He Declares Conditions at Factory Were a Terrible Temptation "to a Man With Little Conscience and a Great Lust"-Scores Defense for Not Cross-Examining SPEER CHARGES TO State's Character Witnesses

N . n eloquent speech, replete with word pictures, sometimes sarcastic, sometimes pathetic, some times humorous, but at all times, dramatic, Attorney Frank A. Hooper, Thursday morning opened the state's argument for the conviction of Leo. M. Frank for the murder of Mary

Mr. Hooper began his speech by declaring to the jury that the state was not seeking a verdict of guilty unless the defendant was guilty, and that the state cheerfully assumed the burden of proving him guilty. "This man," said he, pointing to Frank, should not be convicted because the law is seeking a victim. We are not looking GEORGIAN TO TAKE FIRST find and punish the murderer of little Mary Phagan."

Mr. Hooper scored the conditions existing at the pencil factory, called attention to the fact that after many Final Action by Delegation witnesses had sworn that Frank's character was bad the defense bad failed to interrogate them as to why they held to such opinions.

He described the defendant as a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde-a man who was congenial with two widely different sets of associates. Mr. Hooper de clared that Jim Con'ey had stood like Stone Mountain in the face of the terrific bombardment directed at him by Attorney Rosser in an effort to break next important step in the case of Unihim down.

NOT ENOUGH FACTS TO WARRANT TRIAL, ASSERTS ATTORNEY

So Declares Reuben R. Arnold in His Opening Remarks to the Jury-He Tells Jury That the Noise of a Few Sapheads in the Street Doesn't Make Public Opinion

Mr. Arnold Scores Third-Degree Evidence, Quoting From Recent Decision by Court of Appeals and Declaring It Applies to Frank Case - His Speech Interrupted by Re-

W HEN court adjourned for lunch Thursday, Attorney Reuben R. Arnold, for the defense, had just finished laying the foundation for his speech to the jury.

A wonderfully persuasive and convincing speaker, Mr. Arnold was perhaps never more effective during his whole brilliant career than in these opening remarks.

He spoke deliberately, choosing his words, pausing for emphasis, and the gestures of a master actor could not have been more dramatic.

His tall form enabling him to sea and 'e seen from every corner of the courtroom, the peculiar resonant quality of his voice rising high above all other sounds, he caught and held the attention of spectators and jury alike with the magic of his eloquence.

He started by picturing the jury as set above and apart from the public, sequestered, guarded, reading no papers and hearing nothing if the public discussion of the trial, in order that they may imparitally weigh the evidence and make up their verdict without bias or prejudice. Then, turning to address the courtroom rather than the jury, Attorney Arnold excoriated the "long-tongued, loud-talking sap-heads who immediate-ly conclude that a man is guilty the moment the finger of suspicion is directed towards him." Using George Kendley, the street car conductor, as an example, he denounced those who would punish the defendant "for no other reason than Penrose Introduces Measure that he is a Jew." He declared that if Frank had not been a Jew he never would have been prosecuted. He paid his respects to the jury by saying they are "way above" the average. "I'm not saying this to flatter you," said he. "I reckon I have tried American Lives and Property cases before a thousand juries, and I'm telling you the simple truth." Using a recent decision of the court of appeals with deadly effect, Attorney (Continued On Page 4, Col. 1.)

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Facts

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Pianos are made in their entirety in one great plant. It is the plant of the world's greatest manufacturers of Pianos and INNER-PLAYER Pianos.

Most Players are assembled instruments. CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Pianos are not only not assembled, but their makers go a step further than other Player makers. For they make their own metal parts, and they design and build the special machinery on which these parts are made, in order to secure the greatest accuracy and precision.

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Pianos are solidly built.

Greater strength is necessary in a CAROLA INNER-PLAYER than in an Upright Piano. One is used and enjoyed by all, while the other is only occasionally played.

And so the makers do not use an ordinary piano case and insert the Player in it, as is commonly done. They build the CAROLA INNER-PLAYER from top to caster to meet the special requirements of an instrument sure to be in constant demand.

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER Pianos are equipped with every device necessary to give you a perfect command of musical through a place, and asked 100 men in the factory who knew where the office of his desk but he learned forward. PEACHTREE GREEK TO BE CLEARED OUT SOON

Creek Will Carry Away All Trash Resulting From Sewerage Beds Overflow

From interviews with members of the county commission and city commissioners in charge of the construction of the city's new sewerage beds on Peachtree creek, it seems certain that the creek will soon be cleared so that it will carry away effulgent resulting from the overflow of th esewerage beds which will be put in operation within

The county has not already commenced the work of clearing the creek, says Commissioner Winn, because the city representatives have not approached them officially on the subject When informed of this Engineer Clayton, in charge of the construction of the beds, declared the matter would be taken up fully with the county commission at its next meeting.

