid Transit Company, for funds with which to bury the dismembered body of Anna Aumuller to save it from the batters field.

Before a member of the jury could move there came a shower of currency and silver from the back of the room. The spectacle caused someone among the 500 spectators to laugh.

Throws Crucifix at Crowd. Schmidt, with a scowl on his face, sprang from his chair and tearing a string of beads and a crucifix from his throat, hurled them into the crowd behind him.

In addition to Foreman Shonts, the other members of the jury were Vincent Astor, G. G. McDufl, Marcus Lewis, Mortimer Rasmusen, Benjamin G. Greenhut, George W. Fairchild, Charles Dickey, Edwin Marston, Howard Weir, Natham Reid and Patrick O'Laughlin.

Most of the members of the jury are millionaires, prominent in the world of finance.

Schmidt Shows No Fear. After hearing the evidence, it took the jury just 25 minutes to reach a verdict. This was in effect that Anna Aumuller came to her death on September 2, 1917, from a hemorrhage at the hands of Hans Schmidt.

The prisoner, slovenly and unkempt in appearance, looked coldly into the jurors' eyes, but gave no show of feeling. Following the filing of the verdict, Coroner Feinberg held Schmidt for action of the Grand Jury.

As Schmidt was led back to his cell, men and women who crowded the courtroom were fighting for beads to carry home for souvenirs. This fight aroused Schmidt.

M'NAUGHTON OFF TO FARM. SAVANNAH, Oct. 3.—"God be with you till we meet again" was the last sentence of a resolution bearing the signature of every white prisoner in the Chatham County jail presented to Dr. W. J. McNaughton, expressing regret at his departure for Milledgeville to serve a life sentence at the State Prison Farm in Emanuel County.

The paper is couched in good English. The prisoners assert their belief in the innocence of McNaughton and express an opinion that the next Governor will set him free.

Dr. McNaughton was taken to Milledgeville to meet Edward B. W. Overby came for the prisoner, and Dr. John S. Wilder, his pastor, accompanied him. They left on the 7:40 o'clock train this morning.

HE MUST EXPLAIN. NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Hermann Oelrichs, the rich young student and boon companion of Vincent Astor, today was summoned to appear before the faculty of Columbia University and explain his escapade with Miss Lucille Singleton, a 19-year-old beauty, which resulted in an automobile smash and formal charges by Miss Singleton that Oelrichs had stabbed her.

Dwan Harlan Stone said he would get all the facts in the case. Oelrichs may be expelled unless he can clear himself. In the meantime Miss Singleton, who had sworn to an affidavit that Oelrichs feloniously assaulted her, has changed front and is shielding her former admirer.

BRIDEGROOM FAINTS AT ALTAR. GREENVILLE, S. C., Oct. 3.—As Benjamin Woodside and Miss Corinne Goodlett, both of prominent South Carolina families, were about to be married the bridegroom fell to the arms of his best man in a dead faint. The sister and little brother of the bridegroom, overcome by the scene, collapsed in the church as the limp body of their brother was carried out by the ushers.

After a word from the minister, the throng of spectators quietly left the church. When Mr. Woodside was resuscitated, the ceremony was concluded in the open air.

LITTLE SHERIFF; BIG PISTOL. SAVANNAH, Oct. 3.—John Nelson, of Pima County, Arizona, is the latest sheriff and carries the biggest gun of any ever seen in Georgia. He departed today with N. G. Darler, an Englishman, self-confessed forger and embezzler, wanted in his home county.

Standing scarcely 5 feet, Nelson expressed no fear of landing the 6-foot Englishman safely, and confidently exhibited an old-fashioned frontier revolver measuring 24 inches.

WANTED DEATH SERMON. UNIONTOWN, PA., Oct. 3.—August Tabbs, 41, who is slowly dying, asked the Rev. P. H. Thompson, pastor of a Methodist Church, to preach his funeral sermon while he was alive, explaining that he wanted to hear what the minister had to say about him.

Tabbs' request was refused.

SULZER PLANS BITTER ASSAULT ON ENEMIES

Mrs. William Sulzer, who carried on Wall street gambling deals in her husband's name, according to the defense planned for the impeached Governor.

Outlines Vitriolic Arraignment He Will Make in Own Defense Next Week.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Governor William Sulzer to-day outlined the bitter arraignment that he expected to make in his defense before the court of impeachment next week. He held up Tammany Hall as an institution of loot and looters, whom no charges with trying to crucify him because he sought to stop the wholesale campaign of theft that he found in full blast.

No such remarkable statement has ever come from the lips of an American official. Stier, solemn and earnest, Sulzer sat in his study and talked with an utter absence of that rhetorical affect that usually characterizes his utterances.

Before him sat the Rev. George Chalmers Richmond, D.D., of St. John's Episcopal Church, Philadelphia. He had come to ask the Governor for a message to the people.

Anna Held Sings For College Girls

MACON, Oct. 3.—Macon is all a-flutter.

Miss Anna Held and her beauty chorus were playing at a local theater. Had the French actress played there only all would have been well. But she did not. She invaded Wesleyan College, and there, with swaying, gliding step, sang to a bevy of college girls "Eyes That Dreamy Eyes".

Some of the strait-laced folk have expressed criticism. The college authorities are apologetic. But the delicious humor of the situation has created enough laughter to drown all the criticism and all the apologies.

According to Mrs. C. R. Jenkins, wife of the president of Wesleyan, who has shouldered all the blame for Miss Held's visit, the actress gained admittance through mistaken identity.

Mrs. Jenkins declared that she thought Miss Held was a Macon singer.

SIX WOMEN JAILED. SEATTLE, Oct. 3.—Legal steps were taken today to get out of jail on habeas corpus writ the six women and children sent to jail by Judge Humphries for contempt because they signed a resolution attacking the Judge. Fifty-five Socialists were before Judge Humphries on a charge of contempt. Twelve men and six women were sentenced to jail.

Two of the women took their babies with them. They had violated Judge Humphries' injunction against street speaking.

ARRESTS EXPECTED. NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Important arrests are expected to-day or tomorrow in connection with the dynamiting activities of members and agents of the International Association of Structural Iron and Bridge Workers, as result of the confession made yesterday by George E. Davis, alias George O'Donnell.

Entombed Miner Now Digging Out

CENTRALIA, PA., Oct. 3.—After being entombed for seven days in a coal mine, Thomas Toschesky to-day found a pick and shovel in the debris that entombs him and now is hacking away at the hundreds of tons of coal that still separate him from the outside world.

TEACHERS WANT WAGES. MEMPHIS, Oct. 3.—An appeal asking if the public is willing that 500 school teachers of Memphis go unpaid has been published by a committee representing the teachers, following a mass meeting.

Many teachers will resign within the next week, probably meaning the closing of a number of schools, unless arrangements are made to pay them in cash instead of warrants which banks, merchants, grocers and others refuse to accept.

PAPER ATTACKS WILSON. MEXICO CITY, Oct. 3.—The administration newspaper El Pais to-day accused President Wilson of the United States of plotting to disrupt the Mexican Republic.

The article declares the formation of a new northern republic of the States of Sonora, Chihuahua, Durango, Coahuila, Nuevo Leon, and Tamaulipas is fostered by Mr. Wilson with a view of ultimate annexation to the United States.

KNIFE BATTLE MAY BE FATAL. GAINESVILLE, FLA., Oct. 3.—As the result of a knife battle between Charles Payne and his wife, neceess the woman may die. One wound required about a foot of stitches. Payne is in jail with wounds in his breast and arms.

4 KILLED IN WRECK. STEVENS, ARK., Oct. 3.—Four men were killed and three seriously wounded when a Cotton Belt freight train crashed into a work train today.

HAVOC IS WROUGHT BY TEXAS FLOOD

Twelve Persons Drowned—Property Loss Six Million Dollars, Town Isolated.

AUSTIN, TEXAS, Oct. 2.—The Texas flood situation is growing steadily worse. Heavy rains were falling on the broad watersheds of the already swollen rivers, and there was no prospect of clear weather.

