The Tariff as Viewed Abroad.

The Tariff as Viewed Abroad.

Pleasing confirmation of the friendship that has always existed between France and the United States is seen in the comment of the French foreign office on the new tariff, an expression authorized by the government and conveyed officially to the American ambassador. "You know personally," the statement goes, "what is the feeling and responsible opinion in this country towards yourself, your President and the United States, nothing in the world can prevail significant to the American against it. As regards commercial interest, the new lariff has not produced any ill effect on trade relations between the United States and France. Although the United States sels much more to France than it buys, the exportations from France to the United States have grown by nearly one hundred per cent in the past five years and the imports by sixty per cent. No market is more worthy of attention from the United States than the French market, and this is reciprocal."

This official judgment was expressed in view of adverse criticism of the tariff on the part of particular interests in both countries. It comes as a sharp and sufficient rejoinder to those persons who, ismoving facts and real conditions, would mislead the public into supposing that the revised tariff schedules are commercially harmful.

The important circumstances of the nation's foreign trade were never more wholesome or enouragcommercially harmful. The important circumstances of the nation's for-eign trade were inver more wholesome or encourag-ing. Both experts and imports are steadily increas-ing. Our markets at home and abroad are planted on sound and fertile economic ground. Our trade relations with other countries are undisturbed. American commerce is striding viscorously forward, and American industry, far from being hampered or discouraged by the new tar-ff will gather fresh actength and independence from the fairer and more stimulating conditions which that tariff is bringing to pass.

One thing certain, Huerta can't touch McAdoo for any of that government fund.

That hetchy ketchy business before Congress sounds like one of the new dances.

Blustering Ulster.

As the time for the third and decisive enactment of the Irish Home Rule bill by the House of Commons drawn near, the question as to what rebellious Ulster will do, how far it will venture in its threat of armed resistance and with what success, if any, it will meet, grows more interesting and acute. Efforts to compromise this vexel usus have apparently creased. Premier Asquith's proposal that Ulster be consisted temporarily from the provisions of the Home Rule is no longer urged. The stormy clans of the northway province continue their blustering preparation and leaders of the Conservative party, even so composed a man as Mr. Balfour, are making direful predictions of what may happen in the kingdom untesses the Government receives from its plan to put Home Rule isto effect.

Yet, the Government reemains undisturbed, outwardly at least, and seems determined that its plan shall be carried promptly forward. This trangull assurance of the Liberal ministry is significant; it is pianciactivally that the state of the Liberal ministry is significant; it is pianciactival that it has not form basis. The Premier evidently believes that the Ulster movement is a "quall that will blow quilety over when the telling moment arrives. Certainly, this is the view of many thoughtful observers of the situation. Sydney Brooks, swriting in the November number of the North American Review, interestingly says:

If I am dubious about Sir Edward Carson's "army." I am ten times more so about his scheme for superseding British authority in the name of loyalty to the British Crown. . . . The first consequence of all would be a financial crisis and a panier run on the local bank Lembards. The Belfest banks would raise theirs on the Belfast banks, the Belfest banks would raise theirs on the Belfast banks, the Belfest banks would reside theirs on the Belfast banks, the Belfest banks would reside their right and left. By simply removing its staff from the Belfast banks and whole easied in right and left. By simply removing it rootstant workingmen. The enterprise, in short, would speedily collapse of its own weight and without a single British solder being moved; while as for Utsier's threat to resist Home Rule by the non-payment of taxes, the only way in which that presolution could be enforced would be by Utsier's refusing to import and to manufacture and to smoke and drink.

The Question of Alaska

The Question of Alaska.

The question of how best of twelop and utilize the natural resources of Alaska is one of the most important issues now before Congress, important not only to those sturyl Americans who are braving the rigor and hardship of life in a pioneer land, but also the rank and file of citizons at home. This virgin territory is national treasure; it is the property of the people as a whole and as such no particular groups or special interests should be allowed to monopolite or impair its value. The prime essential of any plant that may be adopted for Alaska's future must be a guarantee of the publics right against private wrong.

must be a guarantee of the poune state.

There is little danger, however, that this need will be overlooded or slighted by the present Coffgress. The issues around which the Ballinger controvers was waged have been settled. As a matter of principle, it has been determined once and for all that this great antional sterebouse shall not be turned over to greedy syndicates for sedish exploitation. The question now is rather one of policy, one of means and methods; and error is more likely to arise in failing to release Alaskia's greatores for free initiative than in failing to protect them against monopolistic schemes.