As it seems all the county officials needed was notification to 'commence the work, and the city officials will notify them at the earliest opportunity, it is almost certain that the creek will be properly cleared at an early date. WINN TALKS.

"I personally saw practically every one of them and explained why the creek should be cleared and urged the necessity of action. I also went before the court and showed it why the driftwood that has accumulated in the creek should be removed. I showed why this ought to be done in order to make successful the operation of the city's new $250,000 disposal plant.

"The plant will be ready for operation in September. Action ought to be taken immediately. In order to remove any responsibility for delay from our shoulders I will immediately prepare and put before the county commission plain statement of the facts. I will the chairman of the bond commission. which is largely charged with the success of the sewerage disposal plant, as

The Need of Highway Statistics.

Much valuable work has been done, notably by the United States Bureau of Roads and by the American Association for Highway Improvement, in the gathering of statistics on the mileage of improved and unimproved public roads. We are thus able to determine in a fairly accurate way the general progress of most of the States in highway improvement. But there is manifest need of records that will be more complete and detailed in order that the task of road building in each locality and in the nation as a whole may be reduced to a more definite and businesslike basis. The Chattanooga News seasonably remarks in this connection that:

"There must be a careful classification of roads, according to condition, construction and maintenance costs, material used, horse-drawn and motor traffic, heavy and light hauling, relation to population and trade. This work would expand naturally into a history of roads and roadmaking in America and ft would offer invaluable suggestions to future roadmakers. Each State should undertake this work at once and the United States Bureau of Good Roads could lend invaluable assistance by mapping out a plan of the census and perhaps by making a model census in a restricted area. The automobile clubs and associations could do a service whose value to the community could not be overestimated if they should undertake to make this road survey. in co-operation with the Bureau of Good Roads and the State highway commissioners, or other officials designated by the Governor. They would be helping themselves and would find the work agreeable and instructive, as well as publicspirited."

Work such as this clearly requires the service of a State highway commission or some kindred agency; and here we may observe for the thousandth or, perhaps, ten-thousandth time that Georgia is utterly lacking in facilities of this kind. We have no provision whatsoever for compiling roadway statistics. We know in a general way that much good work is being done in the individual counties but the counties themselves have little means of learning precisely what is being accomplished within their own borders, much less by their neighbors. The money and labor Georgia is spending on roads will never yield due results until we have some system of State highway supervision.

With money to move the crops the per capita circulation can take care of itself.

Thaw couldn't expect New England to be very hospitable toward a mere Pittsburger.

The Lesson of Kansas.

Kansas seems at length to have found a precious jewel in its adversity. The recent drought has kindled a popular realization of the dire need of a permanent, dependable water supply. The State has suffered bitterly but if its ordeal leads to practical measures against another such disaster, the value of its lesson will far outweigh the cost,

Men will never become independent of nature but they are continually learning how to utilize nature, so that sun and rain and wind instead of being the capricious tyrants they once were are made joint laborers in human tasks. Providence has stepped down from the sky and in the role of scientist or engineer is working in the homelfest ways its wonders to perform. Such an experience as Kansas has just emerged from is not considered as an inscrutable visitation to which poor mortals must be meekly resigned but as a work-a-day problem which should be and can be solved by energy and foresight.

The people of that rich grain-producing State are accordingly casting about for feasible means to protect their crops and other interests against future droughts. They have found, as the 'Kansas City Star says, that they cannot depend upon ordinary wells and ponds for water. "The wells and ponds have a tendency to go dry in dry weather and that is the kind of weather that produces the need for water. Possibly the wells and ponds would answer the purpose if they were of the right sort, but the majority of them are of the wet weather kind. There is water in them when there is plenty of water everywhere else. The city water supplies of a number of cities were constructed on the same plan-the plan of getting plenty of water during wet seasons."

It is estimated that the agricultural loss from the recent drought would more than suffice to provide ery farm and town with a water supply that would proof against prolonged rainless seasons. Whatever the cost, it would be negligible beside desolation which continued neglect of this problem will entail.

Georgia's Increased Corn Acreage: As blithe a bit of news as Georgians have had in many a day is the announcement from the agricultural department that the State's corn acreage for 1913 exceeds that of the preceding year by more than six hundred and seventy-eight thousand acres. The hopeful significance of this record goes further than the farm; it reaches every sphere of industry and commerce and foretells a time of richer prosperity for the people's common inter-

There were cultivated in Georgia last year three million, three hundred and eighty-three thousand and sixty-one acres of corn; this year four million, sixty-one thousand, four hundred and twelve acres have been planted. The difference is not to be reckoned in bushels and dollars alone, though in that respect its importance is far-reaching, but chiefly in the larger ideas and the quickened progress which are thus revealed. Georgia's production of corn when measured by that of the country at large or by her own needs and possibilities is still lamentably small. But the notable and cheering fact is that within a twelvemonth she has moved splendidly forward. Her farmers have caught the message of a new gospel of agriculture and living forth its truth.