The crest of the flood is expected to reach here to-morrow. The Colorado River is 20 feet above normal, and reports indicated a further rise was due within 24 hours.

The damage to railroad property in Texas was estimated at $2,000,000. More than 2,000,000 bales of cotton have been swept away.

Warnings were issued to-day to residents of the cultivated valleys of the Colorado, Guadalupe and other rivers, advising them to move to higher ground.

Many towns were out of communication with Austin and the rest of the State to-day, and it was considered likely that more persons have perished.

The list of dead obtained to-day included: Mrs. Amelia Vallonou and her three children, San Antonio; Mrs. J. Grumble and her two children, Georgetown; Mrs. Mary Manken, Georgetown; two persons at San Marcos; two persons west of San Antonio.

No authentic estimates were obtainable to-day as to the property loss, although it was asserted that the crop loss would exceed $5,000,000.

In San Antonio the damage was placed at $1,000,000. Houston reported a loss of more than $100,000 in the city and heavy damage to property in the country surrounding Houston, Beaumont, Orange, Victoria, Brownsville, Kyle, Bryan and a score of smaller towns suffered heavy losses.

Water from four to six feet deep was running through several streets in San Antonio. The rainfall has been the heaviest ever known there.

Houston in the last two weeks has had 20 inches of rainfall. Street car water power, light and gas services have been suspended indefinitely in a dozen cities. Forty bridges have been washed out and railroad service was demoralized over one-half of Texas.

This Washer Must Pay for Itself

A MAN tried to sell me a horse once. He said it was a fine horse and had nothing the matter with it. I wanted a fine horse. But I didn't know anything about horses much. And I didn't know how to sell a horse, either.

So I told him I wanted to try the horse for a month. He said "All right, but you'll have to give me $100.00, and I'll give you back your money if the horse isn't all right."

Well, I didn't like the horse much, but I thought I might have to give up my money if I once parted with the horse, although I wanted it badly. So I said "I'll make Washing Machines—the new Gravitry Washer."

Washer! I said to myself, lots of people say that about my Washing Machine as I thought about the horse, and about the man who sold it.

But I'd never done, because they wouldn't write and tell me. You see I sell my Washing Machines by mail. I have sold over half a million that way.

So, thought I, it is only fair enough to let people try my Washing Machine for a month, before they pay for them, just as I wanted to try the horse.

Now, I know what our "1909 Gravitry" Washer will do. I know it will wash the clothes, without wearing or tearing them in any way, and that the clothes can be washed by hand or by any other machine.

It will wash a tub full of very dirty clothes in 15 minutes. It will wash a tub full of clothes in 15 minutes, without wearing out the clothes.

Our "1909 Gravitry" Washer does the work so easy that a child can run it almost as well as a strong woman, and doesn't wear the clothes, for the clothes are broken buttons the way all other machines do.

It just drives every water clear through the fibers of the clothes like a force pump, night.

So, said I to myself, I will do with my "1909 Gravitry" Washer what I would do with the horse. Only I won't wait for people to say that it will do first, and I'll make good the same every time.

Let me send you a "1909 Gravitry" Washer on a month's free trial. I'll pay the freight out of my own pocket, and if you don't want the machine after you've used it a month, I'll take it back and pay the freight, too. Surely that is fair enough.

Doesn't it prove that the "1909 Gravitry" Washer must be all that I say?

And you can pay me out of what it saves for you. It will save the whole cost in a few months, in wear and tear on the clothes alone. And then it will save you 25 cents to a dollar each week on what women's wages. If you keep the machine after the month's free trial, it is all out of what it saves you. If it saves you 50 cents a week, and you keep it, you will "pay" for it in that time, and I'll wait for my money until the machine itself earns the balance.

1909 model a $100.00, and let me send you a book about the "1909 Gravitry" Washer that washes clothes in 15 minutes.

Address me this way—H. L. Barker, 1883 Court Street, Hightstown, N. Y. If you live in Canada, address 1909 Washer Co., 207 Young St., Toronto, Ont.

NEW MONEY BILL TO END REIGN OF WALL STREET

GRAIN SHORTAGE OVER BILLION BU.

Wheat, Oats, Rye and Barley Deficiency Not Made Up by Potato Crop.

Serious shortage exists in the world's crop of grain for 1913. The supply is nearly 10 per cent less than last year. The total deficiency aggregates 1,250,000,000 bushels of the five grain staples. This shortage is not made up by potatoes, the world's supply of which is not greater than last year, and 200,000,000 bushels less than the world's normal potato crop of 1910.

These amazing conclusions are indicated by the preliminary report upon world's crops and the future of prices, prepared by Orange Judd

Mott at Last to Wed Mrs. Bowne Union in Sight for World-Elopers

Frances Hewitt Bowne, who may now wed man she eloped with.

Divorce of Injured Husband and Reported Suit of Deserted Wife to Give Freedom.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The curtain will fall to the tune of wedding bells on the sensational drama of the love of Frances Hewitt Bowne and Jordan Lawrence Mott, 30. Their story has been one to add some sordid pages to the book of American life. It has included the destruction of two homes, for both Mrs. Bowne and Mott, eloping, left their legally married mates. It has told how Mott, the son of an old and wealthy family, has been denounced by his relatives. And most romantic of all it included the flight of the elopers across the world, with Hector Fuller, soldier of fortune, globe trotter, prince of adventurers, hot on their trail, commissioned by Mott's family to return with him to New York. Mrs. Bowne and Mott are living in Hongkong, China. Mrs. Bowne's husband, a wealthy lawyer, has just gotten a divorce. Mott's wife, it is said, will soon seek a divorce, and then the two will be able to marry.

NEW YORK CAN NOT DICTATE "LOANS"

Securities Will Be Handled on Exchanges Where Majority of Shares Are Held.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—If the currency bill passes the Senate as it left the House, New York will be bereft of a final excuse for monopolizing the trading in certain securities.

The defense of "easy and abundant loans" of "quick and ready banking accommodations" will be no longer valid. Certain securities may be handled where the shares are majority held.

Boston should have exclusively American Telegraph and Telephone and the greater part of the business in Amalgamated, Anaconda and Utah Coppers. Philadelphia should lead Wall street in the handling of Pennsylvania and Reading. Chicago should have a monopoly of People's Gas and chronicle more trading in St. Paul, Illinois Central and Baltimore and Ohio than the Eastern bourse.

These are instanced at random. There are many more properties really alien to the Wall street market.

Before Wall street had enjoyed the vast vogue, which began in 1891, it was natural usage for securities to be listed and traded in one of the exchanges where such values were preponderably held. Thus Boston did much more in Atchison, in Burlington, in New Haven and in all the coppers than New York. Philadelphia was privileged in Reading, Pennsylvania, in Lehigh Valley and issues owned by Pennsylvanians. Chicago was the chief market for several steel issues and of People's Gas.

The transfer of control of the gas company to the Flower interests, and later the exodus Eastward of a group of Chicago promoters and millionaires, gave New York what had once been Chicago's.

In the last few years however, there have been retransfers to the Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia markets. The most notable, numerically and collectively, are Pennsylvania and Reading to Pennsylvania investors and capitalists, and People's Gas, St. Paul and Sears-Roebuck to Chicago's.

If the houses of Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia can rid themselves of the infection of localism that has afflicted them in the last decade, they can come into their own; can flourish as they did before Wall street became the irresistible lure of adventurous money captains.

Two Counties Fight For Slayer Spencer

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—A legal battle for the possession of Henry Spencer, slayer of Mrs. Mildred Allison-Rexroat, the Chicago tango teacher, and confessed slayer of 24 other persons, was started to-day by officials of DuPage County, where the Rexroat murder was committed.

While the police had obtained satisfactory confirmation of Spencer's confession that he killed Mrs. Rexroat at Wayne, Ill., his confessions of several of the other 24 murders were found to be untrue, imagined by Spencer in his "dope-inspired" brain.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—A warrant charging a violation of the white slave law was placed in the hands of Federal officers to-day, to be served on William Rufus Edwards, wealthy lumber and coal dealer of St. Paul, Minn. It was alleged that Edwards took Miss Ada M. Cox from Chicago to St. Paul.