It cannot be insisted too strongly that conserva tion means vastly more than mere preservation. Forests and mines and water courses must be used

It cannot be insisted too strongs that cousers it ion means vasity more than mere preservation. Forests and mines and water courses must be used conomically and for the common good but never-theless they must be used. The policy that would look them up for all time like a miser's hoard is as unwise and as extreme as that which would suffer them to be pillaged, by a few "piratical financiers. The treasures of Alaska, as President Wilson declared in his recent message, should be unlocked for the fair enterprise of the thousands of Americans who have settled amongst them and for the prosperity of the entire nation. "One key to these resources," be said, "is a system of rallways. These, the Government itself should build and administer, and the ports and, "is a system of rallways. These, the Government itself should build and administer, and the ports and terminals it should itself control in the interest of all who wish to use them for the service and development of the country and its people."

The proposal that the United States build and querate a rallway system will doubless provoke sharp debate. This, we shall be told, is a new policy for our Government. And so it is. But Alaka is a new country, presenting new conditions and new problems. If a Government-owned rallroad is the one safe, sure means of developing its resources and at the same time safe-guarding them in the public's behalf, the mere fact that it happens to be an innovation should not stand in the way of practical, ungestly needed effort. The Kanasa City Star apily remarks in this connection that "a Democratica nation which has constructed the Panama canal, which has made Havana, Colon and all the Canal zone and all Porto Rito beauthrul and cleam—that capable Democracy is not afraid of administering a ploater system of rallways. It does not believe that to own a public of really and the content of the country and public beautiful and celleve that to own a public of the content of the country and the content of the country and the content of the co

It does not believe that to own a public highway that his ratio in it is any pure dangerous han to own a public highway that has ruts in it." There are, its observement railroad in Alaska. It amust be diligently considered in any plan to build and operate a Government railroad in Alaska. There are risks involved which only keen foresight can provide for; but these should not deter the aution from meeting his responsibility and settling a ques-tion that can no longer be justly put aside. Secretary Lane, of the Interior Department, who has given par-ticular thought to the Alaskan problem, has said: "There is but one" was to make any country.

towns, farms. factories and mills, supporting mil-lions of people, the hardlest and most wholesome of the legislation should be such as most surely to bring about this possibility. There is less hazard to Alaska's future if the government of the United States owns the railroads which will make its fertile interior valleys accessible from

The Democratic administra The Democratic administration is firmly commit-ted to the development of this potentially rich terri-tory. Indeed, -if parties are agreed that some de-finite plan of development should be speedly adopted and put late operation. There is good reason, then to hope that in the present session of Congress this long neslected but deeply important question will be satisfactorily answered.

IN WHICH TO COUNT THE CIRCLES. THE ATLANTA JOUR. NAL'S GREAT PUZZLE CONTEST

CLOSES DECEMBER 6TH 100 Cash Prizes : .: .: $2,200 in Gold

THE PROBLEM

The problem is to count the circles. Every circle is complete and intersects or touches one or more other circles. There are no parts of circles or shams or deceptions of any sort in the puzzle. In the event that no one counts the exact number the prizes will be awarded for the nearest correct solutions. Accuracy and patience are the main requisites for arriving at the correct or nearest correct count. Those who display these qualifications to the best advantage will solve the puzzle best.

If Carl Morris and Jess Willard are among the topnothers in beavyweight brigade, the heavyweight brigade is in a peculiarly rough Corbett, Fitzstimmons, Jeffries, etc., until he bumps against lilled and Morris the shock is bound to be terrifie. We used to think tain limits existed as to how far the public would tumble without lap publed. Now we know there are not.

While a brace of stewed prunes as fighters, we still insist that is, Willard, Rodel, etc., are adorned in a way with a certain touch

It's no great trick to go and grab the honey.

As the eager public rushes with its giving:
But it takes a guy with talent to make money
Where he should have been disqualified for living.

You wouldn't believe, for example, that two people weighing 240 pounds each and standing over 6 feet 4 inches above the resin could wing at each other in a 24-foot ring and miss. There wasn't any space left to miss. Yet they both did—thereby performing a stunt that we de't any carcionist to emulate.

The fact that Joe Tinker is willing to go back and work under ley Murphey is sufficient rejoinder to the status of Mr. Herrmann club president. Only it was first answered by Hank O'Day, who the Reds for his old job of umpiring with a whoop of bliss.