The effect of an increased corn acreage on the State's economic welfare can scarcely be overgauged, either in extent or in variety. It has been estimated that Georgia lacks more than thirtyseven million dollars annually or making enough money out of the cotton crop to pay for the food supplies imported from distant quarters. Last year alone our people spent something like a hundred and seventy million dollars for corn, hay, oats, meat and other necessaries that could be raised easily and cheaply at home. This condition of affairs presents a very vital problem. It means that the State is agriculturally dependent whereas by every natural circumstance it should be free and self-sustaining. It means that we buy more than we sell, that we are living far above our income, yet far below our resources. There is but one way out of such a difficulty and that lies in producing at home those great food staples which we now purchase abroad.

The production of corn is especially needful because this product is the basis of many activities that must be fostered before the State attains its due measure of thrift and self reliance. Until Georgia raises an adequate supply of corn, oats, hay a 1 forage, she can offer but scant encouragement to the livestock industry which, as everyone realizes, must be developed. We are now short soms forty-eight million dollars worth of corn each yea with comparatively few animals to feed. What a great increase, then must here be in the production of corn, if stock raising is to have a chance! The State of Iowa whose area is about the same as Georgia's and whose soil and climate are no more advantageous than ours, if as much so, is producing an average of thirty-six bushels of corn to the acre and at the same time is selling annually two hundred million dollars worth of animal products.

Evidently, therefore, upon an increase in Georgia's corn yield depends the progress of divers other enterprises that will add to the State's wealth, reduce the cost of living, develop our natural resources and usher in a new era of freedom and prosperity. Hence the announcement that some six hundred and seventy-eight thousand more acres of corn are under cultivation this year than last is one of extraordinary significance. It indicates a breaking-away from the old tyranny of the one-crop iftea. It assures us that the farmer is realizing the cost and folly of staking his all upon cotton and is turning more largely to the home production of food

Credit for this new and better tendency is due largely to the work of the Boys' Corn Clubs. It is to those young and valiant crusaders and to our State system of agricultural education that we must give thanks for the constructive changes that are coming to pass.

Indications are that the price of cotton will permit the farmer to meet the high cost of living and invest in an automobile, too.

In saying that Wilson lacks the support of the American people, President Huerta disagrees with some ninety million or so Americans.

Many a man has collected the money on the supposition that he possessed good judgment, when, as a matter of fact, he merely made a good guess,

Wouldn't you say it was the rain pattering on the roof or tinkling on the pavement, or running the full range of chords in the grass and leaves?

There is "the still, sad music of humanity." There is "music that gentlier falls than petals from blown roses on the grass"-than "tired eyelids upon tired eyes." There are the unheard melodies of pasteral pipers upon Grecian urns. The voice of the mother singing to the baby is more beautiful than these. And there are anthems, sung by full choruses in resonant cathedrals.

Still you would give your choice to the music of the rain. It lulis the fretful baby and the weary mother, too. It harmonizes the waking moment with the moment of sleep. It joins child and mother and man, and birds and beasts and the tiny inhabitants of the grass, and the grass and the trees, and country and town, in one great Te Deum in one great cathedral .- Kansas City Star.

OUR DAILY BREAD IX.-YEAST AND LEAVEN.

By Frederic J. Haskin

found in the air we breathe. Set a dish of crushed

Yeast is literally as old as the world itself. It is fruit in the open air. Although it be originally free from yeast, in a short time alcoholic fermentation, which can be caused only by yeast germs, will begin. This yeast, found in the air, is the wild yeast from which all other yeasts are cultivated. The Egyptians doubtless were the first people to cultivate yeast, if hot to produce leavened or raised bread. They secured a bit of live wild yeast by the fermentation of some vegetable body, either fruit or grain, and set it in dough. A portion of this dough was then saved from one baking to another, constituting the "leaven which leavened the whole" referred to in the Scripture. Some loaves of bread baked over 4,000 years ago have been found in Egyptian tombs and subjected to microscopic examination. The yeast germs were found plainly visi-

The continuation of yeast by saving a portion of the sponge from one paking to another was known to every American housewife of the past generation. The patent yeasts, some of which are so perfect in their chemical parts, are a modern development. Some housewives still use the wet or potato yeast, also known as "sots," which is made simply by taking a little of the prepared liquor, consisting principally of potato to which yeast has been added, and permitting it to ferment sufficiently to be used to start the sponge for the bread. "Sots' is a form of yeast especially in favor among Pennsylvania housewives of German extraction, and it was not unusual for a woman to preserve her "sots" from one baking day to another without a single break for a quarter of a century. A mother gave a "starter" to her daughter when she married, and the daughter each week boiled the potatoes for a fresh output until she, too, was ready to pass over her "sots" to her own daughter.