Southern Farming of Atlanta. This authority emphasizes that the four breadstuffs—wheat, oats, rye and barley—will probably be 500,000,000 bushels less this year than in 1912, 70,000,000 bushels less than two years ago, but 4 per cent more than in the 1910 crop.

Unless Russia and Argentina conclude the year with much greater yields than now seems possible, the world's wheat production will be only about 100,000,000 bushels more than last year. This will be an increase of only 3 per cent over the supply of wheat produced throughout the world in 1912.

MANY ERRORS ARE LAID TO THE COURT

Charge Is Also Made by the Lawyers That the Jury Was Intimidated.

In an exhaustive research, requiring nearly 200 typewritten pages, citing 115 counts and attacking two of the jurors, an amended motion for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, sentenced to hang October 10 for the murder of Mary Phagan, was filed Wednesday.

Each count wherein the trial is declared to have erred in the trial of the pencil factory superintendent, is dissected, its effect asserted and the whole combined in a masterly manner to form the chain of the defense's claims.

The two jurors named are Barrett J. J. J. and J. A. Hensley, both of whom, it is claimed in the motion, were prejudiced against Frank before they were selected. Affidavits will be introduced to support this contention.

The motion was placed in the hands of Solicitor Dorsey for his inspection and reply.

Principal among the objections offered in the motion is the conduct of the crowds which attended the trial. Frank's attorneys openly declare that the jury was intimidated, and despite their objections no effort was made to stop the applause which time and again rang out in the courtroom.

"Threats to clear the room were made by the trial judge," the motion states, "but they were absolutely disregarded and the threats were not enforced, despite the objections of counsel for the defense."

Hits at Conley Testimony.

The motion struck also at the admission of the lascivious testimony of Jim Conley, the negro sweeper. The testimony referred to included that wherein the negro declared on the witness stand that Frank had entertained women in the factory on holidays while he stood watch at the front door.

"Lasciviousness is not one of the character traits involved in a plea of murder and can not be held a murder trial, even when the defendant has put his character in issue," the motion stated.

The testimony of Dr. H. F. Harris, County Physician, also was objected to. The motion declared that the physician's testimony was "argumentative and not a statement of fact, scientifically or otherwise." Dr. Harris had gone extensively into an analysis of the cabbage taken from the stomach of Mary Phagan, which she had eaten on the morning of her tragic death.

SEABORN WRIGHT PREDICTS END OF LOCKER CLUBS

NEAR-BEER BARS' FATE IN BALANCE

Floyd County Test Case Is Argued Before the Supreme Court of Georgia.

Seaborn Wright, of Rome, the famous prohibitionist and father of the present "dry" law in Georgia, argued a case in the Supreme Court to-day, which, if affirmed, will, he says, close every locker club and near-beer saloon in the State.

The case came up from the Superior Court of Floyd as that of Wilkinson vs. Martin, and the Hill City Club, Wilkinson is the president of the Law Enforcement League in Rome and Wright is the league's attorney.

The club was proceeded against and closed under that section of the code permitting any citizen to enjoin a "blind tiger" as a nuisance. This is the same section of the code under which three-fourths of the saloons in Macon already have been shut up.

The Rome club pleads, however, that it does not operate its lockers for profit in any manner. It says that each member is served from his locker at the actual cost of the liquors dispensed, but that it does exact of each order served a service fee of 1-2 cents, which fee goes to liquidate the running expense of the club.

Judge Moses Wright, in the Superior Court of Floyd, held that this fee for service constitutes an element of profit to the club on the dispensing of liquors, and, therefore, is altogether unlawful, and it is upon that point that the club appealed.

Wright, for the Law Enforcement League of Rome, asks that the Rome court ruling be affirmed, and that the Supreme Court further state, if it will, just what a locker club may do, how far it may go, and so forth, in dispensing liquors in Georgia.

"I am confident that the Supreme Court will affirm the case tried in the Floyd court," said Mr. Wright, "and if it does the last evasion of the clubs will be cut from under them."

"We have all the laws against the sale of liquor we need in Georgia, and I have no patience with the new laws forever offered in the Legislature. We have now a perfect prohibition law—all that we need in Georgia is enforcement of the law we have."

"If the Supreme Court will do the things I am asking it to do, including its affirmation of the case from Floyd, I promise that there will not be twelve months hence within the State of Georgia, no matter what city is concerned, even including Savannah, one illegal locker club in existence or one saloon that sells a beverage prohibited by law."

"Nearly every club, if not all, in Georgia to-day, and every near-beer saloon, is illegally operated—it is nothing more or less than blind tigers. We are shutting them up in Macon, and we have shut them up in Rome. We will shut them up everywhere."

"The present case from Floyd will bring about a 'show down'—mark that."

GEORGIA PRELATE STRIKES A TANGO

Bishop Keiley, in Address to Diocese, Declares Against This Form of Pleasure.

Characterizing the present popular dances, such as the turkey trot and tango, as "offensive to good taste" and "repellent to Christian modesty," Bishop Keiley, of the Diocese of Georgia, in a portion of a circular letter which was read in every Catholic church in Atlanta Sunday, declared for a striking reform of this form of amusement.

Bishop Keiley addressed the letter from his home in Savannah. It was dispatched to the heads of every Catholic church in his diocese and read from the pulpits simultaneously.

The noted prelate marveled at the turn which popular amusement has taken in this respect. "I must make a passing reference here to one form of very popular amusement," the letter read, "I refer to dancing. I am free to say that I can not understand the great popularity of dancing, for the exercise therein taken can readily be gained in other ways."

"But be that as it may, it seems to be the fact that recently there have been introduced certain dances which are extremely popular but offensive to good taste and repellent to Christian modesty."

"Can there be any doubt in the minds of Catholic mothers of their attitude towards these dances?" Bishop Keiley's letter contained also an arraignment of a woman's modern apparel. This section of the epistle will be read in Catholic churches of Atlanta next Sunday.

MORE ATTACKS ON FRANK JUROR

Defense Claims It Has New and Positive Proof of Bias Accusations Against Henslee.

A. H. Henslee, of the jury that convicted Leo M. Frank, made his bitterly denunciatory remarks against the defendant in the hearing of a far greater number of persons than already have made depositions, according to information in the possession of Frank's attorneys.

While the prisoner's lawyers are busy building up their plea, Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey is working ceaselessly preparing to demolish their arguments for a new trial.

"We have the names of a great many other persons to whom Henslee expressed his opinion of Frank's guilt and his hope that he would have the opportunity to assist in convicting him," said Reuben R. Arnold, of counsel for Frank, Monday.

"These persons would be called on to tell the truth in respect to Henslee's attitude before the trial were it not for their evident reluctance to incur the enmity of Henslee and the fact that we already have the sworn statements of a sufficient number of reliable persons to prove conclusively that Henslee was guilty of making the biased and prejudiced remarks."

Speaks for Sulzer.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Attorney for Governor William Sulzer to-day laid their plans for an attempt to get the statement of the Governor before the high court of impeachment without putting him on the witness stand to run the fire of cross-examination, and the attempt was arranged along the idea of several English precedents in which the respondent either read a statement or prepared one which was read by counsel.

Harvey D. Hinman, one of the chief lawyers for Governor Sulzer, this afternoon made the opening speech for the defense. Not a hint of the nature of the proceedings to be put in motion by the Governor was allowed to leak out until the very moment when the Hinman address began.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

The Thrilling Story of a Modern Monte Cristo

What Has Gone Before

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Morland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm brews over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning sears a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it turns over. A man with the girl trips over Philip in his excitement. He calls the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's News.

Just as he is about to hang himself a meteor flashes by the window and crashes into the flagstones in the yard. The boy takes this as a sign from heaven not to kill himself.

Now Go On With the Story.

By LOUIS TRACY.

(Copyright 1904, by Edward J. Clobe.)

"Maybe; but I don't see what's the use. 'Tis a sheer waste of time. But if 're set on findin' out, go to a big man. These German Jews round about here are omadhauns. They don't know a watch from a clock, an' if they did they'd chate ye."

