Ethics of Dr. H. F. Harris Bitterly Attacked by Reuben Arnold

Sensational Charge Hurlled By Physician in Testimony Given at Afternoon Session

Dr. Westmoreland, Answering Question of Attorney Reuben H. Arnold, Declares He Never Heard of a Chemist Who Had Made Examination by Himself and Then Destroyed the Organs Without Bringing Them Into Court

Three experts took the stand Monday afternoon at the trial of Leo M. Frank to regulate the conclusions reached by Dr. H. F. Harris to the effect that the condition of the cabbage in the stomach of Mary Phagan showed that she must have died within an hour after death.

Dr. Thomas H. Hancock and Dr. Willis Westmoreland both declared that Dr. Harris' conclusions were not justified. Dr. Hancock said that no physician in the world would destroy the organs of a patient who had before him food which he had examined and found them to be taken from the stomach of a different patient at different periods after it had been consumed by very little if anything could be held by an examination of the food.

An attack upon the ethics of Dr. Harris for having made his examination without the aid of any other chemist or chemist having destroyed the stomach, was made by Attorney Arnold. He asked the following question of Dr. Harris:

"Have you ever known a chemist to make an examination of a corpse after death and after destroying the organs for the purpose of investigation and examination?"

Dr. Westmoreland replied in the negative, after Judge Jones had ruled that the question should be allowed.

The sensational statement was made by Dr. Willis Westmoreland that he had preferred charges of scientific dishonesty against Dr. H. F. Harris in a number of the state papers and that he (Westmoreland) thereupon resigned.

In answering a question of Attorney Reuben H. Arnold, Dr. Westmoreland declared that he knew Dr. Harris to be a man professionally known as a chemist, but that he never heard of a chemist who had made an examination by himself and then destroyed the organs without bringing them into court.

Dr. Harris testified that he had examined the stomach of Mary Phagan and found it to be empty. He said that he had examined the stomach of a different patient at different periods after it had been consumed by very little if anything could be held by an examination of the food.