... Another form of yeast familiar to the old housewife, especially in New England, is the "dry rising," which was started either from some yeast or from a small quantity of "dry rising" of the same kind. To make this yeast a small amount of flour was scalded by a strong tea made from hops. Cold water added to make it lukewarm and enough additional flour to make a batter similar to the sponge used in baking bread. This was kept in a warm place until it had acquired the necessary amount of fermentation and sufficient corn meal added to make a sort of stiff dough. This was molded by hand into little cakes an inch or more in diameter. These were spread out to dry in some fairly warm place where there was a good circulation of air and no dampness. When properly made "dry rising," sometimes known as hop yeast, will keep for months. One or two cakes are sufficient for a family baking. Before the advent of the compressed yeast in the grocery store many a woman was able to make a liberal allowance of pin money by making "dry rising" for her neighbors.

Modern science has made it possible for the large yeast manufacturer to know absolutely the quality of his yeast because by microscopic and chemical test he is able to ascertain its exact condition. Compressed yeast is now made into small air-proof and dampproof packages and sent by fast express even to remote villages. It is the development of the modern yeast factory as well as the improved quality of flour which has made possible the perfection of the modern loaf of bread.

A large yeast plant is full of surprises to the average visitor who looks upon yeast as a small matter. A track at one side of an immense building furnishes accommodation for the cars laden with corn, barley and malt, which form the basis of the yeast process. his grain must be of the highest quality and is raised to the storage room at the top of the building by means of grain elevators similar to those in use in mills. It is submitted to the closest scientific tests before being placed in the crusher where it is thoroughly macerated. Distilled water is added to the grain, together with the yeast germs needed to start the fermentation. The mash is kept in huge tanks, having a capacity of hundreds of barrels, at an evenly regulated temperature until the fermentation process is completed. This is determined by the gauge along the side of the tanks which are of copper and built in tiers of carefully reinforced metal. A register inside of the tank indicates the height of the coffeecolored mixture caused by the fermentation of the grain and water. When the fermentation has reached the proper point by scientific test the liquid, which resembles a quantity of frothy beer, is drawn off, leaving the bulky portion of the grain. This grain is dried and shipped away for cattle food. . . .

The beer-like liquid is drawn into another tank and submitted to another fermentation, after which all the solids are extracted from it. These form the yeast used by the baker. This yeast goes through several processes by which all excess moisture is squeezed out by elaborate machinery and great masses of it are sent to the molding room to be molded into blocks. This yeast is a creamy, gray substance resembling stiff putty in appearance. The molding room is kept at a low temperature by a liberal use of ice, to supply which requires the product of a good sized ice plant connected with the yeast factory. A thoroughly equipped chemical laboratory and a staff of expert chemists are a necessary part of the yeast plant equipment, and the different rooms in which the processes of yeast making take place are kept at an absolutely even temperature for each separate process. For fermentation a blood heat is desirable. After this has taken place and the yeast germs have been extracted, the concluding process of molding and boxing for shipment must be done in a cool room kept absolutely chilled by a requisite refrigerating system. . . .

.The by-products of a yeast factory are worthy of attention. In addition to the utilization of the grain for cattle food, the liquid remaining after the extraction of the yeast germs is also of value. The fermentation process has developed a considerable quantity of alcohol which is secured by passing it through the separator. After the alcohol has been taken out it goes through another process which turns it into a white vinegar.

. . . The utmost care is observed throughout the whole process of yeast making. The grain and water are weighed with as much care as the ingredients used in bread making. The machinery is most intricate, calling into play a number of powerful engines to supply the power for keeping the liquid in motion during fermentation.

. . . The qualities of the bread depends absolutely upon the yeast. The best kind of flour will not produce good bread if it does not have proper yeast to raise it, while with good yeast and a little care even a poor grade of flour frequently can be made to produce a fair quality of bread. When yeast made in the scientific yeast factory can be supplied by the grocer for a couple of cents, few women make their own yeast,

Most bakers now depend upon the manufactured yeast also. It comes to them perfectly fresh each day and saves much labor and anxiety in the bakery. Careful tests have proved that a single pound of yeast made in this manner is capable of raising 400 pounds of dough, and the economy of having such concentrated strength appeals to the average progressive bread maker. The scientific exactness which has been secured in the development of yeast making is indicated by the statement recently made that 3,135.941,500 yeast cells are required to properly raise a single pound of flour, and that a yound of the yeast secured by extracting the germs from the liquid contains 611,720,-0.4,000 cells.

The Handwriting on the Wall BY DE. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

New York, the greatest state in the union, is writing history these days in big red letters, as lurid as those that appeared on the wall of the banqueting room of the king of Babylon. The monarch and his soothsayers could not read them then. The people of the United States cannot read now the meaning of the bloody inscription.

It means this experiment of popular government in the New World is doomed to increasing sname and scandal, and eventually to complete breakdown, if we cannot devise some other way of political action than by political parties.