"I never thought of that, yet I ought to know by this time. Thank you; I will go into the city."

He took the pebble which he placed in his waistcoat pocket. Walking briskly, he traversed some part of the sorrowful journey of barely twelve hours earlier. What had happened to change his mood he did not know, and scarcely troubled to inquire. Last night he hurried through these streets in a frenzied quest for death. Now he strode along full of hope, joyous in the confidence of life and youth. His one dominant thought was that his mother had protected him, had snatched him from the dark gate of eternity. Oddly enough, he had far more stress on his escape from the meteor than on the accident that prevented his contemplated suicide. This latter idea had vanished with the madness that induced it. Philip was sane again, morally and mentally. He was keenly anxious to justify his mother's trust in him. The bustling wind, annoying to most wayfarers, only aroused in him a spirit of resistance, of fortitude. He braved it so manfully that when at last he paused at the door of a great jewelry establishment in Leadenhall his face was flushed and his manner eager and animated.

He opened the door, but was rudely brought back to a sense of his surroundings by the suspicious question of a shopwalker.

"Now, boy, what do you want here?"

The unconscious stress in the man's words was certainly borne out by the contrast between Philip, a social scion in attire, and the wealth of gold and precious stones cut off from him by panes of thick glass and iron bars. What, indeed, did this outcast want there?

A Surprise.

Confused by the sudden obviousness, and no less by its complete obnoxiousness, Philip flushed and stammered: "I—only in need of some information, sir," he answered.

Like all others, the shopman was amazed by the difference between the boy's manners and his appearance.

"Information?" he repeated, in his surprise. "What information can we give you?"

The wealth of the firm oppressed this man. He could only speak in accents of adulation where the shop was concerned.

Philip produced his white pebble.

"What is this?" he said.

The directness of the query again took his hearer aback. Without a word he bent and examined the stone. Professional instinct mastered all other considerations.

"You must apply to that department," he majestically waved his hand toward a side counter. Philip obeyed and approached a small, stidely personage, a man with clever, kindly eyes, who was submitting to microscopical examination a number of tiny stones spread out on a chamois leather folding case. He quietly removed the case when his glance rested on the boy.

"Well," he said blandly, wondering why on earth the skilled shopwalker had sent such a disreputable urchin to him. Philip was now quite collected in his wits. He held out the pebble, with a more detailed statement. "I found this," he said. "I thought that it might be valuable, and a friend advised me to bring it here. Will you kindly tell me what it is?"

Fabulous Wealth.

The man behind the counter stared at him for a moment, but he reached over for the stone. Without a word he placed it beneath the microscope,

He demanded to see the jeweler.

and gave it a very brief examination. Then he pressed it against his cheek.

"Where did you get it?" he asked.

"I found it where it had fallen on the pavement."

"Are you sure?"

"Quite sure."

"Strange!" was the muttered comment, and Philip began to understand that his meteor possessed attributes hitherto unsuspected.

"But what is it?" he inquired after a pause.

"A meteoric diamond."

"A meteoric diamond?"

"Yes."

"Is it worth much?"

"A great deal. Probably some hundreds of pounds."

Philip felt his face growing pale. This dirty-white, small stone worth hundreds of pounds! Yet in his pocket he had 29 other specimens, many of them much larger than the one chosen haphazard for inspection, and in the backyard of his tenement lay heaps of them, scattered about the pavement like hailstones after a shower, while the meteor itself was a compact mass of them. He became somewhat faint and leaned against the glass case that surmounted the counter.

"Is that really true?" was all he could say.

The expert value of diamonds smiled. His first impulse was to send for the police, but he knew that meteoric diamonds did fall to earth occasionally, and he believed the boy's story. Moreover, the thing was such a rarity and of such value that the holder must be fully able to account for its possession before he could dispose of it. So his tone was not unkindly as he replied:

"It is quite true, but if you want to ascertain its exact value you should go to a Hatton Garden merchant, and he most probably would make you a fair offer. It has to be cut and polished, you know, before it becomes salable, and I must warn you that most rigid inquiry will be made as to how it came into your hands."

"It fell from heaven," was the wholly unexpected answer, for Philip was shaken and hardly master of his faculties.

"Yes, yes, I know. Personally, I believe you, or you would be in custody at this moment. Take it to Messrs. Isaacstein & Co., Hatton Garden. Say I sent you—Mr. Wilson is my name—and make your best terms with Mr. Isaacstein. He will treat you fairly. But, again, be sure and tell the truth, as he will investigate your story fully before he is satisfied as to its accuracy."

Philip, walking through dreamland, quitted the shop. He mingled with the jostling crowd and drifted into Hatton Garden. He sauntered, rather, with his right hand clenched on the tiny parcel in his pocket, the parcel which had suddenly been endowed with such magic potentialities. It was the instinct to guard a treasure of great value that led to this involuntary action. He was preoccupied, disturbed, vaguely striving to grasp a vision that seemed to elude his exact comprehension.

Isaacstein.

THE keen, strong March wind soon blew the clouds from his brain. He did not hurry toward Hatton Garden. He sauntered, rather, with his right hand clenched on the tiny parcel in his pocket, the parcel which had suddenly been endowed with such magic potentialities. It was the instinct to guard a treasure of great value that led to this involuntary action. He was preoccupied, disturbed, vaguely striving to grasp a vision that seemed to elude his exact comprehension.

What did it all mean? Was it really possible that he, Philip Anson, orphaned, beggared, practically a starving tramp, should have the riches of Golconda showered upon him in this mad fashion? If the small stone he had shown to the jeweler were worth hundreds, then some of those in the paper were worth thousands, while, as for the stone in the back yard of his house—well, imagination bogged at the effort to appraise it. The thought begot a sense of caution, of reserve, of well-reasoned determination not to reveal his secret to anybody. Perhaps it would be best not to take Messrs. Isaacstein & Co. wholly into his confidence.

He would simply show them the stone he had exhibited to Mr. Wilson and take the best price they offered. Then, with the money in his possession, he could effect a much-needed change in his appearance, visit them again and gradually increase his supply of diamonds until he had obtained more money than he could possibly spend during many years.

Above all else was it necessary that his meteor should be removed to a safer place than Johnson's News. Philip had no scruples about appropriating it. Lords of the Manor and Crown rights he had never heard of.

His mother, watching his every action from some Elysian height, had sent the diamond messenger as a token of her love and care. It was his, and no man should rob him of it. It belonged to him by the right of explanation and sturdy in defense of his property.

A good deal depended on the forthcoming interview and he wished he could confer a small fraction of the wealth in his pocket into a few honest pennies for the king's use on them.

The excitement and exercise had made him hungry again. His breakfast was not of ampe's proportions, and his meals of yesterday had been of the scantiest.

It would be well to face the diamond merchants with the easy confidence that springs from a satisfied appetite.

"Well, how to manage it?" He was sorry now he had not borrowed a shilling from O'Brien. The old soldier would certainly have lent it to him. He even thought of returning to the Mile End road to secure the loan, but he happened to remember that the day was Saturday, and it was probable that the Hatton Garden offices would close early. It was then nearly 11 o'clock, and he could not risk the delay of the long, dimly-lit journey.

At that instant a savory smell was wafted to him. He was passing a restaurant where sausages and other sized dainties were served in large, tin trays, and pork chops lay in inviting profusion amid rich, brown gravy. The proprietor, a portly and greasy man, with bald head and side whiskers, was standing at the door exchanging views as to business with the next door neighbor, a green grocer. Philip held in the knowledge of his wealth, resolved to try what he could achieve on credit.

He walked up to the pair.

A Meal.

"I have not got any money just now," he said to the restaurant keeper, "but if you will let me have something to eat I will gladly come back this afternoon and pay you double."

Neither man spoke at first. Philip was always unconscious of the quaint discrepancy between his high social position and his attire. He used to resent bitterly the astonishment exhibited by strangers, but to-day he was far removed above these considerations, and he backed up his request by a pleasant smile.

"The fat man grew apoplectic and turned his eyes to the sky.