There is another way. It is to believe in democracy in our hearts and not only by our lips; to train our children in the schools in the art of selfgovernment; to arouse the civic conscience so that all men and women will be shamed into active participation in politics; to organize each local community as human beings got together for the common cause of honest government; and to abandon the humbug and claptrap of the Republican, Democratic, Progressive, Socialist and other parties.

The party idea in olitics is as destructive to the idea of any real democracy as sectarianism is destructive to any idea of real religion. At present we witness a dirty, sickening spectacle in the capital city of New York. A governor has refused to obey the organization that controls his party. He is being politically assassinated by all the methods of blackmail as ruthlessly as the Medici or the Borgias of Italy put their enemies out of the way.

In all this tragedy the People have little interest except as spectators. They never chose Sulzer; he was put in office by an organization which has entire control of the system of nomination and election.

The legislators at Albany are not the representatives of the People. They are the creatures of political organization whose power lies in bamboozling the People, whose opportunity is found only in the ignorance, indifference and absenteeism of the People.

Therefore the whole imbroguo is, to the People, but a quarrel of angry beach combers over the wreckage of the state, the ! :kings and tearings of hungry coyotes over the carcass of popular government.

Whichever way it turns out makes little difference. Tammany Murphy or Republican Barnes is no more to the People than a feudal baron was to his villians. In both cases the governing power was obtained by men strong and unscrupulous enough to dominate a People too stupid to understand how to govern themselves.

So long as the People despise the very principles upon which this government rests-to wit, an active interest in public allairs by every citizen; so long as they bring up their children in mediaevally monarchic public schools where their own initiative is persistently suppressed; so long as they condemn politics, avoid their public parties and leave government in the hands of political parties and their secret supporters, the massed wealth of those who fatten on privilege; so long as the People will not realize that 'eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and eternal activity, interest, and energy the price of any real "government by the People, of the People, and for the People"-just so long will such handwritings as those now blazing at Albany be seen upon the walls.

"And this is the writing that was written: Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin. This is the interpretation of the thing-Mene: God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it.

"Tekel: Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. "Peres: Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Political Grafter on the one hand, and the criminal rich and the criminal poor on the other!" Any other than a government by the People is a government by Criminals.

Why Women Tire of Staying at Home

(Youth's Companion.)

A man goes home tired from his day's work and wonders why his wife wants to go somewhere in the evening. "Why go out?" he says. "You must dress up, and put on airs and manners, and talk dreary nothings to those who talk dreary nothings back to you. Here is a delightful home to take your ease in, a cheerful fire, an uncut magazine, a drowsy armchair. Why go out?"

The man does not stop to think that the woman has worked all day to make the home delightful, has laid the fire, has dusted the armchair, besides doing a thousand other things to enable him to enjoy his uncut magazine in slumerous peace. She likes a quiet evening, too, but occasionally she likes something else.

"Women haven't the home feeling," says Jones to Robinson. "Why, when I take a vacation, I want nothing better than to stay right at home, with the children, and potter around the place. I hoe a little, I carpenter a little-there are always a lot of odd jobs waiting.

"The two weeks are over before I know it. But Mary, she's different. She likes to pack her trunk and go to one of those summer hotels where you wear your best clothes and talk all day." And Robinson agrees that women haven't the home feeling.

No home feeling! To a true married woman home is indeed her world. But it is a world of care as well as a world of happiness. She never returns to it with the infinite sense of relaxation that her husband feels. No matter how tired she is, there is, from the minute she unlocks the door, something to attend to, something on her mind. What wonder is it that she wants to roam a little, if only for the pleasure of coming

The next time your wife asks you to take her out for an evening, do not grumble, but consider how you would like it if, after you had done a hard day's work, she came into your office at 5 o'clock and suggested your passing the evening there with a magazine or two. A woman's home is her place of business.

OH, FOR A LODGE IN SOME VAST WILDERNESS!

We should like to read a scientific article on the psychology of noises. Why some noises seem personal and tend to distract; and why others bother not at all. The riveting racket seems particularly malicious; and, familiar as it is, what with five scrapers built in four years in a periphery of half a mile, it seems terrible and new and mocking each time.

One thinks of an answer to a conundrum, however. Fix up the question yourself. One is as right as a trivet and the other is as trite as a rivet.

THE DIARY OF OUR OWN SAMUEL PEPYS.

August 15 .- To the tennis-court and played with Mistress Alice and then into the smooth lake and to Mistress Florence's for luncheon and riding in her petroleum-waggon and then Tom and I did carry my wife's trunk to the toat and so we to the steam-train and early to-bed, and I did sleep well, despite traveling through the mountains, nor did awake until I came to Yonkers.

16 .- Up early and home for breakfast where I did get some of Lena's coffee, the first in a seven-night. To my office and read all my letters, very many and very cheering to get, too, and thence to the ballpark with J. Wise and I wagered f2 the Pittsburgs would prevail over the Giants, which they did, and I glad of it. In the evening to the playhouse to see Mr. Glass's play "Potash & Perlmutter" and liked it hugely, in especiall Mr. Barney Barnard. And I saw Mary Caroline Glass, too, looking the prettiest I have seen her and very proud, too, but knowing not whether she was prouder of her husband or her new child, James. To a place where we had a mixture of lemon-squash and ginger-beer, and I saw there Mistress Joan Seymour, dancing beautifully, and she has, I think, as fair a face as any ever I saw, save one.

17 .- Lay late and finished May Sinclair's "The Combined Maze" and liked it greatly as I do all her work, it being done with great art. Came then Mistress Edna Aug and we had supper and much diverting discourse and her I found to have a keen and searching mind, besides a merry wit.

On this lovely August morning, when the office temperature is fahrenheiting scandalous and the riveters are shredding one's nerves, it is a sweetly column thought that in 1852 Mr. Wilson, 216 Bowery, had for sale "Cutlery, Hardware, English and American Britannia Ware, Tin Ware, German Silver Ware, Wooden Ware, Brushes, Dining and Desert Knives and Forks, Cooks' Butchers' and Bread Knives, Sussors, Shears, Pocket and Pen Knives Trays, Lamps, Candlesticks, Hammers, Hatchets, Axes. Pots, Kettles, Pans, Stair, Rods, Stair rod Eyes, Shovels, Spades, Coffee, Tea and Water Pots, Sugar and Cream, Table and Tea Spoons, Soup and Gravy Ladles, Pitchers, Goblets, Cups, Casters, Lamps, Candlesticks German Silver Goods, Spoons, Butter Knives, Sugar Tongs, Snuffers, Trays, Spittoons, Lamps, Candlesticks, Match Boxes, Summer Ovens, including Basins, Pots, Pans, Boxes, Lanterns, Brushes for Windows, Floor, Clothes, Hair, or Teeth, Wash Tubes, Boards, Bowls, Pails, Boxes and Step Ladders."

Mr. Wilson is dead and the shop is no more. Wherefor we are sorrowful. We wanted to know whether he used to sell collenders.

All the Presidential News from Cornish.

Sir: Considering what Congress is doing to the tariff and what the newspapers are doing to Mexico, I am acting on the rumor current in Cornish that the President will not enjoy his summer till fall and am asking you for another leave of absence. In fact I have already taken it, and am in Saybrook, Conn. I might report from here that I overheard some children, who had been finding little crabs on the beach, compete in naming their captives. "Betty," "Tom," "Cinderella," "Hop-o'-My-Thumb," "Fido," came the voices, and then finally, in the youngest, proudest treble of all-"Votes for Women." I had to interfere, however, and ask that the name be altered to "Anti-Suffrage," explaining that otherwise the little crab would be most uncomfortable. For how could "Votes for Women" walk backward? The children answered "How!" Yours off and on the job,

Here's News that Will Make Interesting Reading For Women

Nainsook Gowns That Were 600 Until Now $1, $1.50 & $1.75, Are

Prepare to buy them in twos and threes and half dozens. You will, once you see how fine they are (it does not take a woman's eye long to catch the real value that lies in such an offering as this).

They are, every one of them, taken from our own stocks, which means they had to be worth their former prices before they could enter.

The nainsook is smoothly woven and light and free from all filling.

The laces, Valenciennes, Cluny and Shadow, are those neat and dainty patterns that women of good taste instinctively prefer, and so with the Swiss embroideries that form yokes, that are oddly placed in sleeves. Slip-over style, Empire style, both variously charming. We warrant you haven't known such gowns before at 69c.

Frank the Final Witness Put on Stand By Defense; Denies Improper Conduct

State, in Rebuttal, Puts Up City Fireman W. C. Dobbs, Who Swears That Motorman Matthews, Three Days After the Tragedy, Told Him That Mary Phagan Rode to Town With George Epps and Got Off Car at Marietta and Forsyth Streets

The introduction of evidence in the Frank trial was concluded just before court adjourned Wednesday afternoon-the twenty-fourth day that the trial has been in progress. The state, after putting up many rebuttal witnesses, announced "closed" at 4:45 o'clock, and the defense made the same announcement at 5:15 o'clock, following the examination of several sur-rebuttal witnesses. The defense closed with the defendant on the

Frank declared that Will Turner, the sixteen-year-old boy, who swore he saw the defendant talking with Mary Phagan in the factory last March and that the girl was backing away at the time, had testified falsely. He also branded as absolutely false the testimony of the young women who swore that they had seen Frank going into a dressing room with Miss Rebacca Carson, the pencil factory forelady, Frank told the jury that Miss Carson was a young woman with an unblemished reputation. As the defendant stepped from the stand and his attorneys announced that the defense had closed, Mrs. Frank, the defendant's young wife, wept softly.