"Well, I'm—" he spluttered.

The green grocer laughed, and Philip blushed.

"Do you refuse?" he said, with his downright manner and direct stare.

"Well, of all the cool cheek—" The stout person's feelings were too much for him. He could find no other words.

"It is a fair offer," persisted the boy. "You don't think I mean to swindle you, surely?"

"Well, there! I never did!"

But the green grocer intervened.

"You're a sharp lad," he guffawed.

"I've want a job."

"No," was the short reply. "I want something to eat."

"I'll pay the bill, Lord lumme, I'll do me good to see you."

"Mr. Judd, are you mad?" demanded his neighbor, whose breath had returned to him.

"Not a bit of it. The bloomin' kid can't get through a hole's worth if he bursts himself. 'Lore, I'll bet you two bob a pass up."

"Done! Walk in, sir. We'll you be pleased to 'ave, sir?"

Philip's indignation at the restaurant keeper's sarcasm yielded to his wish to see him annihilated later in the day. Moreover, the sausages really smelt excellent, and he was now ravenous. He entered the shop and gave his orders with a quiet dignity that astonished the proprietor and hugely delighted the green grocer, who, in the intervals of business, kept peering at him through the window. Philip ate steadily, and his bill amounted to ninepence, which his ally paid cheerfully.

"Thank you, Mr. Judd," he said, frankly. "I will return without fail. I will not insult you by offering more than the amount you have advanced for me, but some day I may be able to render you good service in repayment."

"Then he walked off toward the viaduct steps, and Mr. Judd looked after him.

"Talks like a little gentleman," he does. If my little Jimmie ad lived, 'e would be bin just about his age." Lord lumme, I 'ope 'e had turns up again, an' not for the sake of the bloomin' ninepence, neither. Tomatoes, mum? Yes, 'em. Fresh in this mornin'."

His Plans.

AFTER crossing Holborn Viaduct Philip stood for a little while gazing into the showroom of a motor agency. It was not that he was interested in Panhard or De Dion cars—then but little known to the general public in England—but rather that he wished to release carefully his program to be followed with Mr. Isaacstein. With a sagacious outlook for in one of his years, he decided that the meteor should not be mentioned at all, of course, the diamond merchant would instantly recognize the stone as a meteoric diamond and would demand its earthly possession.

Philip resolved to adhere to the simple statement that it was his own property, and that any reasonable inquiry might be made in all quarters where meteoric diamonds were obtainable as to whether or not such a stone was missing. Meanwhile he would obtain from Mr. Isaacstein a receipt acknowledging its custody and a small advance of money, far below its real worth, leaving the completion of the transaction until a later date.

The question of giving or withholding his address if it were asked for was a difficult one to settle offhand. Perhaps the course of events would permit him to keep Johnson's News altogether out of the record, and a more reputable habitation would be provided once he had the requisite funds.

Thinking he had successfully tackled all the problems that would demand solution, Philip wasted no more time. He entered Hatton Garden, and had not gone past many of its dingy houses until he saw a large, brass plate, bearing the legend: Isaacstein & Co., Diamond Merchants, Kimberley, Amsterdam and London.

He entered the office and was instantly confronted by a big-nosed youth, who surveyed him through a grille with an arched opening in it to admit letters and small parcels.

To the Rescue.

"Oh, Mr. Isaacstein!" said Philip.

"Oh, yes," grinned the other. "Will you kindly tell him I wish to see him?"

"Oh, yes." There was a joke lurking somewhere in the atmosphere, but the young Hebrew had not caught the drift yet. The stout and unimpeachable youth was evidently horsing up the account of such gentle people as came to the office on business.

Philip waited a second. The boy behind the grille filled in the interval by copying an address into the electric book.

"Why do you not tell Mr. Isaacstein I'm here," he said at last.

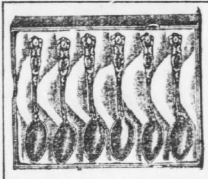

"Oh, yes. You'll be funny eh?"

The other smirked over the hidden

Our Atmosphere Great Mine of Riches

It Is Filled With Nature's Treasures, Which Mankind Has Only Just Begun to Appreciate.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

FOR thousands of years men have been content to breathe the air, and think little about it. They were like fish in the water—satisfied, and perhaps grateful, because the transparent medium in which they were plunged kept them alive.

Now, suddenly, science has discovered that the air is a vast mine of untold wealth which only needs to be worked properly in order to furnish us with a great variety of substances that can be utilized in the arts and industries of civilized life.

In the first place, the atmosphere is capable of furnishing enough nitrogen to fertilize all the arable soil of the globe, and to double its capacity of production, without sensibly feeling the loss.

Air Over Small Part of Earth Is Rich in Fertilizing Power.

The air resting upon each ten acres of the earth's surface contains as much nitrogen as is possessed by 2,000,000 tons of Chilean nitrates—the amount that Europe has annually imported in recent years, from the diminishing guano deposits of South America, in order to maintain the fertility of its grain fields. But the entire atmosphere covering the globe contains twelve thousand million times as much nitrogen as that which floats over each ten acres of surface—or, in other words, is equivalent in fertilizing power to twenty-four thousand million-million tons of Chilean nitrates!

This atmospheric nitrogen not only can be, but is being, transformed into artificial nitrates which are beginning to be substituted, on a large scale, for the natural product, which is not sufficient in quantity for the growing needs of the world's increasing population. In Norway, Sweden, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, France and Spain large installations for the transformation of atmospheric nitrogen into fertilizers now exist.

But to serve as a base for fertilizers is only one of the uses to which nitrogen taken direct from the air is put. It is also employed in the fabrication of explosives, of dyes, of photographic materials, of ammonia, of electric lamp filaments, of artificial indigo, of medicines, and in many other ways.

The second great constituent of the air, oxygen, is equally manifold in its uses when separated from the atmosphere. It gives us ozone, one of the most powerful antiseptics known, which is employed, for instance, in purifying the drinking water of great cities, and also in purifying and vitalizing the air in confined places. In art and industry oxygen plays so large a part that, before means had been invented for readily obtaining it in large quantities from the air, little advance could be made in some occupations which are now flourishing.

But there are other things in the great aerial mine over our heads that are like diamonds scattered among lodes of gold and silver. It is only within the last twenty years that we have found out that the atmosphere contains, in addition to oxygen, nitrogen, carbonic acid, ammonia and water vapor, five previously unknown gasses, viz.: argon, helium, neon, krypton and xenon. These occur in small quantities, but they exhibit remarkable and often very useful properties.

Helium appears to possess valuable medicinal properties, but, at the present time, neon seems to be the one of these rare atmospheric gases which offers the greatest utility. It is employed to produce various kinds of artificial light. When an electric current is passed through a tube filled with pure neon it gives a brilliant red light. If mercury vapor is mingled with the neon the color of the light is blue. If nitrogen and carbonic anhydride form the mixture with neon the illumination bursts into a glow resembling sunlight.

Carbonic anhydride alone gives a white light; if nitrogen is mingled with it the color of the light becomes a rose-yellow, or pink; if a little ordinary air is let in the hue changes to pure rose. With various mixtures almost any desired color of light may be obtained, and a group of illuminated tubes may be made to resemble some of the clusters of many colored stars which astronomers have seen in the sky.

Exploitation of Air's Industrial Riches Has Only Begun.

The great reducing machine for the gaseous ores of the atmosphere is the apparatus employed to produce liquid air. With this the oxygen and nitrogen are easily separated, and by processes of isolation and distribution all the rare gases that have been named are obtained, in a pure state, from the liquefied air. The exploitation of the industrial riches of the air has only just begun, but it has already gone far enough to justify the assertion of a French writer that it "will lead to a complete economic revolution."

Fewer Marriages Because People Think Cold Logic Has Displaced Sentiment and the Mating Instinct---Intelligent Persons Now Glance Into the Future.

By DOROTHY DIX

NEW YORK CONSERVATION COMMISSIONER E. E. RIT-TENHOUSE asks: "Why are there more than seventeen million unmarried men and women in the United States?"