With the exception of Frank's second brief statement the defense introduced but five sur-rebuttal witnesses, J. M. Asher, N. E. Starr, I. Y. Brent and Miss C. S. Haas, all testified that they had overheard George Kendley, the street car man, attacking Frank and expressing the opinion that he was guilty and ought to be hung. Kendley was the witness who swore that he saw Mary Phagan on Forsyth street, at Alabama, at about 12:05 on April 26.

Nathan Sinkovitz, a pawnbroker, swore that M. E. McCoy had pawned his watch with him at intervals during the last two years and that it was in pawn on April 26. McCoy on Tuesday testified that he had seen Mary Phagan on Forsyth street about 12 o'clock, April 26, and that he knew the time because a few minutes prior to that time he had Oxel Tillander and E. K. Graham, who went to the pencil factory on the morning of the 26th, testified they saw a negro sitting at the foot of the staircase and that he directed them to Frank's office. They couldn't identify Conley as the negro, but said he was about the same size.

JULIAN MURPHEY-

The talk of the formation of another baseball league in southern territory is not meeting with as much comment as one would naturally expect. And all from the fact that fandom has not yet taken the matter seriously, believing it is all talk rather than a rea move to organize a circuit.

Apparently one of the greatest mistakes made by the fans who started out to incorporate the new circuit was that they entered the scheme blindly. They did not investigate baseball laws to find out that to form a baseball league within a certain radius of another league without permission from the league holding first title to the ground would constitute an outlaw organization. It was not the intention of the organizers to form an outlaw circuit and yet that 15 just what has been started.

MANY WILL BACK OUT.

Many of the organizers of the new league, or rather the names used in the numerous applications for charters, went into the plan of organization without any real idea as to just what it meant. They probably thought the league would be placed on the same footing as the Southern and upon finding out the case is different there are those who are pulling out, one of the Nashville directors being the latest to announce that he will quit in case the Southern league does not give its full consent to the placing of Dixie league clubs in its terri-

Though the announcement that the Dixie circuit was being formed was made only two or three days ago the Southern league officials have already come out strongly against any such move. President W. M. Kavanaugh has announced in no weak terms that he is strong against any such move, making it a sure bet that the Dixle will have to be an outlaw organization .-

ATLANTA CLUB OPPOSED.

Here in Atlanta there isn't a chance for the Southern league team to give its permission for the entrance of another club. Continuous baseball will not go here and President Frank Callaway is strongly opposed to the entrance of another team. In fact he will not permit any other organized league to enter Atlanta.

Personally it does not look as if an outlaw league in this section can prosper. Southern league baseball is mighty fast and interesting and yet with this advantage many of the clubs fail to make any money and at that have baseball only half the season. With an inferior class of ball, which is sure to be given by the outlaws, there isn't a chance for it to be a paying proposition. Outlaw baseball has never succeeded anywhere and this case will hardly be an exception.

In the first place the outlaw leagues have no place from which to draw material. They have to content themselves with players who have served their time in all organized leagues and you know when a ball player isn't good enough for some one of the leagues in organized ball he is getting mighty bad and can't compete with the class of players who do duty in the Southern. In fact the plans for the Dixie league look so bad just at present that it appears doubtful whether it will ever stage a game.

SONG OF THE CITIES. Sodom, Babylon, Gomorrah, Nineveh and Tyre-Sorrowful your finish was, But if you should like to see From your ashes take a peep At Cincinnati, O.

There was written, Babylon, On your walls afire; Sadder still your closing out, Nineveh and Tyre; But if you should care to see Fate's most vicious blow, From your ashes take a look At Cincinnati, O.

The Giants have established their third consecutive reign of National league domains. But protecting their ramparts against the assaults of Baker and Collins or Jackson and Lajoie may involve added details and call for another yarn.

THE PHILLY AMBUSCADE.

The Phillies, shooting at the Giants on beyond them, failed to protect their rear defenses. And before they knew what had happened a third entry was in their startled midst, hacking and hewing their gory

By the time they had turned to rep lse the Cubs, the Giants had skipped on beyond their vision. All of which goes to show that before winning a pennant a ball club must be in position to wheel and fire in several given directions. For even the lowly tail-ender has been known to rise up and assegal the leader before said leader knew that a battle

THE MANAGERIAL TEST. Joe Tinker and Frank Chance are last with Reds and Yankees, yet

Frank Chance won four pennants with another club. Where would Tinker have finished leading the old Cubs, or the Athletics?

Johnny Evers has been rated a fizzle as a leader, yet he is out beyond Fred Clarke, rated as one of the greatest of the game, with a ball club picked to win a pennant. What's the answer?

ANOTHER ONE

Also, Mike Mitchell, a frost with the Cubs, is a wonder with the Pirates. Leach, a frost with the Pirates, is a star with the Cubs, leading his league in runs. Fromme, winning one out of four with the Reds, has won eight out of ten with the Giants. McLean, a cast-off from the Reds and Cardinals, helped McGraw brace the Giants and break up a slump. McQuillen, booted from the Phillies, is the leading Pirate twirler above Camnitz, Hendrix and Adams. What's the answer once more?