"Never," he says, "has a nation been so prosperous or so within reach of the comforts and luxuries of life. Yet people do not marry. There is something wrong. What is it?"

There are many reasons why people do not marry. One is the high cost of living, for while the nation is undoubtedly prosperous, the golden stream doesn't wash by every man's door to an extent that enables him to support a family in any decent comfort.

The main reason, however, that there has been what Mr. Wegs called a decline and fall of matrimony is because people have begun to use their heads instead of their hearts in deciding the matter. Cold logic has superseded the mating instinct in dealing with the problem.

Men and Women Wed Formerly Merely as a Matter of Sentiment.

In former times men and women married simply because they were attracted to some member of the opposite sex. Whether they could feed or clothe a family, or whether they were likely to bequeath some terrible inheritance to their offspring, did not enter into their calculation. They went it blind, without regard to consequences. Now intelligent men and women consider before marriage whether they have a right to marry and bring into the world deformed and diseased children, or children that they will have to sell into child slavery because of poverty.

Also men and women are becoming afraid to marry. They see that nine-tenths of the marriages in the world are failures, so far as bringing any happiness to either husband or wife, and so they decide that single blessedness is better than double wretchedness.

Only a few days ago a brilliant young physician, who has already achieved success, said to me that nothing on earth, after what he had seen of matrimonial misery through the practice of his profession, could ever induce him to marry. He recognized that the ideal marriage was the happiest lot on earth, but the chances against it were too great. He was playing no hundred to one shot at happiness.

And the same theory holds good at the other end of the social line. The other day a large manufacturer sent me a letter that was as curious and interesting a human document as were the letters of Grace Brown. This letter had been written by a little untaught mill girl, who was only seventeen, but who, in some strange way, had fathomed the depths of the philosophy of modern life. It was written to her sweetheart, breaking off her engagement to him, and it fell into the manufacturer's hands through one of his stenographers having written it for the girl on the typewriter, and a carbon copy of it having been left lying about.

The letter in part is as follows: "I have wanted to tell you that I can't marry you, and you know the reason. I hope you will not think hard of me, and will understand why under the circumstances I must refuse. We both have our living to make, and you know we could not get along on what you make now, the way living expenses are. It was different when our fathers and mothers married; people then went out with less, and there were not so many things to see, and so to, and to buy."

"I know you think you could do without some things, and I believe you would try, but after a little while you would begin to wonder if you are getting enough to make up for what you had given up. You know our friends are not all married, and they would still be able to go and do things when we could not. You and I would still be young folks, although we were married, and I think we would both feel bad when we saw the good times our single friends were having, and which we used to have, and could not have any more. Why can't we still be good friends and sweethearts, and wait until you can get into some little business where I could help, and we would have more to work on?"

"I am writing this to you so you can not interrupt me until I am through. I know you love me, and it is nice to be loved, and I think you know I love you, but we can not marry now. It would make us both miserable."

In this letter you have the reason why most of the seventeen million men and women in this country who are unmarried don't marry. They love. They would like to marry, but they have faced the fact that it takes bread and butter as well as sentiment to keep a house going.

The girl at work can make a decent living for herself. The man at work can make a decent living for himself, but the man doesn't make enough to make a decent living for the girl and himself both, and the children that they may have. So they stay single.

Increase in Number of Bachelors and Spinners Explained.

Also the standard of living has been raised. As the little mill girl says, "When our fathers and mothers married people were satisfied with less, and there were not so many things to see and go to and to buy." It's folly to ignore this, and to talk about going back to the simple life. We can't do it. We can't go back to tallow dips after electric light, or ride on a stage coach after we are used to steam cars. It's unromantic, but true, that it's easier to do without a husband or wife than it is to do without the comforts to which we are accustomed.

All of which makes it rough for Cupid, but it explains the ever-increasing number of old maids and old bachelors.

PRICE APPEALS FOR DIVERSITY OF CROPS

Commissioner of Agriculture James D. Price has sounded a warning, as well as a word of encouragement, to the farmers of Georgia, and pleads with them to determine next year upon more general diversification of their crops.

The Commissioner sees prosperous times ahead, but he thinks intelligent and conservative farming is more surely indicated now than ever before for the future.

He says: "In my opinion, Georgia never had a more golden opportunity to start a thorough and complete development of her agricultural resources. In order for this to be done, however, the merchants, the bankers, the warehousemen and the farmers must work together."

"The years 1911 and 1912 were both trying on the farmers and allied business interests, and unless we are careful now we will likely have similar conditions the next two years."

Warning of 1910. "The year 1910 was one of prosperity, similar to this year. In the fall money was plentiful and the outlook bright for good times and prosperity. The farmer expanded by planting his crop for all cotton."

"In the spring of 1911 credit was cheap and the farmer continued to expand for the merchant, the banker and the warehouseman were lavish with their credit. The result was that Georgia raised the biggest crop she ever had made, and the farmers were extravagant in making it. The yield was large and the cost of making it so great that the low prices made the money returned much less than was necessary to pay the expenses, with the result that the merchant, the banker, and the warehouseman had to carry over many notes and accounts."

"The year 1912 caught the farmer with an insufficient supply of feed-stuff and a good many obligations. He was not in a position to plant food crops, for it seemed to him that it was necessary to plant cotton in order to pay running expenses and accumulated debts."

"At harvest time the cotton crop was both short and cheap, and we know what the depressed condition was all over Georgia last fall. At the start of this year credit was tight, the seasons were unfavorable and economy was the eternal watchword. The consequence now is that Georgia is in better shape, generally, than it has been since the fall of 1910."

Plant Small Acreage.

"If the farmers of Georgia this fall will plan their crops for 1914 to include small grain, hogs, sheep, some cattle and a small acreage in cotton, and if they will practice the most rigid economy this fall in buying for cash and next spring buying on credit, the result next year will be continued prosperity. On the other hand, if the farmers of Georgia are extravagant in the expenditure of the money they are receiving for their cotton and cotton seed, and if they become inflated with the desire to expand and raise much more cotton next year, if business interests are lax with credit, the results next year will be disastrous."

Market Quotations For Week Ending October 7, 1913

REVIEW OF COTTON MARKET

Market was dumped on the American markets from all parts of the world during the week. Liverpool sold lots of the staple on this side of the water. The South and Southwest also sold, and the New York ring professionals threw a lot more aboard.

The Government's condition report as of September 25, showing 64.1 per cent, against the general expectation of 63.5 to 64 per cent, coupled with better weather conditions west of the river and power cables, was the chief influence causing the rapid slump in prices here and abroad.

The market held remarkably steady during the forepart of the week, with prices in the highest levels of the year, with indications pointing to still higher values, as weather conditions in the southwest were bad. Private advices were to the effect that the crop in the southwest, notably Texas, had suffered a loss of 300,000 to 500,000 bales of cotton from flood damage. Naturally the trade, or rather, those who are inclined to the bull side, figured that the market was in a stronger position than ever before, as the foundation supporting the market looked substantial enough to take care of the high levels, regardless of what the Government gave the condition of the crop. On Wednesday October New York closed at 14.90-14.91, December 13.85-13.86 and January 13.85-69 to meet the Bureau. But the Government condition report of September 25 showed a percentage of 64.1, and this was a signal for an avalanche of selling which broke the market 29 points, big on the reaction the largest spot interests sent numerous buying orders into the ring and stopped the slump. There was a slow rally of 5 to 8 points and the undertone afterwards was steady up to the close, which was 2 to 3 points net lower. Earlier in the day the census report on ginners was issued and showed the second largest on record, but the effect of these figures was offset by advices of bad rains in Louisiana and Texas, and a big sale of spots in Liverpool. Naturally the trade laid more stress on the condition figures than ginners.

Analysis of the figures disclose that Texas has deteriorated only 1 point in the past month and is only 2 points below the ten year average. But it is 8 points under the condition of the corresponding date of 1911, the big crop year. Georgia, on the other hand, has deteriorated 4 points in the past month, and at 72 equals its ten year average. But it is 5 points below its record of 1911. Oklahoma makes the worst showing of all, with a loss for the month of 3 points and a percentage of 27 points below its ten year average and 18 points under its mark of 1911.