One suggestion might be environment. There is as much psychology to the game as there is physical and mental. The average athlete is fairly well plugged with temperament, and when this temperament springs a puncture, nothing but a shift will repair the leak.

In addition to those cases mentioned we have an idea that Mathewson, Wagner, Johnson, Cobb and a few others would still be fairly good ball players if set down in the South Sea islands. They, too, have temperament, but not enough to warp their natural stuff.

"All Ping Bodie can do," advances one exchange, "is to hit the ball." Which is that much more than several others can do who are only neck and neck with Ping beyond reach of the bludgeon. "Only hit the ball" covers a multitude of discrepancies.

Wagner, six days in the east, picked up fourteen hits for twentyfour bases, advancing from .290 to .310. He is the same bloke who featured the fanatical war cry to Fred Clarke in Pittsburg: "Hey, why don't you can that big Dutch boob and get some one who can hit the ball?" Which is another answer as to why Pittsburg is no better than

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Sheep and Goats

there is very little attention paid to sheep and goats, but there are thousands of acres of land in Georgia, especial-, ly in the northern part of the state that is naturally well suited to the raising of goats especially, and this land is absolutely unfit for anything else. There are already quite a few people who are in a small way indulging in the goat business in north Georgia and they find it very profitable, especially where they have used Angoras to various crosses. Kid is sold and often used in the place of lamb and there is no reason why it should not be just as good, especially where it is fat. With the world of bushes and grasses that can be had on thousands of acres of north Georgia oak and hickory land in the mountains thousands of pounds of sheep and goat flesh could be raised on these lands if we would pay attention to it. But, the word "goat" seems insignificant and there is a world of people who care to pay but lit-

Goats are prolific breeders and will produce two to four young per year easily, and if these young ones are fat they will easily sell to the butcher at about $2 each. It requires so little feed for them that you can readily see what a big per cent of profit a flock of goats would make for you.

Sheep at one time were bred very extensively in south Georgia and there is quite a number of flocks that are practically wild at present. Quite a few farmers of north Georgia have taken up the breeding of a better quality of sheep and are feeding and taking care of their herds with more interest than ever. It is well that they are doing so because a lamb this year certainly has brought a fine price.

With the thousands of waste acres in north Georgia and in Florida that an immense amount of food could be produced on it does look like the people of these sections would convert these feeds into food through goats, sheep and even cattle. But, how few people are doing so. Cotton seems to be the only thing that attracts any attention nowadays from the farmer. It may be well and there might be a reason for it, but with the present price of food products of all kinds and people begging for them every day it does look like our people would take up the live stock industry even as a side issue and pay more attention to it than we ever have. There are worlds of cheap lands in the mountains and valleys of north Georgia that can be bought for almost a song that would grow the best of sheep and goats, and furnish plenty tender, succulent for them during the entire year and at the end of the year be worth thousands of dollars when as it is now it is not worth a penny.

The sale of wool, also clippings from Angora goats which sells for mohair, always commands a good price, and it really pays a good per cent of profit if you only realize the sale of wool and hair from sheep and goats to keep them, to say nothing of the offspring and what it would be worth. On account of the dogs a great many people have quit keeping sheep, but in Tennessee, Kentucky and many of the states where people are compelled to convert their food products through live stock into money they do not neglect their sheep and goat industry any more than we do our cotton and corn industry. The truth has been that our farmers have made money too easy on the average Georgia farm out of cotton and have paid but little attention to anything else. This is one reason why packing house products and food products of all kinds are selling at such a tremendous price today compared with what they were a few years ago.

Yours very truly,

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED.

Douglas, Ga.: If it is not asking too much of you, would thank you to give me the following information:

I hape a very nice S. C. White Leghrn cockerel in shape and color, in fact is a very ne bird with the exception that he has white in his ear lobes. I bought the eggs that he was hatched from, from a breeder of high class poultry, and he stated that the eggs were fromfi the pens containing some of his very best males. Do you think it would be advisable to breed from him or would you discard him on that one defect? The white in the ear lobes extends a part of the way around the lobes, but does not run through them. I have been breeding this breed of birds a few years, but never had any trouble in this respect before. . Thanking you in advance for T. G. this information, I am

Leghorns should have white ear lobes. It is possible that you mean the bird has some red in his ear lobes which is often the case with Leghorns and especially with afte. Nearly all male birds, and femades after they pass one year old show more or less red in their lobes. When two male birds fight they usually injure the lobes so that the white enamel comes off and will leave it red, and I expect that is the case with your bird. Red in the lobe of a cockerel is considered a defect more so than in a cock bird, and usually in a cockerel in scoring a bird a cut of one to one and a half is usually counted against red in the lobes of a cockerel, but a is good in other respects I would not discard him on account of this slight defect as it does not amount to very