The most conservative cotton interest expressed the belief that the foregoing figures indicate an ultimate yield of only 13,500,000 bales. Some even go below that figure, while there are many who assert that the outcome of the crop will be as high as 14,500,000 bales or more.

Habersham King caused a flurry in the markets Monday when he promulgated his estimate on the size of the total crop for 1913-1914, giving his guess as 15,500,000 bales, but students of the market did not take his estimate seriously. His guess of 6,000,000 bales for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas was considered much too high.

The market during the last few days has been put under pressure and it now looks to be extremely short. It has also been reported that there was heavy short selling Monday by some of the big money makers, but the declines there was evidence of strong buying and all offerings were absorbed remarkably well. The excessive rains in the west are given as the reason for strength and the bull market, but the purchase of the staple on all reactions, asserting that there is practically no chance of a top crop in Texas and Oklahoma. The condition of the cotton in North Texas and Oklahoma is described as pitiable. These observers say there is very little of the staple at the mills or at the gins. They also state that the fields are half bare and the crop fully 50 per cent gone.

While the damage to the crop by the recent flood in the West will not be published by the Government, as their last condition report of the season was made up to September 25, those inclined to the bull side based their estimate that it will be shown in the next ginner's report, which is made up probably probably about as of the amount of ginner's report. It is estimated that the ginners to September 25 aggregated 3,227,851 bales, against 3,005,524 bales a year ago during the same period and 3,675,504 bales for the corresponding date in 1911. But it is asserted that this increase in ginning is due mostly to premature opening but it does not alter the fact that the final yield promises to be sufficiently below the needs of the world's spinners' requirements to warrant higher prices at the season's advance. Bull leaders were more optimistic than pessimistic over the action of the market during the week, asserting that a reasonable profit could be had after the market had a continuous rise of more than 300 points was fully justified.

Fig. the first time in several weeks bears had the courage to sell freely and added to their offerings was a large volume of liquidation by restive Jones, who did not like the way the market was acting, and considering the quantity of cotton dumped down on the list it acted very well. Spot interests and bull leaders seemed pleased when reactionists at last had their inning and they were heard to remark considerably by reading freely. But there was buying by the same spot interests that were actively instrumental in advancing prices previously and brokers for prominent bulls, who had sold out of the market, were now buying in the market, and that was good, considering what was supposed to have been a bear raid and that was more real than apparent, as everything was clear for bear selling, but they made very little profit before the decline was checked.

Liverpool had a fair reaction and the idea still prevails that this market will sell still higher, although there are those who are of the opinion that the ports of labor difficulties in the Lancashire district. One private cable said that the masters were eager for an excuse to shut down their mills because of poor trade, and the probability of a general lock-out of the textile strikers at one mill, which is affected by the labor dispute, return to work.

Friday Liverpool, apparently repugnant over the cabled rumor about labor troubles in Lancashire, tried to atone by selling 20,000 lots of spots at an advance of 18 penny points, while the futures there came better than due, and even when the market declined sharply on the final day of the week, the bureau figures, but refused to go below Wednesday's closing level in the English market. To all appearances the English cousins had the bull view and were taking the market on the bureau of the weather causing another sharp return without their having at least a few bales of spots and contracts. These reports of labor troubles, of course, caused some hesitation on the part of the bulls, but very often they affect prices, because the trade has been fooled so often by labor rumors that it has come to a point they generally fall into a trap, and it is amusing how Manchester and Liverpool share every time the cotton market is booming. Should cotton decline abroad a fair cent or so that look-out trouble would be settled in five minutes.

Underneath the market's action the wise ones pretend to see a bullish purpose in view. Around the 14-cent level the short interest in the market becomes somewhat attenuated for the reason that the bears run to cover whenever the market starts to advance, while the weaker long element can not resist the temptation to take their profits on every little spurt of 20 points or more, and it is difficult for the higher price buyers to get in to obtain prices around 14 cents or run it still higher. However, the radical bulls are still confident and continue to predict 15 cents before October position is closed and there is a large outstanding short interest in the spot option, and before it dies some one will be glad to buy at the season's high point or be burnt to the core.

TUESDAY'S REVIEW.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The bears ruled in the cotton market at the opening of the day, first prices being 12 to 20 points lower than the closing quotations of Monday. After the call there was good buying and the market advanced some 3 to 4 points from the first range. New Orleans was a light buyer. But the buying was met with heavy offerings from local houses.

Some one pulled the rug out from under October and the whole list tumbled during the early forenoon. It was said that the heavy liquidation was based on cables from Liverpool, stating that the South was offering freely at lower levels than the previous week. Improved weather conditions, encouraged heavy selling by ring professionals, brokers close to spot interests and Liverpool. Those who have been on the buying side for some time supported the market half-heartedly.

The dirt downward became pronounced as the session wore on, and October dropped to 13 1/2 cents, with December going 10 points under the spot option for a loss of 24 points and January the most popular position on the list receded 24 points from the high of March, dropped 19 points to 13 1/2. The entire list showed a net decline of 22 to 25 points from the previous closing.

Local traders figured that there is still a quantity of cotton to be liquidated. Wall street and the cotton crowd were aggressive sellers and at the market weathered the support. Bull leaders stepped, giving the manipulation its full course with the one in view of replacing sold-out line at lower levels. A break of $1.40 a bale was a little too much for the bulls to stomach and suddenly they renewed their support on the remarkable firmness of the cotton goods market and expectations of a bullish weekly Government weather report. There was brisk buying from spot interests despite the apparent weakness of the market. It is however long continued to liquidate as their supply of bearish ammunition from

COTTON GOSSIP

Sic 'em, bear!

The market is sliding off pretty fast on better weather conditions in the southwest and lower spot basis. The bulls, however, show courage, asserting that a healthy reaction will put a new complexion on things.

Spot brokers say that spinners seem to be taking cotton "on call," and that would leave them as short as before. They are also saying that the high price asked in the South, where spots are holding steeper than futures in some quarters, it is believed that spinners will come in and buy the staple freely on this decline.

It is said that jobbers and retailers have been caught short and are willing to pay 100 per cent over the market quotations for immediate shipment. Weavers have cleared their shelves of stock and are sold ahead for the next sixty days. As yarns have advanced 5 in a week, it is reasonable to suppose that spinners will have to buy soon to keep pace with the demand for their product. That is one reason for the confidence of bulls in the market.

Fry goods men say that the rapid rise is due not to the high prices of the raw material, but to shortage of goods for delivery within the next two months.

Some say that there is a large outstanding short interest in October, both in New York and New Orleans, and that this option will recover lost ground before it expires.

Brown, Drakeford & Co., Liverpool, cables: "The cotton market is showing a preference of favorable weather reports and free offerings of actual and weakness of the New York market."

Ballas wires: "Texas, raining at present, but with clouds to clear. Oklahoma, cloudy; rains northeast and south; temperature 75."

GRAIN NOTES

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "Traders who take a long range view of the grain situation are disposed to go slow in making commitments at present."

Private cables from Argentina stated that the weather is favorable and the outlook for the wheat crop is very promising.

Some interests have covered their short lines of corn, due to lighter receipts and to claims that the country would not consider lower bids.

The stock of live products at Chicago is given at 143,244,000 pounds of all kinds, showing a decrease of 40,576,000 pounds for the year.

Wheat sentiment is bullish and the bears claim that the market does not rally on the other hand, there are interests in the trade who believe that if a bulge of 20 cents occur, bears will have less encouragement than they have at present.

Bartlett, Frazier Co. says: "Wheat--We see very little to encourage new buying."

Corn--Speculative sentiment is in the main bearish.

HOW CONGRESS AIDED THE WESTERN TIMBER GRAFTERS

In the Western forests log rolling is part of the business of the timber corporations. There they do the job with men, mules and donkey engines.

In the National Capitol log rolling is also part of the business of the timber corporations. There they do the job with money, tools and donkey Congressmen.

Witness a round, unvarnished tale of facts:

Among the railroad corporations which obtained grants of land on the public domain in that period of Congressional corruption and thieving following the close of the Civil War was the Oregon and California Railroad Company, with lines running South from Portland through the fertile valleys and timbered hills of Western Oregon. This corporation was granted two million three hundred and sixty thousand acres, and of that immense area, much was covered with the finest timber standing on this continent.

One provision of this grant was peculiar to it. The act of Congress stipulated that the California Railroad Company should sell these lands ONLY TO ACTUAL SETTLERS, IN LOTS NOT TO EXCEED 160 ACRES TO EACH PURCHASER AND AT A PRICE NOT TO EXCEED TWO DOLLARS AND A HALF AN ACRE.

The stipulation was plain and concise. The penalty for violating was forfeiture of the grant.

The Oregon and California Railroad took over the land and promptly proceeded to ignore and violate the stipulations of the grant. It segregated the land into lots of any size that suited its convenience and sold these lots at whatever prices it could obtain; and the price was always in excess, and frequently from ten to twenty times in excess, of the figure fixed by Congress.

In the year 1908 a joint resolution of the Senate and House directed the Attorney General of the United States to bring suit in equity to forfeit the titles of the railroad company and those holding by purchase from it, to the lands embraced in the grant. The suit was pressed to trial and the Government won.

On August 20, 1912, an act of Congress was approved which provides that individuals or corporations claiming by purchase from the Oregon and California Railroad Company land embraced in the original grant, can procure a decree of final forfeiture and re-obtain title to the same land by paying two dollars and a half an acre to the United States.

The usual verbiage and flumadiddle which distinguish statesmen's efforts to write English when travelling in birth with a statute are not absent from the full text of this act, but the essence is stated.

Having log rolled this bill through Congress, the timber grabbing corporations have since been as busy as a boy in a preserving pantry, petitioning the Federal courts to declare their titles forfeited, and then regaining title by paying to the Government $2.50 an acre for their immensely valuable and illegally obtained tract of timber. One corporation alone, the C. A. Smith Lumber Company, has just obtained in this way, in the United States District Court in Portland, possession of more than 20,000 acres of standing timber.

It was the express direction of the Act of Congress establishing the original grant that these timber lands should be sold to actual settlers only, and in lots not to exceed 160 acres in size.

Because the railroad did sell these timber lands in lots of thousands of acres to timber corporations, the grant was declared forfeited, and having obtained forfeiture on this showing, the Government turns around, and by virtue of the Act log rolled through Congress by the timber grafters a year ago, conveys to the same identical timber grabbers the same identical public timber lands in lots of the same identical illegal size.

So that, as the case stands—

The railroad keeps the money it obtained from the original illegal sales.

The timber-grabbers again have possession of the immense tracts they illegally got from the railroad.

The Government gets less than one-thirtieth the value of the lands.

"The actual settlers," the common people, get nothing.

And now listen again. By virtue of this same act, log rolled in the interest of the timber-grabbers, the small tract owner, who bought his 160-acre parcel in good faith and paid the railroad for it years ago, LOSES HIS LAND UNLESS HE GOES THROUGH THE SAME PROCESS INVENTED BY THE TIMBER GRABBERS TO CINCH THEIR GRIP UPON THEIR ILLEGALLY OBTAINED HOLDINGS.

He must go to court, file a stipulation of forfeiture to the Government, and buy back his land from the Government at the original price of $2.50 an acre.

And no matter whether he paid the railroad company $3 or $30 an acre for his land, THE RAILROAD KEEPS THE MONEY HE PAID IT, and he must pay to the Government the price originally fixed by Congress in the grant to the railroad.

In short, the Government of the United States having forfeited the Oregon and California Railroad Company's land grant, because that corporation disobeyed the plain directions of Congress that these lands should be sold only to ACTUAL SETTLERS IN 160-FARM LOTS now adopts the exact methods of the offending corporation, and sells the same lands, in the same huge parcels, to the same timber corporations, in the same disregard of the original instrument of grant, and with THE SAME DEFEAT OF THE COMMON PEOPLE'S RIGHTS TO SETTLE UPON AND HOMESTEAD THIS PUBLIC DOMAIN.

And as an incident of this scheme of daylight burglary, the innocent purchaser, who bought his little tract in good faith, after having been bunkoed by the railroad with a worthless deed, is now held up with a legal pistol pointed at his head by the very Government to which he went for redress of his wrong, and ordered to stand and deliver again.

One can not sufficiently sympathize with a Congressman who voted for this remarkable plan of punishing a lawbreaking corporation and safe-guarding the common people's rights to their own public mind. It must be an enormous strain upon his intelligence each morning to tell whether the head he is combing is his own or that of a pin.

THIS YOUNG 'OLD WORLD' WILL NEVER BE OVERCROWDED

When Columbus landed on American soil the population of this continent was possibly a million—perhaps less.

The squaws had babies nearly every year, but the squaws' husbands killed each other off so fast, and hunger and ignorance killed the squaws' daughters off so fast, that after thousands of years of "multiplying," the whole population of the North American continent was less than the population of Brooklyn, N. Y., to-day.

The wisely foolish view with alarm the fact that we have ninety millions of people on this continent now; that we have five millions cooped up in one big city.

And wisdom asks, "Where is the thing to end? What will happen to this earth when there are more human beings on it than the earth can possibly feed?"

"Will they eat each other, will infanticide be made compulsory—or, as among the ants, will the great mass of the population be made incapable of reproducing their kind?"

We are reminded of the fact that in congested parts of China thousands live and die in boats on the water, because they have no room on land, and little girls are thrown into the streams and rivers at birth because they are not wanted.

Really intelligent men, believing that figures never lie, are sure that men eventually must keep down the population, as Swift grimly suggested in his satire on Ireland, by eating the surplus children or in some other way.

Nobody ever need lose sleep worrying about the fate of humanity in an overcrowded world.

The best scientific articles and reviews that appear in this country are published now in Hearst's Magazine. That magazine, the October number, contains some interesting facts and figures that shed light on nature's method of managing population.

The elephant is big, heavy and hungry. If he multiplied rapidly enough, he would soon cover the earth and step on everybody. But the elephant is thirty years old before she has her first child. And, unlike the little mouse, she has only one at a time.

On the other hand, some of the elephant's little cousins, microscopic animalcules, beginning with a single pair, increase to the number of a hundred and seventy thousand millions (170, 000,000,000) in four days—which is quite a family.

The cabbage louse multiplies with such frightful speed that if he were not checked by a death rate as great as his fecundity, he would soon present to the eye a mass of cabbage lice bigger than this earth.

When you have a cold in the head, the living germs develop in your nose and throat by the millions, while your friend is telling you "how he cures his colds." You would be shocked if you could realize what a menagerie you carry around.

Nature, wiser than the scientists, has planned this globe for man's farm, home, intellectual gymnasium and starting point to a higher life with absolute certainty and precision.

Little by little all animal life will disappear, from the germ to the giraffe, except man, who alone will represent thought and will power, now shared with his humble brothers in the animal world.

With man, as with other animals, increased development will mean decreased fertility.

Pig weed will cover a thousand acres while the oak tree is growing half a foot above its acorn. But the oak tree will be there in a hundred years and the pig weed vanished.

Man as he becomes more highly developed intellectually will—thousands of centuries from now, populate this earth fully—and then automatically, without infanticide or cannibalism or any other horror, the population of the earth will become automatically balanced.

Each man and woman on the average will leave behind them one pair of children.

There will be no death in childhood, and no pain in childbirth—those unnecessary brutalities will be eliminated by science within a few centuries.

Meanwhile, the duty of men and women is to work for the welfare of the children, being more anxious to protect and help those that are here than to increase the number, more eager to give proper care to a few than to brag about many.

P. S.—Not entirely unselfishly, but none the less sincerely, this newspaper advises the thinking men and women among its readers to get regularly Hearst's Magazine, which gives careful attention to important scientific matters, as well as to that which is lighter and more generally interesting. To read it regularly is to have an intelligent presentation of the thought and literature of the world.
